Braswell Winners Named

Story's Twisted, -Teacher

Says She Requested Reasons Made Public

"The last sentence of the Victory Village News article entitled 'Fireworks in Village Nursery Teacher Fired,' written by Dan Wallace, is a misrepresentation of fact," said Mrs. Marjorie Beshers, nursery teacher who was dismissed by the Village board of directors at the beginning of the month.

The sentence which Mrs. Beshers was referring to read, "After the closed meeting ended, Mrs. Beshers refused to have the proceedings of the closed session made public."

Mrs. Beshers said that she "requested that specific reasons for my dismissal be given in open meeting. In reply, the Victory Village board of directors voted to go into closed session."

Mrs. Beshers said that during the session she "declined to sign a statement releasing the board from suit for libel and told the board that if their charges were true, I would have no grounds for suit."

"The board then refused to list specific reasons for my dismissal, which pertained to parent complaints. Neither parent names nor complaints were revealed to me," said the former nursery teacher.

The board then offered to list specifics for publication in The Daily Tar Heel and asked her if she would sign such a list, according to Mrs. Beshers, and she said she would not.

"No written list was presented to me," added Mrs. Beshers. "Mr. Wallace, the author of the column, is a reporter on The Daily Tar Heel and a member of the Victory Village board of directors," concluded Mrs. Beshers.

1919 Yack Was Right: Hodges Made Good

LUTHER H. HODGES
... as a senior at UNC

By ROBERT W. MADRY
Director, UNC News Bureau

"Luke will make good in a big way."

That's one of the things the Yackey-Yack write-up, given every departing senior, said about Luther Hartwell Hodges, North Carolina's new Governor, when he was graduated from UNC with the Class of 1919.

Looking back upon those yesterday's Hodges' professors, classmates and other contemporaries are not surprised that the Rockingham County boy eventually was elevated to the highest political office in the state.

CAME UP THE HARD WAY

Luther Hodges came up the hard way. His father was a hard working Leaksville merchant and did fairly well, but he had a large family, and when it came Luther's turn to enter college, the youngster realized he would have to make his own way. And he did.

His first student aid came in the form of a $70 loan from the late Rev. P. H. Gwynn of Leaksville. With that young Luther was able to pay tuition and other registration fees to enter the University.

His first self-help job, and the one he held for several years along with other assorted jobs... was as dish wiper in Swain Hall, where the majority of the students took their meals.

FIRST SELF-HELP JOB
"He was the fastest dish wiper I ever saw, and I was thrown with many of them in those days," says Leary W. Adams of The Charlotte Observer staff, one of Hodges' fellow students here.

"Even in kitchens you learn a lot about men. You learn who is going to stick to the job, do his part and a little bit more, and (See GOVERNOR, page 4.)

Graham Issues Reprimand:

WC Magazine Staff Quits Over Nude Male's Picture

GREENSBORO...The entire student staff of Woman's College's "Coraddi," undergraduate literary magazine, resigned this week after Chancellor E. K. Graham issued a sharp reprimand for exceeding "the limits of good taste."

The controversy arose over a page-length drawing of a nude male and a short story entitled "Humans, Blades and Faith."

Before the Chancellor's censure, the student Legislature considered a resolution for reprimanding the "Coraddi." However, on the advice of a faculty councilor, the legislature turned down the reprimand motion.

In his verbal whack at the standards of the magazine, Chancellor Graham pointed out that "A wide range of opportunity for the self-expression of the artist is not only recognized but insisted upon by the Woman's College. Nevertheless, art galleries, exhibitions to which people may go on this campus, booklets designed for people who are (or should be) interested in art and comparable places are the right setting for uninhibited realism."

On the other hand the editor of the magazine, Debora Marcus of New York, N. Y. said in her statement of resignation that "good taste in a fine arts magazine is the same as good taste in art, and that anything that is suitable for drawing and writing is suitable for printing or exhibiting."

About Football:

Barclay Has A Philosophy

By ARCHER NEAL

George Barclay is a man who has a philosophy about football which isn't particularly unique, but which is certainly refreshing, coming from a coach. He says it's fine for a boy to play football as long as he comes to school for an education, and not just to play football. He's thankful that the University of North Carolina feels that way about it.

Barclay, who has just completed his second season as head football coach at UNC, has been under fire recently for not having a better season. His record this year has been four wins, five losses and one tie. His first UNC team, in 1953 won four and lost six. Barclay's contract with the University has another year to run. There have been rumors recently to the effect that the contractual relationship between the coach and the University should be severed. As far as Barclay knows, he says that "as far as I'm concerned, nobody said anything to me about the fact that I wasn't the coach. The only thing I heard was what I read in the newspapers and heard over the radio." Nothing has changed in respect to him and the University.

UNC Chancellor Robert B. Healy issued a statement to the fact that "The University desires to disassociate itself emphatically from certain rumors launched in the public press to the effect that the University was seeking to dismiss Mr. Barclay. We have never had a coach more cooperative with the University purposes than Mr. Barclay."

THERE'S PRESSURE
Barclay says "there's pressure on any coach to win, or else: It's one of the evils of coaching. When there's a winner, there has to be a loser. It's the cause of a lot of headaches. When Carolina plays the best teams, as it does, it takes time to build up a team. Games such as Carolina plays are a 50-50 chance. A lot depends on the breaks—football is a game of (See COACH, page 4.)
