

Tar Heels Take Second In ACC With 96-87 Win

Over The Hill

By FRED BABSON

Staunch N. C. State basketball fans were probably hopping mad yesterday morning when the results of the national team ratings as conducted by the United Press came out. The UP poll, a consensus of coaches' opinions, dropped State from third to fourth place, despite its fine 13-1 record and the losses suffered by the top two teams, Kentucky and Duquesne during the past week. These two teams held onto their one, two ratings, respectively; and La Salle moved up to the third spot, the position occupied by State the previous week.

However, the Wolfpack rooters undoubtedly had their ruffled feathers smoothed by the Associated Press ratings, which came out last night. The AP poll lifted State to second place in the standings. Kentucky held onto No. 1, while Duquesne fell to third, and La Salle was fourth.

Carolina would probably be rated among the top 20 teams in the country, but for their disastrous journey into the deep South last week. On the heels of their excellent third place finish in the Dixie Classic, the Tar Heels suffered humiliating defeats at the hands of LSU and Alabama.

Mixed reports came back as to why UNC's showing was so poor on that trip. The two most cogent alibis seem to be that the weather was unusually hot and the Tar Heels were unusually cold.

The locals will have a chance to fatten up their record this week. They meet South Carolina (0-7 in the ACC) Friday and Clemson (0-6 in league play) Saturday. Clemson is sporting one of the conference's top scorers in Bill Yarborough, and is capable of pulling an upset on their home court.

The latest figures on ACC individual scoring show Buzz Wilkinson of Virginia, first, with a 31.2 average; Dickie Hemic of Wake Forest, second, with 29.5; Bill Yarborough of Clemson, third, with 28.8; Lennie Rosenbluth of Carolina fourth with 26.6; and Ronnie Mayer of Duke fifth with 23.1.

The only other UNC player in the top 20 is Jerry Vayda with an average of 14.1, good for fourteenth. Al Lifson's 12.3 average is twenty-first best in the loop.

Meanwhile, a big commotion is stirring to determine for sure if the televising of UNC home games is going to result in drops in attendance at neighboring schools' games. Duke claims they lost 2,000 heads to last Saturday night's State fracas in Durham.

This week's Sporting News All-Sports section, in a story by Harold Rosenthal, fired Carolina football coach George Barclay. The erroneous bit of misinformation in Mr. Rosenthal's story listed Barclay as one of the postseason casualties.

The fact of the matter is that Barclay was given a vote of confidence by the Carolina Athletic Council; his three-year contract, which has one more year to run, was honored.

Duquesne, last week's No. 2 and this week's No. 3 team in the AP poll, dropped another one Monday night, their second in a row. This time it was Dayton by a 68-67 margin. They are saying the Dukies are just another ball club with their All-America, Dick Ricketts, ailing. Ricketts has been bothered by a bad ankle for the past week or so.

Georgia Tech, the team that whipped Kentucky Saturday night on its home court for the first time in 11 years, was beaten by Vanderbilt in its next game, 71-69.

Eleventh ranked Maryland, sporting an 11-2 mark, moved into temporary possession of second place in the ACC with its Monday night, 68-52, victory over South Carolina. The Terps are 7-2 in the conference.

From the time Carolina lost to Alabama (giving UNC a 4-5 record) until the victory over Wake Forest, Tar Heel Coach Frank McGuire was operating below a .500 win-loss mark for the first time in his coaching career.

One of the more important, but rather unnoticed, rules adopted at the NCAA convention last week in New York was the one prohibiting college basketball and football teams from engaging in practice games. A football team is allowed 10 games a season, a basketball team 26. Any so-called practice games will have to count as one of the allotted number hereafter.

Duke Breaks Frosh Win Streak, 83-78

After winning nine straight games, the UNC frosh suffered their first setback of the year last night in Woolen Gym as the Duke freshmen turned them back, 83-78.

The Duke quint, whom the Tar Babies had defeated convincingly earlier in the season in Durham, overcame a 42-39 Carolina half-time lead at 3:50 of the second half, going ahead, 47-46.

The lead changed hands four times in the next three minutes, before Duke went out in front, 51-50, never to be headed after that. The battle remained close except for a point mid-way in the last quarter when the Duke lead was stretched to eight points. Carolina closed the gap to 77-80 with one minute remaining, but two free throws by Duke forward Allen and an effective freeze led the game for the visitors.

UNC forward Pete Brennan poured in 27 points, before fouling out late in the game, to take scoring honors. Newcome led the winners with 22 markers. Carolina center Joe Quigg dumped in 21, and guard Tommy Kearns bucketed 17.

Four Duke players and three Carolina fouled out in the spirited contest.

Athlete Of The Week:

Krepp Breaks ACC Record In 200 Yard

Charlie Krepp, sophomore star of the Blue Dolphins, has been selected "Athlete of the Week" by the Tar Heel sports staff.

Krepp, who holds the ACC record for the 200 yard backstroke, with a time of 2:09.4 for the distance, along with pool records for that distance at UNC and Virginia, is a native of Baltimore, Maryland.

After a successful season as a freshman, Charley moved on the varsity at the beginning of this season, and immediately showed his potential as a swimming star. Previous to the South Carolina meet, in which his 200 yard backstroke mark was officially accepted as an ACC record, he had already cracked that mark in practice.

Krepp first began swimming at the age of 13, and later became a varsity swimmer at Baltimore City College, where he attended high school. City College is the alma mater of such swimming greats as Jesse Grenbaum and Jimmy Thomas, with Thomas being recognized for a time as the best backstroke artist in the world. Along with his individual records in the backstroke, Krepp aided the 300 yard medley team when they posted a new ACC mark of 2:47.8 for the distance.

Krepp has yet to be beaten as a varsity swimmer and a 300 yard medley team on which he swam as a varsity member has not been defeated.

Charlie is 18 years old, and looks toward Business Administration as his major, with plans to go into that field after his graduation in 1957.

Rosenbluth, Radovich, UVa's Wilkinson All Break 30 Mark Injured Hand; Radovich Has 66.6 Accuracy

Lennie Rosenbluth scored 32 points and Tony Radovich dumped in 30 to pace a second-half drive which gave Carolina a 96-87 Atlantic Coast Conference victory over the University of Virginia last night in Woolen Gym before 4,000 fans.

Buzz Wilkinson, the Cavaliers' scoring ace, took honors for the night with 33 markers.

Rosenbluth, the sophomore flash who sported a 26.6 average going into the contest, also equalled his own school rebounding record of 23, accomplishing this with a cut thumb. Monday night he accidentally shoved his hand through a glass pane.

Radovich, vastly improved since his early season performances, was the surprise of the night. He tallied only eight points in the first half, but came through with 25 in the second to spark the Tar Heels.

Radovich was directly responsible for Carolina gaining the lead with two seconds to go at the end of the first half when he broke a one-minute UNC freeze with a hook under the basket. Thirty seconds after intermission he connected again to give the Tar Heels a lead which was threatened but never overcome.

For the second consecutive game Radovich came through with a "fini" basket in the closing seconds. With time running out, Rosenbluth fired a long pass to Bob Young (14 points), who hooked behind his back to Radovich under the basket. Tony dropped it through and that was the contest.

UNC had to battle all the way for the victory which put the team in second place in the ACC standings with a 4-1 conference record.

The Tar Heels gained possession and froze the ball to set the stage for Radovich's bucket. Tony, incidentally, tallied on 14 out of 21 shots for a 66.6 field goal average.

After Carolina gained the upper hand in the second half, the Cavaliers caught five too but were unable to put out their opponents' blaze. They drew to within three points of Carolina with 10 minutes remaining.
