State Introduces Bills To Revamp Courts, Milk Prices

RALEIGH, Feb. 4 (P)—Bills to give the State Milk Commission power to fix minimum wholesale and retail milk prices and to change the state's superior court setup were tossed in legislative hoppers today.

Sen. Ralph Scott of Alamance, a dairyman and brother of the former governor and U. S. Senator, introduced the milk pricing measure which has the backing of most of the state's farm organizations.

Rep. J. Paul Wallace, of Montgomery, Scott, who introduced the bill to give the milk commission power to fix minimum retail and wholesale prices, sponsored the bill in the 1953 Legislature which created the State Milk Commission.

However, the 1953 assembly struck out the retail and wholesale price fixing provision. This left the commission with the power to fix only the prices the producer gets for his milk.

They are Charles Topping, sophomore fullback of Littleton who was being counted on to fill the fullback vacancy when Nick Maravic graduated; Ernest Fitzgibbons, 215-pound tackle of Munnhall, Pa., and Leo Ward, sophomore halfback of Fayetteville. They were not allowed to register for the second semester yesterday.

However, it has since become the custom to call all North Carolina athletic teams by the nickname "Tar Heels."

TOP OLYMPIC PROSPECT
University of North Carolina wrestling coach Sam Barnes barely missed making the U. S. Olympic wrestling team twice while competing on the Oklahoma A & M team. He was eliminated in the quarter-finals once and in the semifinals the following year.
