Solon Hits Douglas' Statement

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11 (AP)—The House heard a ringing defense of the Southland yesterday as Rep. Rivers (D-SC) shouted a denunciation of actor Paul Douglas.

Rivers said the Philadelphia-born Douglas, star of a traveling troupe of the "Caine Mutiny Court-Martial," had thought "intemperate" and "untrue" words about the South causing the disbanding of the company at Greensboro, N.C.

At that time 70 percent of the company's appearances remained "to take place in the land of fable, song, tradition, hospitality and prosperity, known as the South," the white-haired Rivers said in a House speech.

Rivers did not specify what Douglas remarks he was objecting to, except to say that "Douglas was schooled in his dislike for my land and my people."

He said the remaining performances of the road show has been cancelled because Southerners, offended by Douglas' statements, were staying away from the box office.

Rain, Rain, Rain

The deluge which drenched the campus yesterday morning and early afternoon was caused by a "strong cold front" which passed over the area, said a spokesman of the U. S. Weather Bureau at the Raleigh-Durham Airport yesterday.

Today, the spokesman said, a cold air mass will cover the area, with an expected high 30.

Who's Got Pan-American Key? Profs & Students, Says Grad

By ED MYERS

Alfredo Casey, a former UNC student from Argentina and presently touring American universities, says "Students, professors and writers, not 'big-shot' businessmen, hold the key to better North-South American relationship."

Casey, who is here under the auspices of the U. S. State Department, will speak to the Cosmopolitan Club tomorrow afternoon at 4:30. The illustrated lecture on Argentina is one of many he is to give while touring the United States.

Casey, who was a grant-student here in 1949 and '50, believes that there should be more such grants given to foreign students.

"Argentina is, at present, planning a program for giving aid to American students who wish to study there," said the lawyer-writer. "Much misunderstanding has developed between the two nations (U. S. and Argentina), mainly because of big businessmen interested only in matters of material wealth."

"Argentina, the largest country in South America, and The United States, largest in North America, are countries which must understand and get along with one another. And the only way to do this effectively is by exchanging students and culture-minded people so that by talking to those who we don't fully understand, many problems will be cleared up."

CULTURE IS PROMINENT
Casey pointed out that culture and aesthetics hold a prominent position in the life of the average Argentinian.

"Argentina is the only South American country that stands up and demands equality," he said.

"There are three main principles upon which we base our future: political sovereignty, social justice and economic independence."

One of Casey's jobs (which he prefers to call a hobby) is translating American literature for Spanish-speaking South Americans. His first book was "Two centuries of American Literature. The second, History of American Literature, will be on the market in May."

Many Argentine students have studied here and University professors have studied and lectured in Argentina. Gilbert Chase, a graduate of UNC, is presently cultural attaché for the US Embassy in Argentina.

"How can 'big shots' see things down there when they are blind in their own country?" Casey asked.

"Send students."

Can Cut All He Wants:

Gray's Back In Class; Just Auditing, Though

By ARCHER NEAL

Gordon Gray has gone back to the classroom. After 25 years the president of the University has again assumed the role of a student.

He's auditing a course in general psychology under Dr. Norman Garnezy, a visiting professor from Duke University.

Gray says he "finds it interesting and stimulating. I'm pleased to have this kind of association with students."

The UNC president majored in psychology as an undergraduate, and was an honor student. A lot of things have happened in the science since he was a student; and, as he puts it, "There are a lot of facts that I have forgotten." Gray has been asked by the Psychology Department to consider teaching a course next year, and it is in connection with this request that he's auditing the course.

It's probably a good thing that he's just auditing the course, for with the new cut system in effect he might be "dropped from the course with a grade of 'F'" for missing classes. Needless to say, the president is a busy man, and can't be in class every time it meets. He's already missed a couple of them.

Gray sits unobtrusively at the back of the classroom, quietly taking notes. It's a rather large class, and the students don't seem to take any notice of him. Instructor Garnezy says "he's a good listener," and finds it enjoyable to have him in class. The professor says "His presence makes me improve the quality of my jokes, if not the quantity," and added, "he laughs at them. I find it stimulating to have him. Every instructor ought to have a college president in his class."

One of Gray's fellow students remarked that he was "rather surprised to have him in the class," and was interested to know of Gray's interest in psychology. Another summed it up simply, "We all gotta get an education somehow."

Official Says Solons' Bill Would Cause More School Days

Possibility Of Two Free Days, Though

Roundup: The Debate Came Over DTH Bill

By NEIL BASS

"The provision of two class-free Saturdays each semester may mean that additional days will have to be added to the spring term," was the reply that Roy Holsten, assistant dean of student affairs, gave yesterday to an inquiry regarding the passage of a resolution by the student Legislature calling for such holidays.

"There is, however, a possibility that the two holidays may be squeezed into the curriculum of the spring semester without involving more days being added to the total," he added. Holsten was the only University official who could be reached for comment.

Holsten said that he was encouraging the administration's Calendar Committee, the body working on the idea, to "give the proposal serious consideration and to work out the best solution possible. There are numerous factors which figure into the establishment of holidays, including the fact that the University has a certain quota of class days to meet," he said.

Holsten said "the whole matter is simply the fitting of an available date into our calendar."

The original resolution passed by the solons, with no opposition, had an amendment tacked on to it which said that "A report will be given back to the Legislature within two weeks after its passage." In this manner, the group called for quick action on the proposal by the administration.

Duke Professor To Talk On U. S. Foreign Policy

Professor Ralph Braibanti of Duke University will speak on problems of American foreign policy in the Far East at an open meeting of the political science fraternity, Pi Sigma Alpha, next Thursday evening at 8:30 o'clock in the Library assembly room.

The student Legislature ran through all bills and resolutions in its two and a half hour long assembly Thursday night with no debate, except for the bill which wanted "a bi-partisan board to select candidates for the editorships of The Daily Tar Heel and the Yackety Yack created." This was surprising in that the Student Party rammed through three of the planks out of an original four in its platform without a University Party man cracking a word of dissent.

But when the session got around to voting on the big bill that the UP wanted to see slide through, the bi-partisan board bill, a continuous stream of SP and UP solons assumed and left the rostrum for a full hour and a half. During the course of this debate, only one SP man joined sides with the UP on the issue, and that was Tom Lambeth.

As far as the speech that Tom Creasy gave to the group is concerned, the Legislators apparently received it favorably for when the student body president ended, he got a standing ovation.

The address by Creasy hit hard on a subject close to all students, and that is the matter of class cuts. He said "the faculty just isn't together on this idea of three cuts limitation. They, or some of them, have told me that they resent being turned into clerks which must devote a lot of time to keeping up with excuses."

Regarding the decision which decides on the legitimacy of various types of excuses, Creasy said that "the faculty can't decide which are the proper excuses and which are not. They have been haggling for some time on whether or not it is all right to excuse a student to go to a wedding."
