House For Warrantless Arrest

RALEIGH, Feb. 15 (AP)—While the Senate received a bill to provide collection of state income taxes through payroll deductions, the House today passed a measure giving officers authority to arrest without warrants in misdemeanor cases.

Shaw, who had suggested it earlier, has estimated it would boost collections by more than two million dollars yearly. A long wrangle preceded House passage of the bill authorizing misdemeanor arrests without warrants. Three amendments were offered and tabled before it was passed.

Sen. David M. Hall of Jackson and seven other senators introduced the "pay-as-you-go" income tax collection proposal. Revenue Commissioner Eugene

REALIGNMENT

Other highlights of legislative action included a hearing on a bill to realign and increase the number of judicial districts to provide additional Superior Court judges. A group of Eastern North Carolina lawyers raised objections to the measure prepared by the State Judicial Council.

Hall's bill would provide a state system similar to the method used to collect federal income taxes. Deductions would cover the approximate amount of income tax which would be due at the end of the year. Taxpayers would either receive a refund or pay additional tax after filing their returns.

The plan would become effective next Jan. 1. Employers would pay in tax money withheld in quarterly payments.

Hall said the estimate of two million made by Shaw would be the minimum increase resulting from the plan. He added it would reach "tens of thousands" of persons who have evaded income tax collections.

WINDFALL

In addition, Hall predicted the plan would result in a "windfall" to the state of more than 18 million during the next two years through collection of income taxes sooner than they would have been collected under the old system of paying taxes in the year following the year in which the income was earned.

At present, the great bulk of individual income tax money pours in during March. The new system would spread collection throughout the year.

Most persons whose income is not derived from wages would be required to file an estimate of their income and pay their taxes in installments on the basis of their estimates.

ARREST BILL

The arrest powers bill was recommended by the State Judicial Council to clear confusion which resulted from a State Supreme Court decision last year. The court said officers could arrest without a warrant only where a "breach of the peace" had occurred, even if the misdemeanor were committed in the officer's presence.

The proposed law would give officers authority to make arrests for misdemeanors committed in their presence and where they have "reasonable ground to believe" a misdemeanor had been committed in their presence.

WHAMMY

Meanwhile, House Judiciary Committee 1 prepared to act Thursday on legislation to limit the Highway Patrol use of its electronic speed detection equipment—nicknamed the "whammy." The committee today delayed consideration of the measure until Thursday so that Motor Vehicles Commissioner Ed Scheidt can be on hand to oppose the bill.

The measure would require the "whammies" to be operated in full view of motorists and would not permit "whammy" evidence to be introduced in court unless there were expert testimony to show the devices were properly installed and in good working condition.

UNC Prof Participates In Corporation Confab

RALEIGH, Feb. 15 (AP)—An attempt to rewrite the state's corporation laws to deter Tar Heel businessmen from running to such states as Delaware to escape the jurisdiction of the laws and courts of North Carolina was questioned by former House Speaker E. T. Bost today as "an invasion of rights."

Bost's question brought one of the first signs of life to the tedious briefing sessions of the bulky revision proposed to the state's statutes relating to corporations. The Senate Judiciary I and House Corporations Committees began listening to the briefings last Tuesday.

Bost questioned the desirability of passing a law which would hinder North Carolinians from incorporating in New Jersey or Delaware "if they found North Carolina laws undesirable."

He pointed to R. J. Reynolds Co., Liggett and Myers and Duke Power Co. "both New Jersey corporations."

"If these companies had not been able to organize in another state," said Bost. "They probably would not have been able to grow and prosper as they have."

Professors E. R. Latty of Duke, and Professor M. S. Breckenridge of the University of North Carolina, jumped to their feet when Bost raised his question. The two law professors, who helped draft the proposed bill, had been conducting the briefings.

Latty said that Bost was, in effect, condoning the present laws which permit businessmen to do substantially all their business in North Carolina while "thumbing their noses" at the state's laws.

Breckenridge said the old practice of "going to Delaware" is a "wholly fictitious performance."

"There is nothing harsh in this proposed act," he said, "and if there is it can be amended."

Latty stressed the point that these "pseudo-foreign corporations" now in existence would not be effected by the proposed law; it would effect only future corporations, he said.

(Continued from page one) people were stricken by disaster anywhere, there was, and will be, the Red Cross. COMFORT & CHEER
"Wherever life ebbs away from lack of blood, or hospitals need volunteers, or a drowning child is being brought to safety and life, or a word of cheer is needed for soldiers in camps here and in some distant land, or good offices are needed to get a message or a loan or a lift in a desperate situation or a tragic hour, there, seeks to be, the Red Cross, lending a hand of comfort and cheer."

Dr. Graham traced highlights of Red Cross history, almost 100 years old in international scope, and existent in the U. S. since the Civil War. "The great dynamic international framework," he said, "which brings us the news from all the states and all the continents has made necessary the local, national and international Red Cross to give us the way to lend a hand across the street, across the tracks, across the nation and across the ocean."
