Kerr proposed to add that list of weapons to a bill providing for legalized hunting with bows and arrows. The measure, introduced by Rep. George R. Uzzell of Rowan, had already been passed by the House.

Effective Desegregation Requires Governmental Support, Says Reid

A desegregation program undertaken by public schools is most effective when it has the open approval and support of all arms of the government of which it is a part, a nationally-known sociologist said last night in an address here.

Prof. Ira Reid, head of the Sociology Department at Haverford College in Pennsylvania, spoke at a public dinner session held at the Episcopal Parish House, on "Implementing the Supreme Court Decision."

While visiting the UNC campus Wednesday and Thursday, sponsored by the YMCA-YWCA Human Relations Committee, Dr. Reid addressed a number of University classes and groups, including a faculty luncheon Thursday on "The Professor's Responsibility in Socially Changing Situations."

In his discussion last night, he

General Matthew B. Ridgway here to speak last night was forced to turn back to Washington. According to an aide to the General, the plane, which was due to arrive here at 3:39 p.m., arrived back in Washington about 5 p.m.

Among those waiting at the airport to welcome General Ridgway were General Farrell, commanding general of the 82nd Airborne Division; Colonel Settle, chief of staff of the North Carolina Military District; Roy Holstein, director of Student Activities, and Charles Shaffer, assistant to the Chancellor.

Joel Fleishman, Jim Turner and Bob Young were there to welcome the General on behalf of the Carolina Forum which was sponsoring his speech.

Bob Young, vice-president of the Forum, said that the speech would "probably not" be rescheduled.

Seagulls Mess With C. P. & L.

MOREHEAD CITY, Feb. 24—They've found out what's been causing the lights here to flicker momentarily twice a day for several weeks. It was all the fault of hungry seagulls.

Carolina Power and Light Co. workers had been looking for the cause of the flickering for three weeks. They even dispatched an airplane to patrol the lines.

Then came a clue—a report that seagulls were either being shot or electrocuted at the city dump. CP&L Manager George Stovall, an old hand at fishing, immediately figured it out. With fishing boats idle because of cold weather there were no fish scraps for the gulls. They flocked to the city dump. There were so many the overlapping wings short-circuited the 33,000-volt lines serving the city. It happened twice daily because city trucks dumped garbage there twice daily.

A visit to the dump confirmed the diagnosis. Dead seagulls were under the power lines. The remedy was simple. The lines were spread farther apart.

GMAB Starts Talent Board For Students

A new project is soon to be sponsored by the Graham Memorial Activities Board.

The Dance Committee of GMAB is going to establish a talent bureau which will be at the disposal of people who are interested in performing and any organization that is looking for entertainers.

The first step in setting up the bureau will be tryouts which will be held on March 7 in the Rendezvous Room from 4 until 5 p.m. and from 8 until 9 p.m. Anyone who does any type of entertaining or performing is urged to come to the tryouts, according to Gordon Forester, president of GMAB. The purpose of the tryouts will be to judge the ability of performers so that they may be rated by the bureau.

After these tryouts, a file of all performers and entertainers will be compiled. The file will contain the name, type of entertainment, address and fee of each person listed.

The file, which will be kept in the GMAB office, will be at the disposal of any campus or other organization or any group desiring entertainment for any occasion.

"We think it will offer a good service to people on the campus as well as other people off the campus," said Forester.

Use of the talent bureau will be free of charge to everyone.

Water Means A Lot, Says Senator Medford

"Our future—industrially, agriculturally, our whole state life economically—depends upon the proper use of our water," State Senator William Medford, Waynesville, said here this week.

In planning our state's life in education for the conservation of our natural resources, he said, "we have almost completely ignored water and its importance in the development of our state. The fact that water is our most valuable, most vital, natural resource has only recently been recognized in North Carolina."

Senator Medford, chairman of the Conservation and Development Committee, addressed the local chapter of the Delta Sigma Pi, professional and business fraternity, at its regular dinner meeting. Aubrey Burroughs, Reidsville, president of the group, presided.

Discussing the intense drive in North Carolina to bring industry into North Carolina, Senator Medford cited examples of water usage in which he said, "It takes 67,000 gallons of water to produce one ton of coal burned in a steam generator plant; 90,200 for a pound of rayon, and 240 gallons for every pound of meat packed."

He also discussed water shortage caused by drought and the effects of irrigation upon the state's water supply.

"In recent years areas have reported a drop in the water table—that is, the drop in the amount of water stored under the ground," he said. "This is serious, when we consider that 2,800,000 people of North Carolina depend upon groundwater for their water supply."

The Senator presented the context of the recently submitted Water Code which is now a bill pending before the Legislature. The committee's studying the water problem set up in the Water Code "rights in the use of water, an orderly procedure for apportionment—for the acquisition of vested rights, and creates a Water Commission and gives it broad powers to plan for the use of water for the state."

North Carolina has tackled the problem, Senator Medford said, and has recognized the necessity for a planned water use. "We hope it is not too late to get an effective plan in operation."

Other new officers are Everett W. Hall of the Philosophy Department, vice-president; Miss Katherine Carmichael, dean of women, secretary, and Alexander Heard of the Political Science Department, treasurer. Elected to the board of directors was Earl Slocum of the Music Department. Holdover members of the board include J. M. Saunders, Alumni Secretary; Clifford Lyons of the English Department, and Arthur Fink, retiring president.

Dr. George Ham, head of the Department of Psychiatry of the University's School of Medicine, was the speaker for the day. He was introduced by President Fink.

Explaining to the faculty members the role of psychiatry in contemporary society, Dr. Ham traced significant developments in that science since Freud and discussed its relationship to psychology, sociology and biology. "The discovery of the dynamic subconscious," he said, "has changed the concept of man's behavior as much as the discoveries of Darwin and Copernicus changed other concepts."

William P. Skinner Jr. was recently elected magister of Vance Inn of Phi Delta Phi, international legal fraternity.

Other officers are Clerk Paul B. Guthery Jr., of Charlotte; Exchequer Walter L. Horton Jr. of Chapel Hill, and historian Hamilton C. Horton Jr. of Winston-Salem.

Student Legislature Votes Down Proposal For Village Voting

Simultaneous Election Wanted By UP Brass

By NEIL BASS

The student Legislature last night voted against the wishes of four University Party leaders to have the elections in Victory Village carried on simultaneously with the campus elections. The Victory Village Board of Directors had asked the solons to take such action.

There was mild discussion concerning the matter until Beverly Webb, former floor leader of the UP, rose to his feet to call it the "most insidious bill ever to appear before the Legislature." Previous to Webb's statement, Dan Wallace told the Legislators that he hoped that they would vote on the measure "nonpartisanly."

Webb asserted that if the Villagers didn't have enough "interest of their own, then they should not depend on the student government to get the vote out." He went on to say that spending money to carry out an election in the Village was spending student government funds "unrightfully."

David Reid (SP) defended the motives of the measure by saying that the Village was "as much a part of student government" as the dormitories or the fraternities and thus were entitled to student government benefits.

The final tabulation showed that four UP's were against the tide of opinion of the whole body. These were Jack Stevens, UP floor leader, Beverly Webb, Jim Exum and Luanne Thornton.

The primary objection that the UP had to the bill was an amendment which allowed the students' wives in the Village to vote for the veterans' settlement board of directors.

The second bill on the docket of the body was one which "clarified" the Elections Law. It was passed by the solons after a good bit of discussion about the desired scholastic standards for a student before he could participate in extra curricular activities. The big change was that now a student must maintain a "C" average for his entire period of residence instead of the former requirement of keeping the average just the semester before the student becomes a candidate.

If the Commissioners fail to call for a referendum, a petition signed by 15 per cent of the voters in the last gubernatorial election will make the referendum mandatory.

PTA President J. L. Godfrey said the question involved was "whether the county is to get any revenue." The PTA called on the Commissioners for a vote because of the need for money for local schools.

Gray, Others Generally Approve Education Bill

RALEIGH, Feb. 24—Although they found flaws in a bill creating a state board of higher education, heads of state-supported institutions of higher learning generally expressed agreement with the idea Wednesday.

Their criticisms were unfolded during a hearing on the bill by the Joint Education Committee.

As the hearing got under way, Gov. Hodges presented what he called "amazing and appalling statistics" showing that the state is not "getting what it is paying for in higher education."

He stated that in 1950-52, North Carolina was 10th among the states in the percentage of personal income devoted to higher education, that between 1947-53 it spent 72 million for permanent improvements at its colleges—third among the states—yet in 1950 "it ranked 47th among the 48 states as to the proportion of

Committee Approves Sex Bill

RALEIGH, Feb. 24—The Senate today received a watered down water bill and sped a judicial redistricting measure on its way to the House by a one-sided voice vote.

A House Judiciary Committee, meanwhile, gave its approval to a bill allowing up to 10 years in prison for sex deviates convicted of molesting children.

A Senate and House committee heard a warning from a former House speaker against passing in its present form a bill to completely rewrite the state's corporation laws.

W. Frank Taylor of Goldsboro told the Senate Judiciary and the House Corporation Committee that the proposed corporation law represents "too much of a get tough policy."

"If this law is enacted in its present form," he added, "without more amendments than this Legislature will have time to consider it is just a notice to hang on the state line to persuade new corporations not to come into the state."

Sens. C. Settle Bunn of Nash and Arthur Kirkman of Guilford introduced the watered down bill. Bunn said the purpose of the measure was to educate the people on the need for water conservation and to provide for emergency actions in the case of water shortages.

The Bunn-Kirkman bill is much less drastic than a measure, proposed by a gubernatorial water study committee, which was introduced about 10 days ago. The water committee's bill would create a board of water commissioners with far-reaching powers to allocate the state's water resources for "beneficial purposes."

The Bunn-Kirkman bill also would set up a board of water commissioners, composed of seven persons appointed by the governor. The board would be charged with the duty of carrying out "programs of research and education to the end that the people" of the state "shall be informed concerning matters having to do with the conservation of water resources."

In cases of water shortage the bill would give the governor power to proclaim an emergency at the request of local authorities. The board would then have the power to adopt regulations allocating water in accordance with a strict priority schedule.

The UNC unit of the American Association of University Professors will hold a meeting Monday night at 7:30 in the faculty lounge of the Morehead Planetarium.

A panel discussion will be held on the report of the commission of higher education, and Leonard S. Powers, executive secretary of the commission, will be guest for the meeting.

The meeting will be open to all faculty members.
