PERMANENT DIRECTOR?

Wallace Resigns GM Job Effective Start Of Fall Term

By LOIS OWEN

Jim Wallace, for two years director of Graham Memorial, has announced his resignation.

Wallace's resignation will be effective at the beginning of the fall semester. It came at a recent meeting of the Graham Memorial Board of Directors.

The Board of Directors will try to find a permanent director for GM, Wallace said yesterday. Board President Tom Creasy will appoint a selection committee, made up of faculty, administration and students, for the purpose of finding a new director.

The board approved a salary increase of approximately $6,000 or $7,000, provided a suitable director may be found.

It was decided at the meeting that Director Wallace should attend the regular convention of the Association of College Unions at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va. for the special purpose of looking around for a new director. One student will be chosen to accompany Wallace.

Wallace yesterday remarked on a number of improvements that might be attempted by GM, should it have a new director and sufficient funds.

For instance, a patio might be built in back of the Rendezvous Room, the basement darkroom could be revamped, better use could be made of the old Veterans' Club in the back of Lenoir Hall and the facilities in Cobb's basement could be managed by GM, said Wallace.

He also suggested that the lecture series be improved.

Homesley Will Be Able To Run For Position

The question about whether or not T. C. (Country) Homesley will be able to run as a write-in candidate for head cheerleader has been settled. He can.

Patsy Daniels, chairman of the Elections Board, said that Ray Jefferies, assistant to the Dean of Student Affairs, looked over Homesley's record and has okayed him as a write-in candidate.

Homesley, who has promised to "raise hell next year if elected," said that "next year is a make or break year at Carolina. We need a head cheerleader who will get enthusiasm and yells out of the students."

Brumfield Still Wants To Help With Cheers

Louis Brumfield, newly-elected president of the Interdormitory Council, said he still intends to "go out for the cheerleading squad" in a statement made yesterday, in which he explained why he withdrew from the head cheerleader race after being elected to the IDC post.

Brumfield gave three reasons for his withdrawal. He said that being both IDC president and head cheerleader would be "almost a physical impossibility," that he is "not familiar with the duties of head cheerleader to the extent which I feel is necessary to serve the students in this capacity" and he feels "that my work in the IDC would be very rewarding."

The new IDC head added, "I believe that I am familiar enough with the situation in the dormitories to work for them."

Brumfield expressed his appreciation to the students who had offered support in his campaign for head cheerleader.

Candidate Collision For Bigger, Better Rallies

"There is no such thing as a lack of Carolina spirit," said candidate for head cheerleader Collicott yesterday.

"The spirit is here but the students need better opportunities to show it, namely in the form of bigger and better pep rallies," added Collicott. "I for one would like to see more good, clean, hell-raising like that which occurred at the Maryland pep rally two years ago," he continued.

"Another thing I want to see," said Collicott, "is a pre-game parade on the order of those at the Army-Navy games, but carried out on a smaller less expensive scale."

Collicott said he is not a University Party candidate for head cheerleader. "The UP, as I understand, went on record favoring my election . . . I greatly appreciate the support of the UP," he said, "but I am not a UP candidate. I am an independent."

"I am for and with the students," continued Collicott. "There should be no such thing as a political cheerleader. If elected I will not be one."

SAYS McCURRY:

Nothing On Segregation

"Like my opponents, I have nothing to say either."

That's presidential candidate Ed McCurry's stand on segregation.

The University Party candidate was asked his stand on the question of segregation in the public schools, as were candidates Manning Muntzing (Student Party) and Don Fowler (Independent). Wednesday Muntzing said he hoped the "student body and student government will work together to meet the situation."

Fowler said segregation "must be studied carefully before any drastic action is taken."

McCurry, who dismissed the question with "nothing to say either," had something to say about a rumored increase in student fees.

"It is my firm belief," said McCurry, "that before such an increase can be made, the question must be brought directly before the student body in the form of a

Tuition Study Set

(From AP Reports)

RALEIGH, March 24 — The Joint Appropriations subcommittee today voted to name a 5-man group to study the question of increased tuition charges to non-resident students at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. The subcommittee also followed up its action of yesterday in cutting University Library appropriations for the libraries at State College and Woman's College.

Taylor Requests Lists Of Candidate Records

A publication in The Daily Tar Heel of the record of each presidential candidate was requested yesterday by the campaign manager for Ed McCurry, University Party presidential candidate.

The Daily Tar Heel replied to Taylor that it would publish records of the three candidates.

In the statement in which he made his request, Taylor said, "My basic objective in this campaign is to get the students to use their common sense and good judgment, both of which require that the student body know essentially the same information about the various candidates that an employer wants to know about prospective employees."

Taylor said an employer knows that a person's past record in the best way of telling what he will most likely do in the future. He added " . . . the same thing is true in campus politics. Indeed the various candidates' statements in favor of things we all favor and in opposition to things we all oppose are relatively unimportant when compared with the actual records of those candidates," he said.

Taylor has said that he has tried to make his candidates record familiar to the students, but that financial limitations prevent printing enough copies for each student. He said that by having the three candidates' records published in the paper, the students will have "some basis for making a comparison of the respective candidates and using their common sense and good judgement in selecting the best qualified among them."

"Of course, I make this request with full assurance that such a comparison of actual records will result in victory for Ed McCurry," concluded Taylor.

IN CAMPUS ELECTIONS:

Students To Vote On Atty. General's Job

Four proposed amendments to the student Constitution will be placed before the campus in Tuesday's election. One, introduced in student Legislature March 10, would place certain duties on the Attorney General of student government. The amendment in full follows. Other amendments will be published later.

A BILL TO AMEND THE OFFICIAL STUDENT CONSTITUTION OF THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA

Whereas: The powers of the office of Attorney General are nothing more than advisor to the president of the student body, and

Whereas: An office of this nature with such limited power is superfluous, and

Whereas: There are only limited means for the investigation and prosecution of offenses and offenders of the student Constitution of the University of North Carolina, and

Whereas: In the immediate past there have been flagrant Constitutional violations which have persisted uncorrected because of the confusion and multiple channels through which prosecution must proceed before reaching the Student Council;

NOW THEREFORE, BE IT ENACTED BY THE STUDENT LEGISLATURE OF THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA, THAT

Art. 1.—That the following paragraph be added to Article II, section 5, of the Official Student Constitution of the University of North Carolina:

It shall also be the duty of the Attorney General to investigate, gather evidence against and prosecute any and all offenders of the official student constitution of the University of North Carolina. (For this amendment offenders may take the form of individuals, groups or organizations under the auspices of the student constitution.)

Art. II.—This amendment upon passage by the student Legislature shall be put to the student body for approval in the next special or regular election authorized by the student Legislature.

Student Legislature Talks Raising Out-Of-State Tuition; Says DTH Broke Contract

By NEIL BASS

A resolution was introduced, but not voted on, at last night's meeting of the student Legislature asking that he group go on record as "opposing any tuition raises" for out-of-state students at UNC.

The resolution, introduced by the University Party, called such action (tuition hike) a "discriminating influence." The state Legislature announced near the beginning of this session that increased dormitory room rents were being "considered" as a possible fund source.

According to a report given at Wednesday night's meeting of the Interdormitory Council by Lewis Brumfield, talks with state officials have "indicated" that the dorm rent hike proposal will go through. Brumfield is a member of the UNC committee appointed to fight the proposal.

The resolution, brought to the attention of the Legislature by Jim Martin of the UP, stated that such "discriminating" action would not be conducive toward encouraging out-of-state students to attend the University. It further stated that out-of-state students had made a definite contribution to the University.

In gist, the resolution brought to the front the fact that many students not from North Carolina would be denied the chance to mingle and to disseminate in their home regions the knowledge and mode of life acquired from this University and from North Carolina if the state Legislature's decided to pass such a law.

It went on to imply that North Carolina as a whole would be sold short if a "tax" (meaning the tuition raise) was levied on the opportunities of peoples from the same Democratic country (but from the different states) to intermingle and promote good relationships for all involved.

In conclusion the resolution implied that a disadvantageous situation would be created for the state if the state Legislature "discriminated" and levied funds from only out-of-state students, thus inhibiting the freedom of people from all corners of the United States to "peaceably assemble" and acquire an education.

In other action of the session, the chairman of the committee "investigating" The Daily Tar Heel introduced a bill which, according to Charles Hyatt, grew out of the student-publication's "violation" of a contract.

The bill calls for a "legal authority" to review all student government contracts exceeding $100 before final approval of them is announced. Apparently this was aimed at what Hyatt, member of the investigating committee, called the "discovery" of a contract compelling The Daily Tar Heel to make a door-to-door delivery of newspapers.

This was one of the main kicks that the student Legislature had at its recent session during which it set up the investigating committee. Hyatt went on to say that The Daily Tar Heel circulation department was being paid for such door-to-door service and was not keeping its bargain.

The third bill introduced at the final session before elections calls for the establishment of a "student union," similar to Graham Memorial, at Victory Village.

Quarterly Deadline

According to an announcement made yesterday by Jim Dunn, editor of the Carolina Quarterly, only one week remains for entries to be made in the Quarterly's Fiction Contest.

4th Fair Slated By B. A. Frat

The fourth annual Business Fair, sponsored as a service-to-school project by Alpha Kappa Psi professional business administration fraternity, has been set for April 27-28 in Carroll Hall, with the theme of "Wings, Wheels and Rudders, the Story of the American Transportation System."

Kenneth Argo, Kannapolis senior, new president of Alpha Kappa Psi and chairman of arrangements for the fair, and Dr. J. C. D. Blaine, UNC professor of transportation and faculty advisor, jointly announced the plans for the yearly event.

The local Alpha Tau chapter sponsored its first business fair in 1952, with a central theme of finance, on which outstanding bankers from New York and North Carolina spoke. The development of advertising was stressed at the second fair, with Bruce Barton of New York as main speaker.

"Tar Heel Jobs for Tar Heel Grads" was the topic last year, when R. D. Harwick, Raleigh, president of the State Association of Chambers of Commerce, headed the list of speakers.

"The concept of the business fair," Dr. Blaine said, "is one which has been highly commended by educators and businessmen alike for its wide educational value, as well as for the experience gained by those who participate in its planning and execution."

"The service is not only to the school but to the entire University and to the state at large," he added.

The "Wings, wheels and rudders" approach is believed to be the first presentation of this type in the United States, Argo explained.

'Stranger' Plans Underway

Saturday Stranger, a new play by Joseph Rosenberg, graduate student in the department of dramatic art, will be the next full length production of The Carolina Playmakers, announced a spokesman for the group yesterday.

Rosenburg, who has written a drama dealing with lonely women and the effect of a handsome young man upon their lives, is a graduate assistant in the Department of Dramatic Art.

Earlier this season another of his plays, Friends, was presented in the Playmakers Theater as a part of a series of student one-act plays.

The cast includes Martha Dow, June Eschweiller, Len Bullock, Harvey Whetstone, Gene Overbeck and Bobbie Lee Moretz. James Riley directed the play.

Tickets for the production go on sale today at 214 Abernethy Hall.

the Ballot Box

Politicians, as we have found out in covering small-town courts, murder the king's English.

In the mill of campaign statements turned in to The Daily Tar Heel, rewriters have found such words as "coart" for court, "axis" of access and "partizan" for partisan.

In politicians' written statements, here and elsewhere, nine-tenths of the words are capitalized. It would be as unpardonable for a campus politician to spell Student Body or Student Government or Administration with lower-case letters than for a county lawyer to slip up and spell Highway highway, or Commissioner commissioner.

And you can bet every one of them would like to spell voter Voter.

Nice Elections Board Chairman Patsy Daniels had a few statements of her own yesterday.

Miss Daniels warned candidates, and candidates' friends, not to place posters on trees, not to use Scotch tape on walls and not to move a poster to put another one up.

Violators, said Miss Daniels, will be prosecuted by the Honor Council. Violations may be reported to her or another member of the Elections Board.

FIVE DAYS UNTIL ELECTIONS

Davis (Dusty) Lamson, last year's Elections Board chairman, said yesterday that T. C. (Country) Homesley's campaign for head cheerleader is not the first write-in campaign on record.

"There have been several write-in campaigns," said Lamson. "I am familiar with several during the four years I have been here."

Lamson said the Elections Board in the past has thrown the candidate out because his grades weren't checked, and he didn't submit an expense account."

The elections law says "no campaign literature of any type shall be permitted within a radius of 50 feet of the ballot boxes."

"No person shall endeavor to advance the interest of any candidate within 50 feet of the polling places."

"No person shall station any sound mechanism for the purpose of advancing the interest of any candidate within hearing distance of any polling place."

"There shall be no commercialization, such as distribution of sample cigarettes, pamphlets, etc., within 50 feet of the polls."

The presidential candidates' apparent refusal to skate out on segregation's thin ice was to be expected.

A softer campaign couldn't have happened.—F. P.
