Tuition Bill Would Exempt Students On Scholarships

Goettingen Scholarship Deadline Set On May 1

Students interested in applying for a scholarship to attend Goettingen University in Germany must file their applications at the ICA before May 1, according to Student Exchange Program Chairman Bill Wible.

Applicants must have completed their sophomore year at UNC to be eligible for the student government-sponsored scholarship, Wible said.

Prerequisites for applicants include "a working knowledge of the German language and an avid interest in foreign affairs," said Wible.

The scholarship, available to both men and women students, will cover "travel expenses, tuition, portion of the ledgings and a portion of the board," said Chairman Wible.

Students desiring to find out more particulars about the scholarship may contact Claude Shotts at the YMCA, Wible said.

Just Can't Do It, Boys...

LOS ANGELES, Calif., April 13.—"Goodyear doesn't advertise firestone tires," said the University of Southern California's vice-president, Robert D. Fisher, in explaining why the University does not allow off-campus bookstores to advertise in The Daily Trojan, the student newspaper here.

In explaining that such advertising cuts down on University bookstore profits, Fisher said, "We do not say in our pamphlets, 'This is a nice place, but we would like to call your attention to Comona.' We do not believe in advertising our competitors in our newspaper," he said.

Dramatic Festival Set To Open Here Today

Twelve plays will be given here at the opening session of the annual Carolina Dramatic Association spring festival, which will continue through Saturday on the UNC campus.

The traditional three-day competition will include some 31 plays, presented by young dramatists from North Carolina junior and senior high schools and colleges, as well as amateur community players.

Opening day performances will be given by students from Wake Forest, Belmont, Olivette, and Winston-Salem Reynolds and Charlotte Central high schools; and from Lake Forest junior high, East Carolina College, Mars Hill College, the Marquardt School of Charlotte, and Spartanburg, S. C., high school.

All performances will be given at the Carolina Playmakers Theatre. Association Executive Secretary John W. Parker said a small admission fee will be charged.

In addition to the presentation plays, the festival will include contests in costuming and make-up, a special theatre arts exhibit and showings of films on theatrical subjects.

Other county and city high schools, colleges and community theaters are slated for performances Friday and Saturday, Parker said. All plays are winners of earlier district drama festivals, he added.

The annual business meeting of the CDA directors will be held Saturday morning, with Mrs. Lazelle M. Northrop, Winston-Salem, presiding.

The Thursday program will include the following plays: Submerged, Wake Forest; Pink and Patches, Belmont; The Sun is a Dead Man's Weapon, Micaville; The Summons of Sarel, Olivette; Benhaven; Thanksgiving Conspiracy, Lake Forest; Riders to the Sea, Reynolds; The Old Lady Shows Her Medals, Charlotte Central.

American Adventure:

UNC Communication Center Drama Wins Another Prize

One of the highest awards in radio, given annually by the American Exhibition of Educational Radio and Television Programs, has been received by the UNC Communication Center for American adventure, a series of dramas, written by John Ehle and directed by John Clayton, which deal with the basic values and characteristics of the American people.

In competition with other similar production agencies, both educational and commercial, the Communication Center won first place in the Cultural Division, which includes drama, science, literature, and music programs. Among first award winners in other divisions were NBC, CBS, the Canadian Broadcasting Company, Columbia University in association with NBC, the University of Minnesota and the University of Wisconsin.

Earl Wynn, director of the Communication Center, said this is the fourth award his organization has received in the Cultural Division of the contest. Mr. Ehle has won three previous first awards in writing, and Mr. Clayton has won two first awards in directing and one in writing.

Earlier this year, American Adventure won a Freedom Foundation award in radio, and one of the programs from the series has been selected for international competition as America's sole entry in drama.

The citation just received was as follows: "The University of North Carolina Communication Center is commended for excellent blending of radio skills in presentation of a searching study of the intrinsic values of man in the new world — especially for a courageous evaluation of the spiritual equality of mankind."

Serving as consultants for American Adventure were nine UNC professors: Professors Bernard Boyd, John Gillin, Fletcher Green, Everett Hall, Frank Hanft, Clifford Lyons, William Potat, Clemens Sommer and the late Howard Odum.

A second of the series has been produced and is now ready for release to the 77 radio stations throughout the country which broadcast the series.

American Adventure was produced by the University on grants-in-aid received from the Educational Radio and Television Center, through the National Association of Educational Broadcasters. The series was based on a proposal by Prof. Robert F. Schenckan.

Wednesday Is Deadline For Room Reservations

Wednesday is the deadline for men to make room reservation deposits with the University Cashier in South Building, and for applications to be made for room changes for both summer and fall sessions must be made by that date, according to the University Housing Office.

Alexander Dormitory will be used to house married couples during the summer session. No cooking will be permitted in the rooms. Rooms in Alexander may be rented at $30 for each summer session. The reservation is $30.

The rooms in Steele and on the first three floors of Ruffin will be assigned as single rooms for the summer. Rent will be $25 per summer session, and the reservation fee will be $25.

Connor will house graduate men during the summer. Joyner, Old East, Old West and Grimes will also be open. Rooms in these dorms will rent for $15 for each summer session. Reservation fee will be $15.

The Housing Office keeps a listing of privately owned apartments, houses and rooms off the campus which are available for the summer. Arrangements to rent these places should be made in person since the variation in price and facilities is so great, according to Housing Office statement.

It will be necessary to again house three persons per room in Alexander, Steele, Whitehead, the first three floors of Grimes, Mangum, Manly and Ruffin and the south and middle sections of Old

East and Old West, said the statement. If additional space is needed, the rooms of the lower quadrangle dormitories will be converted to triple rooms in the following order: Lewis, Aycock, Graham, Everett, according to the Housing Office.

Stewart Colson is chairman of the Planning Committee. Sub-chairmen who will make reports tonight include Mark Cherry, on counselor training; Bob Leonard, on schedule and speakers; Dan Southerland, on worship; Gary Nichols, on recreation; and Joe Clapp, on publicity.

Nominations for camp director will be made at the meeting, said Riebel.

Contract Bill Also Upcoming

By NEIL BASS

The student Legislature will meet at an early hour tonight — 7 o'clock — to thrash out and revamp certain portions of the 1955-56 student government budget.

Two other measures are slated to run through the legislative machinery, but according to several sources, one of these should get a hurried pat of approval and the other should run aground without excessive haggling. At any rate the main item for consideration is the controversial budget.

The measure that has reportedly caught legislators' fancies is a resolution to have legal authority review any student government contract involving the spending of over $100. The resolution was introduced by the legislative Special Investigating Committee as a result of The Daily Tar Heel's "violation" of a contract, said Charles Hyatt, a member of the committee.

The proposal that a majority of the legislators reportedly "don't like" was introduced by Charles Hyatt (SP). Hyatt wants fees that residents of Victory Village pay to Graham Memorial reverted back to the Village so the Village can have a separate student union and campus newspaper.

Hyatt's proposal comes on the heels of a bill that the Village Board of Directors recommended to the student Legislature calling for a closer "integration" of the Village and the campus student government. Specifically, the bill asked that the campus Elections Board carry on Village elections.

Tonight's session may mark the last time that the old Legislature meets. This depends on whether or not the budget goes through. It is more likely, however, that it will take two or three get-togethers to wrap up budget appropriations and stamp a sign of approval on each allocation.

From reports of caucuses the Student Party and University Party called earlier this week to pry into the budget thoroughly there will be a lot of fireworks on some items.

Jim Exum and UP members raised eyebrows about the amount that the newly created student government executive secretary would get — $125 per hour — and the amount allocated to the Interdormitory Council social fund.

Exum, in line to get the official assignment as UP floor leader, said "The IDC has gone hog wild since year before last." Exum was referring to an appropriation of $600 to carry out the brunt of the IDC's social activities. It appears a certainty that the UP will ruffle its feathers when the IDC money comes up on the docket for consideration.

From the SP quarter, according to member David Reid, there is a good deal of concern about the salaries that some of The Daily Tar Heel staffers are getting. So (See LEGISLATURE, page 4)
