Yesterday's parade formed in front of the Planetarium and proceeded up Franklin St., down Raleigh Road, and around to Kenan Stadium.

A series of stalls was arranged on the field for the teams to sit in. Crepe paper streamers in each group's color decorated the poles of the stalls.

Mike Hendren, master of ceremonies began calling out the numbers of the lucky tickets. There were well over 50 door-prizes: Steak dinners at Brady's, books from the Intimate, all the beer six people could drink in one night at the Patio.

A Duke student won a case of beer from the Goody Shop.

Micky Chamblee and Hosea Wilson arranged the starters for the first race, the Grand National relay race. There was carrying of marbles, drinking of Cokes on the run and blowing bubble gum involved. Chi Omega won.

The second event was the Race to the Flesh, won by Miss Martha Stagner for Independent Coeds.

Hit the Geek, the third event, featured throwing chocolate cream pies in someone's face. Miss Carol Taylor won this one for the Tri Deltas.

The fourth event, previously kept secret, turned out to be a chase-after a greased pig. Miss Laura Ann Travis managed to seize the slippery pig by his hind legs and dragged him over to the judges stand, winning the event for the Chi O.

The Pi Phi won the skit competition with their "S. S. Sigmund Freud" cardboard battleship, many sailors, and six natives in sarongs.

The Chi Os were judged to have the best costumes, with their deck of cards theme in red and white.

Warning Out For Drinkers At Germans

T. Kopley, President of the University Dance Committee, yesterday had a word of warning for students who like liquor with their music.

Kopley said he wanted to remind students that the Germans concert and dance this afternoon and tonight will be held under Dance Committee rules, which includes provisions that no drinking will be permitted during the events, no intoxicants may be carried into Memorial Hall or Woollen Gym, students who have been drinking previously will not be allowed in the concert and/or dance and students should conduct themselves "as ladies and gentlemen at all times."

Those who disobey the rules, said Kopley, "will be dealt with strictly, according to law, by the University Dance Committee Court."

"Strict action," Kopley said, "has been necessitated because of the inability, some students at the last Germans concert to assume these responsibilities."

Hill House Will Be Sold

Hill House, tourist home on West Franklin St., will be closed soon, according to an announcement by band leader-owner John Scott Trotter.

Officials of the hotel gave as one reason for closing the widespread vandalism prevalent in that area.

Andy Kinghorn, who has managed the establishment for most of its years of operation, said although there had been no particular trouble since Easter, in the past windows had been smashed in adjoining cottages, white paint had been poured on the miniature jockey boy who stands in front of the building, stones and beer cans had been thrown at the building and an excess of vile and loud language had been used in the immediate area.

Kinghorn said Hill House would be closed by July 1. The building, he said, probably will be purchased by a University sorority.

He said competitors are requested to register their name and speech title in Dean E. L. Mackie's office, 312 South Building, by May 14.

The contest will be held in Di Hall, third floor of New West, at 8 p.m.

Affects Students Now In School

By CHUCK HAUSER

FROM ASSOCIATED PRESS DISPATCHES

RALEIGH, May 6—University of North Carolina students who are residents of other states will have to pay an increased tuition bill next fall, the General Assembly decided today.

Tuition raises will amount to $140 per year for out-of-staters, except those on scholarships.

The raise will affect students now in school.

The tuition raise was not recommended by the Legislature. However, appropriations to the University were figured on a basis of increased tuition, so raise is almost a certainty.

Action came as the Senate today passed into law a $40 million dollar state appropriations bill for the next biennium, after an hour and 10 minutes of debate.

The House had approved the measure Wednesday, with only two hours of debate. However, the bill's speedy enactment followed three months of intensive work by the Joint Appropriations subcommittee.

In Senate debate today, only one amendment was offered to the budget bill. Sen. Ray Walton of Brunswick proposed to eliminate the entire $222,910 appropriation for the expenses of University of North Carolina's educational television station and the State Educational Radio and Television Commission.

The Senate resoundingly defeated the amendment, as the House had done with a similar motion two days before.

"I have found," Walton told the Senate, "that the State is in the water business the electricity business, and we run a railroad. And now we're in the television business, too."

"If we vote to support this television station," he continued, "we will be treading on the grounds of socialism. I don't mean North Carolina will become a socialistic

Consolidated University Educational Television Station WUNC-TV was granted one-half of the money it asked for.

The University Library budget was cut from $100,000 to $75,000.

North Carolina Memorial Hospital got $191,000 for next year and $230,000 for the year following.

President Gordon Gray of the Consolidated University has said "I hope it won't be necessary for the Legislature to raise any student fees," and has said he is "not in favor" of any increase in student tuition fees.

Against Policy

Action taken by the General Assembly yesterday raising out-of-state tuition by $140 per year was a contrary to policy formed by the University's Council on Student Affairs.

(The Council on Student Affairs is made up of members of South Building administration.)

The stand taken by the University administration was one of opposition to any raises in student fees.

The administration policy, given in a January report to Chancellor Robert House by the Council, stated that any increase in charges to students would make the University "more restricted to the privileged class."

"If at Chapel Hill we ever cease to be a university of all the people," said the report, "we will have forfeited one of the fundamental ideals of the University."

The report urged that a "line" be drawn and to "do everything possible to prevent increasing the expense of attending the University."
