

Coed Hurt In Summer Unable To Re-Enter

Cobbites Schedule Festivities

Cobb Dormitory will entertain all coeds with a dance Friday in celebration of its new $31,000 social improvements program.

The dance is scheduled to last from 8:30 to midnight. "There will be plenty of refreshments and entertainment for all," said Ellison Edwards, dance committee chairman.

Special guests for the dance will be Consolidated University President Gordon Gray, Mrs. Collier Cobb and Dean of Women Katherine Carmichael.

The newly-completed social facilities are located in the east wing basement of Cobb.

A UNC coed, completely disabled since an automobile accident last summer, will be unable to re-enter school next fall as she had planned.

Miss Martha Barber, Raleigh, was a summer school student when she was involved in an automobile accident last July 9 near Nelson Thomas White Jr., also of Raleigh, was driving Miss Barber home from a dormitory picnic when his car left the road and crashed.

Miss Barber received a compound fracture of the left femur and was confined to Watts Hospital in Durham from July until November. Since that time she has been completely disabled. White received minor injuries.

At the time of the accident, Miss Barber's father was in Morehead City conferring with student government officers on a plan of student accident insurance for UNC students.

Recital's Audience Is Small

Another junior recital, by Beatrice Allston, soprano, accompanied by Eugene Hudson, and Nancy Eversman, pianist, took place in Hill Hall last Sunday.

Beatrice Allston began her recital with "Arduo e scoprire," by Monteverdi - Manning, which was followed by "Chioma d'Oro" by the same composers. Although her voice was somewhat unsure in the first number, improving in the second, there could be discerned a good understanding of Monteverdi's music. The concert was at this point interrupted through the loving admiration of a little black dog, which went up on the stage and humbly began to lick Beatrice's feet. She, with remarkable presence of mind, just smiled at the little dog, which was promptly sent about other business. The program went on with "Ah spietato!" from Amadigi, by Handel, and this number was done with good expression.

Nancy Eversman's part began with J. S. Bach's Prelude and Fugue in F Major, from the first book of "The Well Tempered Clavier." The Prelude was begun a bit too fast, which affected the clearness of Nancy's playing.

The Fugue was well introduced; but a bit confused in the development. Then came Clementi's Sonata, Opus 47, No. 2, which Miss Eversman played with good tempos throughout, with clarity and nice touch, very clean scales and all themes well developed and climaxed.

Beatrice Allston came back with two of Schubert's Lieder: "Lachen und Weinen," and "Gretchen am Spinnrade." Here her voice was better and she sang these two little gems with fine expression and musicianship. Next, Beatrice sang "Der Arme Peter," by Schumann, in a very satisfactory manner. Her diction is quite good and this helped very much towards everybody's enjoyment of this group of songs.

Miss Eversman came back on the stage and, assisted by Byron Freeman, doing the orchestral part in another piano, performed the First Movement, "Alegro Afetuoso," of Shumann's Piano Concerto in A Minor, in a rather creditable manner, although in a couple of passages Miss Eversman played a bit too fast, which marred to some extent an otherwise very nice performance, as both players have a fine touch and did a good job.

Beatrice Allston appeared again on the stage and did "Slumber Song," by Gretchaninoff, with good diction, fine musical understanding and expression, and so sang she the last two numbers: "The Island" and "In the Silence of the Night," by Rachmaninoff. This reviewer hopes that Beatrice Allston will correct the placement of her voice, which, at this stage of her development, can still be done. She is a fine musician and her natural voice has a pleasing timbre. The accompaniment by Eugene Hudson was generally good, although, in Schubert's "Gretchen am Spinnrade," he did get ahead of the singer, who showed the same presence of mind as in the episode of the black-furred admirer and began the "Lied" anew. Both Beatrice and Eugene did then a neat presentation.

Student From Monroe Runs For YDC Post

Henry Hall Wilson of Monroe has been endorsed as a candidate for state Young Democrats Club president at a general assembly of Young Democrats held here.

Joe Fowler of Mt. Airy was endorsed as candidate for national committeeman.

With members present from more than 25 counties, the group passed a resolution for the club to "go on record as endorsing and urging the candidacy" of the two members.

The resolution was offered by law students Bob Roberts of Kannapolis and Bob Byrd of Morganton and passed unanimously.

Recently-elected UNC club president W. E. Graham announced plans for a caravan to the state YDC meeting at Concord on May 21.
