N.C. School Art Exhibition Promotes Teaching, Production

By DON STAYHORN

The 18th Annual North Carolina School Exhibition, on display in Person Hall Art Gallery, will end Sunday.

Sponsored by the Dept. of Art and the Extension Division at UNC and the Departments of Art and Public Relations at Women's College in Greensboro, the exhibit alternates between UNC and WC. It will be held in Greensboro next year.

Statewide in representation, the show consists of the works of elementary schoolers from the first to the sixth grades.

Mrs. James Cooper Bland, instructor in the Dept. of Education at the Museum of Modern Art in New York City and judge of this year's exhibition, this week said, "I have tried to pick out paintings that were representative of children in North Carolina. The best from each school, if at all acceptable, was chosen."

From 1,556 entries, 384 were chosen by Mrs. Bland to be in the show. Of these, 267 are paintings, 37 are textiles and 80 are ceramics.

In all, 117 schools over the state are represented in the show.

"The purpose of the exhibition," states a pamphlet, "is to promote the teaching of art and to encourage art production in the elementary schools of North Carolina."

In looking over the paintings, Mrs. Bland said, "We must remember that ideas are the important thing to children — not proportion."

"Teachers and parents often make the mistake of trying to diagnose a child's personality from his paintings — that is impossible."

As to the helpfulness of old paint sets and numbering sets for children, Mrs. Bland said, "I don't see what they have to do with art. . . . These and coloring books prevent children from figuring out things for themselves. . . . It confines them."

Doors will be open from 9 to 12 a.m. and from 2 to 4:30 p.m. today, and from 2 to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Next year, it was announced, the exhibit will travel.

Two Dorms, Men's & Coed, May Rise If Bill Passes

A men's dormitory in the area of the North Carolina Memorial Hospital and a women's dorm are the new dorms which will probably be built if the bill authorizing the issuance of bonds for buildings dorms is passed by the North Carolina General Assembly, according to Jack Hudson, chairman of the Interdormitory Council's Dorm Improvements Committee.

Hudson said yesterday the Council on Student Affairs, before which he appeared yesterday to present student opinion on the new dorms, discussed the various possibilities for dorms and decided a men's dorm for medical, dental, pharmacy and public health students and a dorm for women are the ones most likely to be built.

Hudson said Claude Teague, University business manager, told the group the University Administration had told the state Legislature that from 700 to 800 spaces

By NEIL BASS

A resolution urging the administration to admit Negro students was in the hands of a student legislator last night, but an exodus of representatives prevented its introduction.

Also, student government Atty. General David Reid said he would take Legislator Joel Fleishman to the Men's Honor Council because, Reid said, Fleishman told a lie about him.

EXODUS

The legislators, encouraged by Student Party floorleader Larry McElroy, left in sufficient numbers so as to cause adjournment for lack of a quorum.

Joel Fleishman stood at the rostrum while all but 20 of the legislators flooded through the doors. (There must be 26 legislators present before the body can transact business.)

According to McElroy, he and University Party Floorleader Jim Exum made an agreement at the UP caucus that they would "walk out" of the meeting to stop a vote on Fleishman's resolution.

Exum said he and McElroy agreed to defeat any action to suspend the rules, and thus allow the body to vote on the measure; but that he didn't agree beforehand to leave the meeting if it was introduced.

"We just went along with McElroy" after he and the others decided to "leave, however," Exum said.

McElroy and Ed Lipman (UP) had previously tried to move adjournment before Fleishman got a chance at the rostrum, but Fleishman leaped to his feet and got the floor over the protests of the SP floorleader.

Before the resolution incident, the solons had seen some controversial action over some "suggestion." Delegates that President Don Fowler had made to attend the National Students Assn. convention

Fleishman, in the thick of things all night, questioned the right of the student body president to recommend delegates.

He went on to say that Jim Turner, first vice chairman of the Carolinas-Virginia Region of the NSA, was left off Fowler's list of suggestions because of "political spite."

Atty-General David Reid, Fleishman said, admitted to him that Turner wasn't considered because of his opposition to Fowler during the campaign.

Reid said this was a "lie," and that he planned to take Fleishman before the Honor Council.

"I hope he will," Fleishman answered.

When the time came for approval of Fowler's "official" appointments, the UP howled protests at the naming of Jim Holmes (SP) as Carolina Forum representative for the president of the student body.

Exum, who is a member of the committee that recommended Holmes in the first place, explained his party's thumbing down Holmes by saying his party wanted
