

Four Public Health Educators Return From Conferences Throughout Nation

Four public health educators from UNC have recently returned from attending conferences in distant parts of the nation and conducting special professional study sessions.

Dr. Rosemary M. Kent, associate professor of public health education, attended the New Orleans conference of the Southern Section of the American Public Health Assn., where she was installed as a member of the Governing Council for 1955-56.

A frequent participant in regional health conferences, she also spoke before the Durham Woman's Club at its meeting this week.

Dr. Eunice N. Tyler, professor of public health education, was a consultant at a gathering of state directors of health education, who met in Spring Mill, Ind., for a four-day conference. She also served as consultant for the last meeting of the South Carolina Health Education Division, held in Columbia.

The head of the Health Education Dept., Dr. Lucy S. Morgan, was in Miami, Fla., recently for the Southeastern Adult Education Assn. meeting, of which she was elected vice-president. She has in the past served on the Executive Board and program committee.
