Needed: More Flutes

Newspaper headlines don't always make us wince and gnash our teeth. Announcement of the Ford Foundation Grant of $246; ooo for research in the behavioral sciences is a cheery note.

But good news for the University right now is but a flute trill above the discord, at least to a superficial observer. Just listen:

1. The Presidential Situation: The University is still playing the role of a headless horseman with its president in Washington. This is not to detract from Dr. Purks' own capacity, since it is above the power of any man to function to full effect as an "acting" president.

2. Finances: The 1955 N. C. General Ast sembly granted neither staff additions nor permanent improvements to the University. in an hour when the need for both is crucial.

3. Undergraduate Education: Not altogether dark, since the administrative changes recommended by Cresap, McCormick and Paget brought Deans Spruill, Johnson, and Sitterson into greater prominence in the total University picture. But encroachment the desk and ripped of the top of the B. A. School and other agitators for three inches of paper from the vocational study on the soundness of under-typewriter (this is always a good graduate curriculum, understressed academ- beginning), and then tried to think ics, concentration on graduate schools to the detriment of the undergraduate plague this quarter of the University.

4. Ultimate Policy-Making: The recent AT THIS juncture we noticed action on admission of Negro undergrad- a small stack of smaller scraps uates-in which the decision was appealed- of paper lying on the desk. They shows, we think, that the power of the Trus- had been typed upon. The top tees to override local administrative attitude one read as follows: and general faculty will is growing. Not only "I never met a man I didn't do the Trustees now make policy; they move like'-Will Rogers. closer by the day to being its executors.

The newly-creeted Board of Higher Education will pose catchy questions. What relation will it have to policy in Chapel Hill?

5. Enrollment: No downward trend to be never laughed at that little joke, seen. A thumb can't be pushed into a thimble and the problem of selectivity must be faced.

6. Student Union: We have come to the fork of the road in the student union issue. We will either stagnate in old, inadequate Graham Memorial, or begin to think about a building with equipment equal to our

Now, where was that flute?

Free Enterprise & Local Dry Cleaners

If Im experts questioned by The Daily T. Teel are correct in their interpretation there were (and we think then are), local dry cleaning of painfully humorous paper. establishments are sticking students and breaking a state law.

It is illegal in North Carolina to form any hadn't heard it over and over and "contract, combination in the form of trust over before, because we had, but or otherwise or conspiracy in restraint of simply because it has a zany trade or commerce . . . "Apparently, local quality about it that worms its cleaners have broken this law in agreeing to way under our cynical defenses up their prices.

Free enterprise demands a system of com- particularly stimulating brand of petition under which businesses compete, intellectual pickle juice: setting their prices individually. And there is doubt whether cleaning establishments in Chapel Hill are very free-or very enterprising, for that matter.

The Daily Tar Heel

The official student publication of the Publications Board of the University of North Carolina, where it is published daily except Monday

Managing Editor

Rothschild.

and examination and vacation periods and summer terms, Entered as second class matter in the post of- ter.

BILL BOB PEEL worm? Business Manager

Associate Editor J. A. C. DUNN

News Editor JACKIE GOODMAN

NEWS STAFF - Neil Bass, Charles Dunn, James Nichols; Mike Vester, Bennie Baucom, Bunny Klenke, Ruth Rush, Curtis Gans, Jimmy Purks, Joan McLean, Nancy Link, Bill Corpening, Virginia Hughes, Clarke Jones, Wilson Cooper, Charlie Sloan, Jerry Cuthrell, Peg Humphrey, Nancy

EDITORIAL STAFF - Rueben Leonard, Bill O'Sulli-

Staff Cartoonist

Night Editor For This Issue ____-Rueben Leonard gest the "Gomango."

Carolina Front

Bits Of Glup & A Tip For A Boulevardier

J.A.C. Dunn

WE CAME blasting into the editorial office of this newspaper last Monday afternoon, feeling bright-eved and bushy-tailed, ready for anything the clattering halls of journalism might bring us; we flung off our coat (we only have one to share among us), whipped out glasses, polished them with a piece of the editor's copy

Christine Jorgenson."

This is true. We never did. We either. Not even the first three

We went on to the next one: "disestablishmentarianism

I had one,

but the wheels came off." We have heard this before. This, if we recall correctly, is a comment retailed to us some time ago from only as far away as the next county, and has been bandied around the editorial office on various occasions since then whenever the spirit of levity goes out of control.

THIS SORT of glurk continued throughout the collection. In all about 15 scraps painfully humorous paper. away except one, which liked very much-not because we and daubs our duodenum with a

"Gotta go back to Tara Tararaboomdeay There'll be just two in our bed

But ashley the wars over lawsy me miss scarlett."

LAWSY US. Recently it seems we have been battling, or perhaps we should say 'earnestly discussing,' the question of the editorial We with a gentleman named A. Starr. Mr. Starr sent us another letter the other day, which we are not going to quote because we have finished with

Mr. Starr as column subject mat-fice in Chapel Hill, N. However, we were informed C., under the Act of recently, by a gentleman who March 8, 1879. Sub- shall remain nameless (practicalscription rates: mail- ly everyone does in this column), ed, $4 per year, $2.50 that Mark Twain once remarked a semester; delivered, on the editorial We to the foll-$6 a year, $3.50 a se- owing effect: That the only people who should be allowed to use ED YODER, LOUIS KRAAR the editorial We were editors (we are one, as a quick look at the masthead will show), pastors, and FRED POWLEDGE people with tape worms. Daddy can we have a dime for a tape-

> EDWARD AND James Gaylord have written to Ed Yoder, from the Hotel Ritz (15 Place Vendome, Paris) asking him to help them pick a name for what they term "A brandnew American automobile" which is "making its debut on October 6th at the Paris Automobile Salon." They say the car has a 300 HP engine, a custom-built body, and that all their mechanical problems are solved. Now they want a name for the car, one that begins with G, as does their own name. The Charlie Daniel car is plugged as perfect for the "scart bonlevardier," We sug-

-English Club-

Placement Bureau Statistics Still Not The True Measure

John Mahoney

(The Daily Tar Heel welcomes the English Club and its distinguished penmen back to the editorial page. Old readers will no doubt remember the notorious "X -Clawhammers On The Bathroom Floor" controversy, the English Club's last of many before its departure from these columns. Back, now, for good, the club members will occupy this space weekly. Today's essay is a second look at an academic shotgun wedding .- The Editors:)

One of the most noticeable phenomena that has appeared on the academic sky in the period following World War II has been the strong and eager defense of the study of the humanities. This effort has had its effect in an apparent increase in interest in these studies, and in a closer working relationship between the representatives of business and industry and academicians.

An orientation seldom approaches, a commencement seldom passes which is not the scene of commendation for humanistic studies on the part of business and of friendly smiles of welcome on the part of professors. It may be said, however, that this new rapport of helpfulness between the two groups has produced an unfortunate unity, a unity based for the humanities on the principles of de-

There is scance a scholar or teacher who does not appear on each new academic scene armed with statistics from placement bureaus and girt with the delights in industry for prospective employees who have studied the Classics. By a quantitative evaluation of such facts, there seem to be no subjects more profitable to study than language or history, Mterature or even philosophy. The only inevitability for this alliance of usefulnes, and it seems an unhappy one, is that since the humanities have chosen to take their stand for continuance in the role of an outstanding and efficient means, they will eventually, if the program persists, forget their own pur-

STRONGEST IMPETUS

The only reason for such studies which is compelling enough to convince any but the economic-minded student lies not in the prospect of a slide into the glories of industry, but in appreciation of the tradition which has generated these pursuits into curricula even today. In other words, one may even suggest that the strongest impetus to the study of Latin is that it always has been studied, and that in love of the Classics one may find an alliance more historic, more traditional, and perhaps even more warm than in acceptance into the program of benevolent business.

It is comforting for some to believe that the proudest progress the humanities have seen has been only an ornamental one; moreover, this unity of tradition still attracts many students to pursue knowledge and truth as ends unjoined to later promotions in advertising, has led them to seek admittance into the reassuring sameness over centuries that characterizes intellectual endeavor. Medicine has moved remarkably in a short space of time from concern with the magical powers of rare stones and the medicinal values of herbs to problems about the radioactive discovery of tumors and problems about frontal lobotomies; business has gone from guilds to slave labor and back again; advertising executives, more recently, sweat to discover new techniques to make their clients' products necessities; but truth remains the pursuit of learning, and the technique is essentially that of the ancient

NO GUARANTEE

It is possibly not certain then that the immense apologia which has been developed for the humanities is either sound theoretically or reliable practically. There is no guarantee to accompany the role of a vested interest of automobile-makers; there is no assurance that the alliance will be maintained when someone discovers that philosophy does not improve automobiles and that English literature will not render insurance sales high-

It disturbs me to think that so few of the students who pour into required courses in the impractical arts and sciences are not told that they are indeed impractical, are not offered opportunity to study because they came to college to learn what sometime everyone learned, and do not hear that they are doing so predominantly because no one has discovered a better way to become educated. If educators tend to be unrealistic, as has been frequently charged, they are so partly because they imagine a student will study English grammar on the grounds that it will contribute to his future career. One would think this subject might seem more justifiable labor to him if he knew that its purpose is a mental one, measurable only by the code of personal evaluation and improve-

In any case, more might be contributed to the cause of the humanities if at least a few of its exponents could be mentally incapable of defense and even a bit aristocratic in their conviction of purpose. The name of student and teacher is a proud one, but one so defined in its meaning and sound that it blends not well with the euphonic symbols of organized practical purposefulness on an office door.

'Uncultured'

The Geneva spirit descended just in time to waft flocks of Congressmen to Moscow, an unexpected boom to the Russian people. Now fo ra few weeks they have visitors around who can explain to them what they, the people, want. Congressmen are good at that; it takes scholars and diplomats and the responsible press months and years, and then they aren't positive, but Congressmen can tell what people want in a day or two. This uncanny insight works fine at home, and apparently it works in Russia too. Senator Ellender discovered that the Russian people don't want war. Senator Malone discerned that the Russian people don't want to rise against their rulers. Representative Joe Holt found that the Russian people want American jazz.

Malone was in Russia nine days, and discovered that the Voice of America is pointless and wasteful, because the people over there aren't going to revolt against the Soviets. Holt found that the Russians wouldn't let him look to much. "About all you can see," said Holt and his companion Representative John J. Rhodes, "are museums and Lenin's tomb." -Also, their guides kept leaving them to take care of pro-Communist delegations.

But worst of all, Holt was detained at pistol point for an hour by a Red Army lieutenant. One bit of the conversation on that occasion, as reported by the Congressman, is especially interesting. "He poked the gun about a foot from my face and it was cocked an dhe shouted 'Your're uncultured! You're uncultured!' I said, 'I sure am'."

Y-Court Corner___

Garbage Cans; The Place For Sex And Men?

Rueben Leonard

CHARLES DUNN did a magnificent job in presenting to the readers of The Daily Tar Heel his opinion of just what the relationship between young men and women should be prior to marriage. Although the major part of his column. Over The Hill, was a speech presented to his summer school class, he nevertheless concurred with its content. To quote Mr. Dunn, " . . . Take it for what it is worth. My only comment is that I wish I had said it."

THE TEXT of the speech presented by someone in Mr. Dunn's class stated that "Almost every man is out for all he can get in everything he does; business, politics, women, even fishing and hunting." Of these many things that man is out to get, woman, is the only one elaborated on by Mr. Speechmaker. Mr. Speechmaker implies that "almost every man" is lascivious, libidinous, lustful, lewd, wanton, immoralbut more important, that he habitually indulges his sexual lust and no woman is safe within his arm's reach. I ask you, do you really believe that implication? I say NO, you don't believe it and you never will.

MR. SPEECHMAKER does not stop with labeling "almost every man" an iconoclast, but continues his moaning by saying that men do not respect women, men's hands and minds are filthy, and weak men say "Yes" to the curvaceous Jezebels of todaystrong men say no. After reading that I was afraid to put Saturday morning's paper near the desk lamp for fear it would break out in a rash of illegitimate

WHERE DO you draw the line between morality and immorality? Is everything on one side moral and everything on the other side immoral? What if some couple do have intimate relations before mariage—is this filthy, does it degrade the persons involved, are they to be cast on the garbage heaps of society? Of course sex to some people is filthy-to filthy people everything is filthy, but "almost every man" does not fall into this cate-

Let's suppose a couple has sexual relations and doesn't get married. Although this poses an entirely different problem, it is basically the same. Is this couple to be tossed into rapids of public oinion and finger pointing? Are they to be socially damned? Who is the judge-Mr. Speechmaker, me, You? No. we are not the ones to pass judgement on these people, but due to the existing social conditions we are compelled to peer down our sanctimonious beaks at this hypothetical couple and and pity them in their quagmire of filth and squalor. Is it really filth and squalor? Could they possibly be in love at the time and consider their actions something beautiful and wonderful? So what if they don't get married, isn't it better to find out before mariage that they are not right for each other than to wait until there are children to share their unhappines with them?

BACK TO Mr. Speechmaker. He says men are out to ruin every young girl, old girl, and female in general that enters an few instances, but most men don't really enjoy something that isn't mutually shared. I admit this may be true in some instances, but most men exercise some degree of discretion. What are men supposed to be anyhow -a group if bovine, phlegmatic, and vegetablelike ninnies?

is a nice thought though.) 1 meremember that old adage, "When are three pointing back at you." roll.

Indignity

Brooks Atkinson In The New York Time

(Brooks Atkinson of the New York To of American drama critics, is also a ma political conscience. Hear below his inde Rep. Walter's inquiry into the actino and the reflections it threw over Broads What good purpose was served by the tion of 23 actors by the House Un-America ties Committee?

One confessed his sins, which he has reported voluntarily to the FBI and recolution from the

tee. During thes of hearings and witnesses and the tee members san growled at each uniform tones of indignation. To proved at least level of conver-

Three of the witnesses did not invoke the ion of any constitutional amendment. The ones who have the sourage of their ke against testifying before a congressional about their private beliefs and association Since they stood on principle, their coun be respected, or they can be automatically contempt of Congress; they are likely serious trouble and they may have to se Those who claimed the protection of comamendments are in a relatively secure in COMMITTEE'S FINDINGS ALREADY KIN

But what good purpose was served by fi of public hearings? No one knows anything not known before. The one man who com sins had already confessed them to the Government agency, and might decently spared the humiliation of having to M them in public. But even before the hearings began "

ous that they could not sustain Ren Francis E. Walter's assertion that he wa try to find out who was contributing to the of Communist unions. The witnesses he'co so minor and obscure, at least in the the their earning power is modest. Even if they were Communist sympathia the hearing did not prove, any contribu could make would not pay the deficit of Worker for one day.

At the conclusion of the first day's hear Walter made one statement that Actors would be justified in asking him to withen ring to the balky witness he said: "I had these people have demonstrated that something to be concealed in the frame the (theatrical) unions, something that was to make them as captive as the United I Workers and the Mine, Mill and Smelters w 'AS POPULAR AS SMALLPOX'

Later Mr. Walter qualified this statement having been prompted by one of his coll But it was a gratuitous defamation of organization. In Actors Equity and in the in general, Communism is about as por smallpox. There was a time in the 30s v wingers gave Actors Equity a lot of troo trouble was caused by the fact that mos had no use for left-wingers and fought

Although the Communist party is a legal party, Congress has passed legislation that restricts its activities on the assumption is an international conspiracy, as it is the left-wingers in the theater has violated these laws he can be indicted by a grand! tried in the courts. That is the traditional can way. It is also the best way that people have been able to devise

No congressional committee, maneuveral sensitive areas of personal thought, belief ciation, can preserve the moral health of try as the courts do. DOUBTS RAISED IN PUBLIC MIND

Over the last five years, in fact, concommittees have weakened the moral the country. They have provoked Amend distrusting Americans. They have spread cord and suspicion; and one of them has I doubts in the public mind as to the loyal

Congressional committees have the right to inquire into conspiratorial acts that it out to be the basis for new legislation. But into belief and association do not have sanction. They may invade the area of Amendment, which law that, among old abridges the freedom of speech or of or of the right of the people peaceably is Whatever the legal sanction may or may it is certain that no Congressman or colls committee is endowed by God with enough standing to preside over another citizens or associations. No man, Congressman or enough to operate simultaneously as prostorney, judge and parish priest

If by some unforseeable stroke of Divi dence a Congressman turned up who was their reach. This may be true in of passing judgment on questions of would be wise enough to refuse to do » would know where demagoguery begins JEFFERSON ON 'CENSORIAL POWER'

"If we advert to the nature of republic ment," Jefferson said, "we shall find that rial power is in the people over the and not in the Government over the peop is why people go to the polls.

In and out of the theater there are minded people who hope that some day in I DO not advocate free love (it States Government will support the the that the British government supports ! ly wish that people would take theater through the autonomous Arts Co the "filthy" label off sex and as idea is reasonable on many grounds and they start to criticize others re- Arts Council is an admirable organization ... The Russian government does not you point your finger at some- loyalty of the Russian theater. It see one else remember that there long time ago by putting the theater pro

"Shall We All Recognize The Situation?"

