Collison Expects More Than 100 In Car Caravan; Rally Night Be Slated In Athens

TH Voted Out Pan-Hel Meeting

Daily Tar Heel reporter was ejected from yesterday afternoon meeting of the Pan-Hellenic Council.

The reporter asked on what grounds the council was denying the right to freedom of the press, a member replied the council last year not to allow newspaper coverage of meetings.

Member reported that the National Pan-Hellenic Council had rejected their position.

The council's chief objection to news coverage seemed to be they felt nothing was discussed during their meetings that was of interest to the entire campus. The reporter pointed out that not one word printed in The Daily Tar Heel was of interest to every member on the campus.

"There are some people interested in what happens in the Pan-Hellenic Council. Our purpose is to inform those who are interested."

The request of the reporter, a vote was taken on the council's request. The council unanimously decided to deny the newspaper coverage.

Editors Ed Yoder and Louis Kraar, upon hearing the council's decision, issued a statement:

"The Pan-Hellenic Council has seen fit to bar the campus newspaper from its meetings. The Daily Tar Heel will bar Pan-Hel from its pages."

"From now on, as far as we are concerned, Pan-Hel does not exist. This will remain our position until they grant entrance into their meetings. And this policy will be reflected in the paper by giving all reference and publicity of the organization."

"This is not done in spirit of malice or contempt for Pan-Hel. We are doing this—denying Pan-Hel its right to news space—because it has denied The Daily Tar Heel and the campus its right to news."

RESIDENT DIES:

Phi Knocks Down Bill for Power Delegation

JERRY CUTHRELL

Speech was all but rammed through Phi Hall Tuesday night. Phi Assembly defeated a bill delegating presidential powers to the executive committee in the event the president should be incapacitated.

M. L. Matthews, who introduced the bill, said he must maintain security.

Rep. Duval introduced an amendment to the bill whereas the Supreme Court would decide with the expert advice of a medical board on the President's ability to perform his duties. Following the Supreme Court's decision, Congress would then vote the final decision.

The amendment, however, was defeated.

Rep. Englesby then proposed an amendment whereas "The Chief Executive's position in the government be assumed as is constitutionally ordained."

Englesby's amendment was passed after parliamentary haggling.

Debate on the amended bill then followed.

Larkin Kirkman, a guest, and Rep. Pittman said they felt that the bill in its new form was unnecessary.

Conditional Rep. Jess Stribbling said that it was superfluous to the Constitution.

A vote of 24 to four failed the bill.

Speaker for the evening was Rep. Englesby.

In executive session after the meeting, Conditional Reps. Monteith, Fussell, Pittman, and McGalliard were initiated into the Assembly. Rep. Englesby formally requested that he be reactivated.

'Macbeth' Turned Out Good

By CURTIS GANS

Macbeth, a film adaptation of the Shakespeare masterpiece presented free in Chapel Hill Tuesday evening, sponsored by the Film Committee of the Graham Memorial Activities Center under the direction of Miss Evans and Judith Anderson.

Macbeth and Lady Macbeth were the leading roles, ably assisted by House Staats Cotsworth and Waring, in this adaptation from a nationwide television play.

Although the film deviated from the original text slightly, the black and white version was as powerful in its effect as the Shakespearean play. Maurice Evans was excellent in the title role, especially in the soliloquies. Judith Anderson gave an equally good portrayal of Macbeth's wife, who led him into murder, and then was troubled by her conscience.

The supporting actors, especially Staats Cotsworth as Banquo,

'It's Not Too Late,' He Says, For Trip

The car caravan to the Carolina-University of Georgia football game in Athens will leave from Woollen Gymnasium at about 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, Hear Cheerleader Collie Collison announced yesterday.

He added he expected almost 200 students to make the trip to the game, and he hoped many more would attend the game.

Special Issue Of Newspaper This Weekend

A special Athens edition of The Daily Tar Heel will be published Friday night.

The edition, containing news and features about the University of Georgia and Athens, will be shipped to Georgia via train in time for distribution early Saturday morning and at the football game that afternoon.

Editors said copies of the Saturday morning paper also will be distributed on the campus for students who stay behind. Due to the expected exodus of students, editors plan to leave copies of the paper in Graham Memorial and Y-Court, in addition to small numbers in dormitories, fraternities and sororities.

Editors said due to the early publication hour Friday, and the fact the paper will contain only Athens news, pertinent weekend notices should be submitted this afternoon before 4 o'clock.

The Sunday morning edition, with news of the UNC-University of Georgia game, will be circulated as usual and will contain regular campus news.

Although Chancellor R. B. House has said there will be no classes Saturday, in spite of the train caravan being cancelled, Collison said if too few of the students took advantage of the holiday, the administration may possibly discontinue such free holidays in the future.

Anyone wishing to reserve hotel rooms in Atlanta Hotel in Atlanta can do so by calling Collison at the Chi Phi fraternity house on Columbia St. The phone number is 8-9073. Up to four people can be put in a room, he said. Prices are $2.75 for each person sleeping on a double bed, and $3.50 for a single bed.

Collison said "It still isn't too late for students to plan to make the trip. We can all get together and have one heck of a big weekend. We'll get together in front of the gym and drive down to Georgia in a caravan. Let's give Georgia a big sample of that Carolina spirit. Together we can make it one of the best weekends of the year."
