After Representative Terms Officials Inert

By NEIL BASS

The University has been and is taking action to correct the student car problem, according to Consolidated University Secretary William Friday. Friday's statement was made yesterday in response to an accusation by state Rep. John Umstead that the University hadn't done "anything" to solve the problem.

Umstead, member of the University's Board of Trustees, asked the Chapel Hill-Carrboro Merchants Assn. Tuesday night to appoint a committee to "investigate" the student car problem. He said he felt the trustees should take action because the administration had failed to act.

Crowell Little, president of the association told a reporter yesterday he had appointed the committee, but that no real "action" was planned on the problem. Little, who said he was personally opposed to the formation of the committee, said anything that might come from it would be given only from the viewpoint of "interested citizens." Harvey Bennett of Chapel Hill has been named to head the committee, Little said.

When Dean of Student Affairs Fred Weaver was notified of Umstead's statement, he referred a reporter to his memorandum of April, 1955. The memorandum was addressed to Chancellor Robert House and pointed out that the University had taken definite steps to correct the "car problem."

TRUSTEE REPORT

Weaver's memorandum states that the University recognized the Visiting Committee of the Board of Trustees' two major recommendations and had complied with both of them.

The Visiting Committee recommended: (1) "That the administration attempt to improve the regulation of the use of cars."

(2) "That the administration consider seriously the question of the possession of cars by undergraduates."

Weaver's memorandum stated that point one had been complied with by the "program of compulsory registration of student automobiles and strict enforcement of regulations."

Point two was complied with, according to Weaver's memorandum, by the "serious consideration" that the Council of Student Affairs, the Administrative Board of Student Affairs and the Student Activities Staff gave to the problem. (See CARS, Page 4.)

Panty Raid

The first panty raid of the 1955-56 year took place last night, as a group of boys gathered at 12:15 a.m. in the Lower Quad, making noise highlighted by the playing of a trumpet. The group gathered in size and went to the court in front of Melver Dorm where it stayed five minutes. Then it went to Carr Dorm in a group of about 400 and remained there for 15 minutes. The raid ended up on the intersection of Cameron Ave. and Raleigh Rd., where the students began to disperse, partly due to police coercion at Carr, and to the need of sleep. No arrests were made.

Di Senators Favor School For Survival

A bill calling on the three military services to abolish "survival schools" was defeated in the Diabetic Senate Tuesday night.

Sen. David Reid, who introduced the bill, said with free men everywhere looking to the United States for moral and spiritual leadership, it must not fail them by adopting the methods of tyrannical Communism.

"Brainwashing schools such as exist at Stead Air Force Base," said Reid, "emphasize the horror of man's inhumanity to his fellow man."

Phi Says No To Election Of UN Man

By JERRY CUTHRELL

By a vote of 8 to 7 the Phi Assembly Tuesday night failed a bill which proposed that the U. S. chief delegate to the United Nations be elected by popular ballot.

The bill was vigorously attacked from several quarters. Rep. McGilliard, in reference to the UN delegate, said, "Why not elect the Secretary of State and the Secretary of Defense?"

"The delegate is not advisory to the President," Rep. Brumfield countered.

Speaking against the bill, Rep. Duvall emphasized that an elected delegate would have too much prestige and would overshadow the President. Rep. Katzenstein, elaborating further on Duvall's theme, said, "Point by point, I have torn the bill asunder."

Rep. Brumfield, in a final plea for popular vote of the delegate, encompassed "the good farmers of Yadkin County" and epitomized his speech with, "Why must we fear the people?"

There were five abstentions from the voting. Speaker for the evening was Rep. Taylor.

In executive session following the debate, five new members were initiated into the Phi. They were: Conditional Representatives Bentley, Cuthrell, Stribbling, Tedder and Tolman.

No Legislature

The student Legislature will not meet tonight or next Thursday due to fraternity rushing, according to Jack Stevens vice-president of the student body.

University Celebrates Anniversary

"Chapel Hill — this center of knowledge and culture, this home to seekers of learning of all nations, is a vastly different place from the same spot of 1793."

Those were the words of Peter O'Sullivan at yesterday's exercises commemorating the 162nd anniversary of the first state University in the country.

O'Sullivan, a member of the Carolina Playmakers and narrator, told the story of the cornerstone laying scene, which was re-enacted in pantomime and costumes before an assembly of faculty, administrative officials, students, alumni and townspeople.

The ceremonies, held in front of South Building, began with a musical program by the University Band, under the direction of Herbert Fred.

In the cornerstone laying scene Carl Williams of Charlotte took the part of Gen. William R. Davie, who laid the cornerstone in the actual ceremony.

June Eschweiler, graduate assistant in the Dept. of Drama, directed the pageant.

Chancellor Robert B. House was master of ceremonies and led the responsive reading, Dr. Samuel T. Habel, pastor of the Baptist Church of Chapel Hill, gave the invocation.

A minute of silence in honor of the University alumni who have died during the year was followed by "Integer Vitae" sung by the Men's Glee Club, directed by Dr. Joel Carter.

A color guard, composed of cadets of the Air Force and Navy ROTC units, led the assembly the Davie Poplar for the benediction and closing song, "Hark the Sound."

JAPANESE UNIVERSITY:

Shows Democracy's Better

By FRED POWLEDGE
Japanese universities, says Eiji Kojima, try to show their students that democracy is better than communism by helping them in a democratic way.

That way, he said yesterday, is a lot better than speaking out directly against the Communist Party, which is a legal organization in Japan.

Kojima is a professor of economic geography in Keio University, Tokyo. Currently studying American universities and colleges, he spent two days here this week.

Although economic geography is not a very political field, he said, the question of communism enters in at Keio. Approximately 200 Keio students are communists, he said, and there are cells in every college and university in Japan.

"We try our best to make student life comfortable," he said, and "try to make the financial condition of the students better." Thus, he feels, democratic methods will show the supremacy of democracy to communism.

"We don't say much directly about communism," Kojima said. He added that he and others at Keio try to ignore the fact that communism exists, and "just say that democracy is better."

Students who believe in communism, he said, are allowed to maintain their beliefs. Kojima said he would consider it an abridgment of a student's right to know if he were condemned for communistic leanings.

Kojima said Keio University was founded by Oikichi Fukuzawa, the man who introduced western educational methods to Japan. Fukuzawa also brought liberal thought and the "western way of thinking" to Japan, he said.

Exum Says UP Contains Folks Of Top Quality

By BENNIE BAUCOM

"We are surrounded in the University Party by men and women with integrity, character, unselfishness and an unbiased opinion except for an intense desire to do the best that they can for the student body. These are the students who should occupy leadership positions on this campus, and it is the UP's duty to inform the student body of them."

This was a statement made by Jim Exum, Legislature floor leader, in a meeting of the University Party Tuesday night in Graham Memorial.

During the business session an amendment to the constitutional bylaws was proposed by Jackie Cooper. This amendment is to revise the section of the constitutional bylaws concerning the UP's Legislature Committee.

The amendment states that members of the Legislature Committee shall consist of the vice-chairman of the UP, a member of the student Legislature, and one member from each election district, each of whom shall be UP chairman for his respective district. At least one-half of the total members of the committee shall not be members of a social fraternity or sorority, according to the amendment.
