MOD IS 'DISTURBING'

Modern Novels Discussed

Doris Betts, Francis Jones, Jessie Rehder, Phillips, and Richard Walser discussed last night at a panel on "Present Day Writing" sponsored by the English Department and held in the Assembly Room of the library. The group, chaired by the group discussed many phases of modern writing, criticism, and approach to literature, and the influence of Freud on modern novel. Mrs. Patton, who influenced writers in her work, the influence of Freud on modern novel. Mrs. Patton, who influenced writers in her work, the influence of Freud on modern novel.

BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION STUDENTS:

Wise Student Investors Aid Local Chest Drive

The Chapel Hill Community Chest is $155.23 richer because business administration students in investment classes last year invested wisely, making a net profit of $310.46.

The chest treasury also benefited from a student contribution of $100 from the Campus Chest. Graham Rights, senior from Winston-Salem and Campus Chest representative, made the presentation. Provisions of the grant established the Reynolds Student Investment Trust are that one-half of the net profits be added to the principle and that the other half be contributed to the Chapel Hill Community Fund.

Directory Planned For Next Week

The 1955-56 Student Directory should be ready for distribution by the end of next week, according to YMCA authorities.

Last year the book did not go on sale until late November. This year's staff decided to check the proofs by their own copy, instead of posting them in the Y for student correction. Thus the book will be distributed a month earlier.

Copies of the directory will be sold in the Y and at the information desk in Graham Memorial. The price has not been set.

Men's Rush Stops For Little While

Men's rushing has stopped temporarily with parties at all the houses Thursday night.

Parties will start again tomorrow from 3 to 5:30 p.m., and will continue on Monday, Wednesday and Thursday from 7 to 9:30 p.m. A strict silence period will be observed from 9:30 p.m. Oct. 21 until noon on Oct. 24. Pledge day will begin at noon on Oct. 24.

Rushes have been reminded by the Interfraternity Council to carefully observe the following rules:

- (1) A new student must visit each fraternity house from which he received an invitation on the first or second night of rushing.
- (2) A rushee must observe the regulated hours of rushing. Outside of the rushing hours, fraternities men are not allowed to engage in any conversation with rushees other than an exchange of salutations.
- (3) A rushee must not shake-up until the given date.

Homecoming Weekend Is Underway Today With UNC-Maryland Contest, Crowning Of Queen And Grail Dance

Trophies For Displays To Be Awarded Today

Homecoming weekend will get officially underway today at 2 p.m. when Carolina's Tar Heels will clash with the Maryland Terrapins.

During half-time exercises the homecoming queen will be crowned by Don Fowler, president of the student body. The selection of the queen depends upon the results of student voting. The 13 candidates are as follows:

Misses Beth Porter, Joan Wilsey, Jimmie Council, Louise Coffey, Margie Cooke, Gwen Heinzen, Carole McDaniel, Pat Howard, Shirley Carpenter, Nancy Shuford, Anne Wrenn, Sally Patterson and Barbara Flesham.

All 13 candidates will be escorted on the field during the half by an NROTC section, after which the results of the elections will be announced.

The first portion of the half-time exercises will be used by the University Band. During this time the band will present a show based on favorite television and radio "whodunits," according to spokesman Scott Hester.

The first band skit, said Hester, will center around the popular Lone Ranger series. To the accompaniment of the "William Tell Overture," Silver will be madly chased by Indians.

The second skit, a tribute to Jack Webb's "Dragnet," will show Friday "really getting into the Saturday act", according to Hester. The final scene will recognize the FBI, the Maryland Terrapins and the Tar Heels.

Herbert Fred will direct the band performance, the Guyte Cotten will be drum major. In preparation for today's program, the band practiced 45 minutes in a downpour of rain Thursday afternoon.

Also during half-time exercises, trophies will be awarded to those organizations with the best "football spirit" displays. Winners will be selected from four groups of organizations—the men's dormitories, coed dormitories, fraternities and sororities. If an organization wins a trophy for three years in succession, the trophy may be retained.

A pep rally, replete with a bonfire at Woollen Gym, was held last night. Also a homecoming dance was sponsored last night by the Order of the Grail.

A large number of Maryland students is expected for the game, according to Head Cheerleader Colbie Callison, since this is their annual caravan weekend.

Students Whoop At Y-Court Rally

Hundreds of Tar Heels, led by the University Band, started off homecoming weekend last night with the second pep rally of the year.

Winding through the campus, up Franklin St. and back through the campus to Woollen Gym, the group yelled and cheered its prediction of the UNC-Maryland game here today.

After the informal parade, many of the students attended a Grail dance.

BUT THERE'LL BE MIST TONIGHT:

Upper 60s Predicted

No blankets or umbrellas needed by the end of the game.

A chilly damp mist is predicted to descend over the Chapel Hill area by evening. Students taking their dates to outdoor affairs should remember to wrap them up in blankets, take one along for themselves, and keep an umbrella close around, according to a spokesman for the Weather Bureau.

Light weight woollens and heavy cottons are in order, for the atmosphere promises to be a mild sticky one. Male spectators will probably be in rolled up shirt

It's Homecoming Weekend

It's homecoming weekend, and that means homecoming displays. The Pi Phi were busy yesterday getting this one up in front of their sorority house. Winners in men's and women's dormitory, fraternity and sorority divisions will receive trophies at halftime ceremonies today. (Henley Photo)

IN CHAPEL HILL:

Record Shows Frats Suffer Most Blazes

By NANCY LINK

With National Fire Prevention Week ending today, members of the Chapel Hill Fire Dept. scratched their heads and reviewed some of the major fires in this university town.

Two-thirds of the major fires here, according to the department, have occurred at fraternities.

The most destructive fires on the campus in recent years were at the Public Service Building, the Kappa Alpha house and the Pi Kappa Phi house, Asst. Fire Chief W. H. Ray says.

On Dec. 11, 1945, after two hours of fire-fighting in falling sleet, firemen extinguished the

The Jones Airplane Will Be Back Today

For the first time this year, the Jones Pork Sausage airplane will fly over Kenan Stadium.

The plane, tugging its 70-foot advertising banner, has been a familiar sight during recent years to football spectators. Several students have expressed dismay that the plane hasn't flown over this year.

But Jones spokesman said yesterday the plane will be back.

International Organization Formed Here

A group of 25 persons met in the Cabinet Room of the YMCA this week and accepted a constitution establishing the International Relations Council.

Graham Rights, president of the YMCA, convened the meeting.

Larry Lauerhaas, chairman of the steering committee, presented the constitution point by point and opened the floor for discussion. Discussion, however, was light and only minor changes were made in the document's structure. It was accepted by a unanimous voice vote.

The aims and purposes of the IRC as set forth in the preamble to its constitution are "to further understanding of international relations and politics, and to stimulate interest in foreign policy."

It was pointed out at the meeting that the IRC, in contrast to the Cosmopolitan Club, will have as its primary concern not cultural, but political relations on the international plane.

Election of officers was postponed to a later date.

'Ondine' Held Over One Day; Big Sellout

"Ondine" has been held over until Monday because the tickets have been in such great demand.

John Parker, business manager for the Playmakers, said the production was almost a complete sellout on opening night, and a complete sellout on other nights.

"The crowds were so big that we had to start selling standing room," said Parker.

Comments of the audiences seem to show they think the show is very colorful, he said, and in the fall the theatre seems to draw people.

"Mrs. Jane Albans is a very accomplished actress, and the audience really enjoys watching her perform," he said. Along with the experienced Playmakers, there are several freshmen in the cast.

This, by no means, seemed to hold the players back, according to Parker, who said the cast is up to a fine standard.

STUDENT WIVES

The Student Wives' Club will meet Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the Victory Village Recreation Center. All student wives have been invited to attend.

RESIDENT ELKINS

looking for hard game

Maryland Chief Elkins Lives Here

and University President

John H. Elkins arrived in Chapel Hill yesterday afternoon. Elkins, arriving late, expected that the plane on which the team were traveling would land for two hours bad weather conditions. He was at the Washington Duke Hotel in Durham.

Now in his second year at UNC, Elkins is a native Texan and a good part of his homecoming today, Elkins said, "We have a good team from Carolina does also. I am looking forward to a good game."
