Soccer Team Ties Virginia Game Extended For 2 Overtime Periods

BISHOP'S BUNK

By Wayne Bishop

Carolina's Tar Heels dropped their second consecutive football game Saturday afternoon, but they showed some promise for the coming games with their last half play against the highly-ranked Maryland Terrapins. The Tar Heels looked good in the final two periods, outscoring their foes 7-6 and showing a good, stout defensive line.

The Tar Heels reversed their usual style of play in Saturday's contest and actually outplayed their opponents in the final half. In the other games this year the Tar Heels have wilted in the final two stanzas after putting up a big first half fight. That was the case when Oklahoma came back from 6-0 to win 13-6; State trailed 19-6 but fought back and only lost 25-18 after running the Tar Heels ragged with their last half passing; Georgia led only 14-7 at halftime but wound up a big 28-7 victor. This week, however, Barclay's boys stood in there and fought it out to the final whistle. They never quite had the offense to push over a touchdown although they had one golden opportunity midway of the final half.

Maryland's only persistent drive in the last half was an 89 yard march for the last touchdown. Other than that the Tar Heels held them in check.

MARYLAND LINE ROUGH:

The Maryland line proved very rough to the Carolina quarter-backs. Time and again Dave Reed and Ron Marquette would be thrown for big losses. For Reed, it was the second straight week of getting a bad beating. The spunky little sophomore probably had a rougher time in Georgia than he did against the Terps. Every time Reed went back to pass against the Terps, either 225-pound Bob Pellegrini or some other 220-pound lineman was about to jump down his throat. It seems quite an accomplishment that Reed completed as many passes as he did. Marquette faced the same trouble on his few attempts. Buddy Sasser, who did not enter the game until 5:20, remained, was backed deep into his own territory and never did have any room to flash his stuff. Sasser fired three passes, missing two with a receiver dropping one.

The Tar Heels came out of the game with only a net rushing total of 17 yards. At halftime Barclay's team had 44 yards net, but big losses on attempted passes cut down the margin considerably. The Tar Heels actually moved the ball somewhat better than that. They picked up ten first downs during the game, four by passing, four by rushing, and two on penalties.

SATURDAY'S GAME:

Saturday the Tar Heels go to Wake Forest for their game with the unpredictable Deacons. Wake Forest is winless since their two spectacular upsets over VPI and South Carolina to open the season. Since then Tom Rogers' squad has dropped games to West Virginia, Maryland, and tied State.

Nick Consoles, Wake Forest quarterback, is the Wake Forest offense. His passes have been the only means of advance for the Deacons so far this year. It was his tosses that pulled the Deacons out of a rut in the fourth quarter Saturday night, to come back and tie the Wolfpack 13-13.

With the Carolina tossing improved, maybe Consoles and Reed can lock up in a good pitcher's duel.

The Carolina Tar Heels and the Virginia Cavaliers battled to a 1-1 tie in a hard fought soccer match played at Charlottesville yesterday afternoon.

The Tar Heels took an early lead on the strength of a goal booted in by letterman Pat McCormick, and held the upper hand until the fourth quarter when Dan Rojas of Virginia knotted the score with a goal. The two teams played two five minute overtime periods, but neither squad was able to break the deadlock.

The two evenly matched outfits played well throughout, with neither squad having much of an edge. The Tar Heels and Cavaliers also fought to a 1-1 standoff last year the only time they met, as well as finishing in a second place tie in the final conference standings.

Coach Marvin Allen's Tar Heels were led by Pete Cothran, Pat McCormick, and Calvin Lane on offense, while defensive standouts including Jim Bunting and Joe Mavretic.

The next meet for the Tar Heels comes on Friday when they tangle
