Part Of Campus As Viewed From Blimp

Chapel Hill and vicinity had a visitor over the weekend—a blimp, which floated over the town advertising its product and flashing messages in lights at night. Press Photo Photographer Roland Giduz, along with other local lensmen, took a ride in the blimp which was moored at Horace Wil-

GMAB Film Committee Adds To Free Series

Seven additional movies have been added to the Graham Memorial Activities Board Film Committee's "free flicks" series.

The movie slate will begin this Friday night with a showing of "Tap Roots," the film adaptation of James Street's novel of the Civil War in the South. Van Heflin and Susan Hayward head an all-star cast.

Other movies on the series include "Winchester '73" on Nov. 11, "Son of Frankenstein" on Nov. 18, "Because of You" on Dec. 2, "Sword in the Desert" on Dec. 16, "Has Anybody Seen My Gal?" on Jan. 6 and "Up Front" on Jan. 13.

Purpose of the scheduling, according to Miss Pat McBane, committee chairman, was to provide a variety of films which should appeal to everyone on campus. A costume drama, a western, a mystery, a modern drama, a war saga, a musical and a comedy are included. The free movies are shown every Friday night at 8 and 10 o'clock in Carroll Hall.

C. P. SPRUILL, NOW DEAN OF FACULTY, IN 1920:

'Dignified And Poplar...'

By ROBERT BARTHOLOMEW
"He looks at you straight and talks to you straight and then straightway goes and does just what he said he would, and yet (he) is with a quiet fellow, dignified and poplar."

This quotation is from the

DEAN OF FACULTY SPRUILL

1920 Yackety Yack, and it is located beneath the picture of Corydon P. Spruill Jr., who was recently appointed to the new position of dean of the faculty of the University.

LONG TIME
Dean Spruill has been connected with the University most of his life, entering as a freshman in 1916. He did leave the University in May of 1918 to enter the army as a private in the air corps, but was discharged in December of the same year. He was still able to finish along with his class despite this absence.

Also receiving a degree from the University in 1920 was a six-foot, four-inch mountain lad who was called "Buck" by his friends. He later became famous in the literary world as Thomas Wolfe.

Dean Spruill and Thomas Wolfe were close personal friends. Someone recently asked Spruill if Wolfe didn't embarrass his friends and members of his family by writing about them.

Band Plans A Combo For Campus

The University Band has voted to organize a combo to furnish music free of charge to various campus-wide, non-profit service functions, according to a band spokesman.

Such functions and projects as student-sponsored YMCA and YWCA events, orientation functions, campus-wide fund raising drives and "other worthwhile projects which reasonably fit into this category" will be played for the combo, he said.

Armstrong Named Head Of Halifax-UNC Group

Darrell Armstrong was recently elected president of the Halifax-Carolina Club.

Jim Warren was elected secretary-treasurer of the group. Miss Maria Hunter was appointed chairman of the band committee for the group's Christmas dance.

The group hopes to hold a dance between Christmas and New Year's Eve at the Roanoke Rapids Country Club, according to a spokesman.

Purks Speaks Tomorrow To Pi Sigma Alpha

Acting president J. Harris Purks will speak tonight at the inauguration ceremonies of John Curtis as Speaker of the Assembly of the Philanthropic Literary Society.

The ceremonies will be held at 8 o'clock on the fourth floor of New East. Dr. Purks will have as his topic the lack of contact between faculty and students and the need for such a contact.

Following Dr. Purks, Curtis, in his inaugural address will discuss the Phi as an organ to fill such a need.

The Philanthropic Society has, according to Speaker Curtis, experienced an amazing revitalization this year. Already it has more than doubled its membership this year, and the Society hopes for an even greater gain, he said. In line with this program, all interested students are invited to attend any meetings and to inquire about the possibility of membership, said Curtis. Long active in student affairs, the Phi hopes, said Speaker Curtis, "to become the 'campus watchdog,' a position it has held much of the time since its founding in 1795."

Due to the inauguration ceremonies and the reception which will follow, the Phi will dispense with the discussion and debate ordinarily taken up.

Dr. Purks became acting president of the Consolidated University in July, and has been provost since Jan. 1954. A native of Bartow, Ga., he is a physicist and former dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at Emory University. In the event that President Gordon Gray's resignation is accepted, some observers say Dr. Purks would be the logical successor.

Speaker Curtis, a native of Bessemer City, is a history major, although he intends to enter Medicine. (See PURKS, Page 4)

Late Permission

Late permission will be granted for coeds competing in and attending the Yackety Yack Beauty Contest Thursday night.

Coeds must return to their dormitories immediately after the contest is over, and must be back by midnight, according to Miss Sue Fink, chairman of the Women's Residence Council.

Di To Debate Cutting Money To Newspaper

A bill calling for The Daily Tar Heel to be put on a subscription basis will be debated tonight by the Dialectic Senate.

The Di meets at 8 o'clock on the third floor of New West, and guests have been invited to attend.

Playmakers To Tour Comedy

Starbuck, played by James Heldman (left), tells young Jim Curry, played by James Sechrest (right), "Jim, you're gonna be my first lieutenant," in the Carolina Playmakers' touring production of N. Richard Nash's comedy, "The Rainmaker." The drama group will present the new production from Nov. 9-13 in the Playmakers' Theatre, and will take the show on a tour of 12 towns of North and South Carolina and Georgia during its 50th tour season this fall.

Playmakers Will Take 'Rainmaker' On Tour

When the Carolina Playmakers go on their tri-state tour, Nov. 14-19 and Nov. 28-Dec. 3, they will be celebrating the 50th tour in a long and colorful tradition.

The play chosen for the "golden" tour is N. Richard Nash's comedy, "The Rainmaker," which will be presented in 12 towns and cities in North and South Carolina and Georgia, under the direction of Harvey Whetstone after its appearance at the Playmakers' Theatre here Nov. 9-13.

"The Rainmaker" takes place during a paralyzing drought in the West, and revolves about a plain girl whose father and two brothers are as worried about her becoming an old maid as they are about their dying cattle. When the glib con man, Starbuck, suddenly appears, he not only convinces the family that for $100 he can bring rain, but convinces the plain girl that every woman is pretty—if she's a real woman.

LIZZIE
The role of Lizzie, the plain girl whose father and two brothers are trying to marry her off, will be played by Louise Fletcher, Birmingham, Ala., who is entering her second year as a Playmaker. Her two brothers, one a dreamer, the other too practical, are played by veteran Playmakers James Sechrest, Thomasville, and Charles Barnett, Hickory. Lizzie's father, who is equally concerned over his daughter's spinsterhood, is portrayed by William Casstevens, Yadkinville.

Starbuck, the fast-talking and persuasive young "rainmaker" who brings fulfillment to the Curry household, will be James Heldman, Durham, who played the male lead in the Playmakers' opening production this season, "Ondine." The role of File, the woman-shy deputy whom Lizzie would like to handcuff, will be filled by Ken Lowry, Troy, Ohio, who has spent the past summer with the Myrtle Beach Playhouse. Carl Williams, Charlotte, who acted in "Ondine" and was stage manager for that production, will be the sheriff seeking outlaw Starbuck.

Stage manager for the production is Lewis Goldstein, Baltimore, Md., who directed the lighting for "Ondine," and June Eschweiler, Parma, Ohio, will again be master electrician; John Cauble, Hickory, is designing sets and lighting, and James Sechrest and Sue Whetstone will be in charge of costumes and make-up.

In his review of the first production of "The Rainmaker," Brooks Atkinson of The New York Times said, "Nothing so original and jovial has turned up on our stages for a long time." Two recent Playmaker tour productions have been "Arsenic and Old Lace" and "On Borrowed Time."

State Files Appeal For Negro Ruling

Notice of appeal was filed yesterday by the state from the special Federal court ruling which permitted three Durham Negroes to be admitted to the UNC undergraduate school.

Notice of the appeal to the Supreme Court was filed with the Durham lawyers who represented the three students.

Qualified applicants to the University could not be denied simply because of race or color, said the three judge court.

LABARRE DISCUSSES 'ULYSSES'

By CURTIS GANS

Prof. Weston Labarre of the Duke University Anthropology Dept. called James Joyce's Ulysses the greatest novel in the world, in a lecture sponsored by the English Club.

Prof. Labarre felt Ulysses had more to offer the individual than Tolstoy's War and Peace.

Labarre, whose lifelong interest has been Joyce, took the author's works in chronological order, beginning with the Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man. Of Finnegans Wake, Joyce's last novel, the speaker said he felt that it would remain a sort of mystery to readers and critics alike.

Professor Labarre laid particular emphasis on the writer's style, which utilizes the vocabulary of several different languages, and the punctuation which is highly irregular. He noted the influence of the Freud and Jung school, probably picked up by the author in Zurich, where Jung was at the time.

However, the speaker felt that two things in particular were basic in all of the Joyce writing. The first was a cyclical interpretation of history, and secondly the outpouring of his own schizophrenic tendencies.

He pointed out that Joyce, in writing his various books, plunged deeper and deeper into the heart of his problem, and buried the problem underneath his own symbolism.

Prof. Labarre recommended the works of Stuart Gilbert and Edwin Wilson as being the best critical works on Joyce on the market today.

In the question and answer session that followed, Morton Jacobs of the UNC English Dept. drew a parallel between Ulysses and Homer's Odyssey.

Following the speech, Prof. Labarre invited those present to inspect his collection of writings and criticism of Joyce.

The next English Club speaker will be E. E. Cummings, co-sponsored by the Graham Memorial Activities Board, in Hill Hall on Nov. 9.

Vice Bill Discussed By CPU

A resolution which proposed to repeal all laws which legislate in any way personal vice was discussed at the Sunday night meeting of the Carolina Political Union.

The resolution, introduced by Jim Turner, included laws pertaining to prostitution, gambling, alcohol, bigamy and Sabbath activities.

Jim Doar, CPU secretary, called the resolution one that involves one of today's forgotten political problems, that of personal liberty.

Turner, in presenting the bill, said an individual can do anything as long as he doesn't involve others. "The government is concerned with the likes and dislikes of society rather than with the individual, he said.

"In these days of totalitarianism, even in the United States the basic political axiom that the individual is sovereign in his personal actions lies covered by years of legislative and judicial encroachments," said Turner.

Officials at the meeting said no vote was taken but all that was present agreed with the persons arguing for the bill.

Doar said that the proposal is meant to apply to fully mature individuals only and not to children. "It does not purport to endorse any of the vices but merely to free them from legislative control," said Doar.
