

HOP'S BUNK

By Wayne Bishop

rejuvenated Tar Heels clash head-on with the nation's team, the Fighting Irish of Notre Dame, tomorrow afternoon in Stadium in a contest that can prove just how much Heels have.

have been established 28 point favorites in their seven games against a UNC football squad. Notre Dame has a 6-0 series so far, since it originated in 1949. Being rated for this game follows a routine for the Tar Heels, as they undergoes for six of their seven games this year, and for they were favored only against State, winning that game, by a 25-18 score. Since then the Tar Heels have run a losing streak, snapping out of that streak last Saturday against South Carolina with plenty of fury and fire. Coach George Sasser came back in that game to romp the Gamecocks 32-14 in a decisive offensive attack.

Heels plan to keep their red-hot ground attack in high gear. Last week the Carolina group punched out 248 yards on the ground, with the quarterback option picking up most of the yardage. Buddy Sasser was at the helm on that play, his speed to score all but one of the Tar Heel touchdowns, a 55-yard punt return was the only touchdown play that did not come from the option play.

picked up another nickname after the South Carolina game, called for two touchdowns on 71 and 55 yard sprints. Sasser turned to as the Cullowhee Comet after his performance in Forest last year, but now he has been dubbed as "Sudon."

WISLEY'S PICKS

South Carolina: The Gamecocks should be easy pickings for the Devils, with or without Sonny Jurgensen. The Gamecocks have a fine passer in Maekie Prickett, and he could turn the game around. If the Devils keep the USC receivers covered, the Tar Heels did last week, then there should be no trouble for the Murray-men. We figure something like that will happen in three touchdowns.

VPI: The Wolfpack are on the move against opposition that is quite rank with the elite. Coach Earle Edwards' boys have their stride and offense, now, and have swept through the opposition. VPI has a tough team and could easily give the Tar Heels a Saturday afternoon. On the basis of all-around speed the Wolfpack by a touchdown.

West vs. Virginia: Coach Tom Rogers is worried about his team's complacency for this contest. The Virginians have been quite good this season and figure the Deacons might be able to beat Wake Forest has an improved running attack to the passing of Nick Consoles and Charlie Carpenter, and Virginia by a couple of six-pointers.

vs. Notre Dame: The Fighting Irish bring one of the nation's most powerful teams into Tar Heels and are rated as the most powerful in the South. They will be playing a Tar Heel team that has been in this area have seen this year, a squad that is better than any which held Oklahoma to a 13-6 score. We are not going to give up on this time, but we will say the Tar Heels can make a game of it.

ENDS

North Carolina sophomore footballers were bitter rivals against North Carolina high schools. Guards Jack Lineberger and Hap Setzer of Lenoir opposed each other for four years at high school, and both tried to stop wingback Joe Temple. All three boys' teams were in contention for the same title while they were in school.

Heels have been unable to score a touchdown by a pass in seven games. All of the Tar Heels scores have come on ground plays (6) and defensive plays (7).

Ed and Buddy Sasser had not been able to cross an opponent in six games this season, but against South Carolina exploded, with Sutton scoring twice and Sasser scoring once.

WILL GRIMSLEY

STANTON, W. Va., Nov. 10: The Tar Heels are in the land of the living and the McCoy's, West Virginia are sharp pick-axes for their annual feud Saturday in the Orange Bowl.

Virginia is unbeaten, undefeated, and bowl-conscious. Pitt is a bowl-bound. We came down from town and avoid the heat of last week's 29-17 rout, which lowered the Tar Heels' record to 7-24.

Virginia 20, Pitt 13: The Tar Heels are averaging 436 yards per game, 41.1 points per game, and the game they've been playing.

49, Iowa State 0: The Tar Heels team continues to improve in the Orange Bowl.

27, Clemson 13: The Tar Heels have lost only to Rice in the Orange Bowl, but Maryland is tough but Maryland is in depth for a letdown.

34, North Carolina 14: The Tar Heels are improving in the Orange Bowl.

21, Indiana 19: Good news here. Michigan is pulling another of its losses.

28, Texas 21: The Orange Bowl is the incentive. The Tar Heels won three toughies in a row last week.

State 20, Minnesota 0: The Tar Heels probably have the best team in the Orange Bowl.

28, Yale 20: Rocco Sasser is the single-winger. He left a lot of fight on the field.

Washington 12: This is a tough one. The Rose Bowl is the incentive. The Tar Heels haven't won in a month.

Vanderbilt 19: Two touchdowns.

Barclay To Start Veteran Eleven

Same Group Opened Oklahoma Contest

With the same starters that opened the season against Oklahoma back at their old posts, the Carolina Tar Heels run into a heavily favored Notre Dame team tomorrow afternoon in their next to the last home encounter of the season.

Coach George Barclay put back his original eleven as the starting unit just before the South Carolina contest last week, and the Tar Heels came through with their most sustained offensive performance of the season by blasting the Birds 32-14. The same eleven held Oklahoma to a 13-6 tussle in the opener.

After the Sooner game, injuries and following likings caused injuries in the Tar Heel ranks, causing the line-up to be shifted about. At one stage, eight sophomores were in the starting group. Now, Coach Barclay has his original eleven back into the fold and at full strength for the first time since September 24.

NOT SELLOUT

A 35,000 crowd is expected for the fourth home game of the 1955 campaign. The game is far from being a sellout as was earlier reported. Quite a few more tickets are remaining at the present, and it is quite doubtful whether the 44,000 capacity will be reached before the game is over.

The Irish represent the third nationally ranked opponent for Carolina at home this season. Oklahoma and Maryland played here earlier. Tomorrow's game starts a two-week home stand that will be wound up the following Saturday against the University of Virginia.

SUTTON TOPS RUSHING

Ed Sutton, Ken Keller, Buddy Sasser, and Don Lear will operate in the backfield in tomorrow's battle. This foursome tops the squad in individual rushing. Sutton leads the group with 238 yards in 42 carries for a 5.7 average. Keller at 3.2, Lear at 5.1, and Sasser at 3.0 follow Sutton in yardage gained.

Sutton took over the team leadership last week by gaining 129 yards in 13 carries. Sasser picked up 41 yards by rusting in the USC game, and hit two of three passes for nineteen yards. Lear and Keller were used through the line against South Carolina, but still picked up good yardage during the game.

Sasser and Dave Reed, the two sophomore quarterbacks, have scored three touchdowns each to tie for the team scoring leadership at 18 points each. Reed is the leading punt returner with 7 for 118 yards. Sutton has brought back two punts for 113 yards. Wally Vale leads the punting with a 40.8 average, while Will Frye has booted 39 times for a 37.1 mark. Frye needs three more boots to break the old ACC record of 41 punts during a season.

Penn State 26, Rutgers 7; Harvard 13, Brown 7; Boston College 27, Boston U. 7; Cornell 21, Dartmouth 7.

The UNC fresh booters, who are undefeated in competition this year and who have only one tie keeping them from boasting a perfect record are expected to make their final season's record 4 wins and one tie this afternoon. The Baby Wolves from Raleigh have fallen twice before the Tar Babies and will more than likely bow again this afternoon.

Rick Grausman, who leads the UNC scoring with 4 points will be the man expected to spark the Tar Babies. Coach Bob Stenzell's boys are in good condition with only one of their early season starters missing. Forward Jim Purks is out for the season with a broken foot bone which he received several weeks ago.
