Tar Heels Improved

The Tar Heels definitely showed they have the spirit and fight in yesterday's struggle. Two bad breaks in the final half cost them a tie. The Irish took advantage of every situation and cashed in on them for touchdowns.

Ken Keller and Ed Sutton led the individual rushing for Carolina. Keller carried seven times for 33 yards and Sutton carried ten times for 34 yards. Buddy Sasser carried six times for 31 yards. Sasser also hit three of ten passes for 25 yards. He worked the option play to spring Keller and Sutton loose for big gains occasionally. While he was in the game, the little 158-pounder stole the show from the celebrated Hornung.

The final whistle had blown and Kenan Stadium was nearly empty of the 35,000 fans that had come to witness the Carolina-Notre Dame football game. The Tar Heels had lost, but UNC coach George Barclay had no complaints as he stood in the Carolina dressing room. Disappointment was evident, but all in all the Tar Heel mentor was proud.

Barclay's boys had given the favored Irish of Notre Dame a scare in the first half and a run for the money in the second before losing to the nation's sixth ranked team 27-7.

In the dressing room on the opposite side of the field house Terry Brennan, the youthful head coach of the Irish, stood watching his victorious team pack. Brennan, like Barclay, had no complaints, only a relieved look which seemed to say: "I'm glad this one is over."

And Brennan should have been. The fired-up Tar Heels made a real contest out of what was to have been an "easy Saturday" for the Irish. The Tar Heels held Notre Dame tied after the first half for the first time since their first meeting in 1949 and didn't give up in the second half although the powerful Irish reserve power tired out the Tar Heels to the extent that they were able to score 3 more touchdowns.

"This is the best North Carolina team I've seen in my three years at Notre Dame," said Brennan as he was interviewed by reporters after the game. "Carolina has a strong line. They were tough to beat."

Brennan went on to cite the reserve power of his team as the main difference. He had special praise for quarterback Larry Cooke, halfback Bob Ward and fullback Dean Studer.

When asked about Carolina-players he was quick to mention Ken Keller. "I thought Ken Keller played a fine game" answered Brennan.

UNC LINE PRAISED

All-America quarterback candidate Paul Hornung didn't hesitate in agreeing with his coach. "Carolina has one of the toughest lines I've played against all year," said the handsome junior from Louisville, Kentucky. "The Carolina team was tough and very smart."

Barclay, back on the other side of the field house found himself the victim of an equal number of questions. "We failed on two pass attempts and lost a fumble near the end of the game," answered the former all-American when asked Carolina's major shortcoming. "We really worked hard and then played hard. We were up for this one."

And thus ended Carolina's sixth and possibly last meeting with the Irish.

Varsity Harriers To Defend Crown

By LARRY CHEEK

Jim Beatty and his Carolina cross-country teammates travel to Raleigh tomorrow afternoon to lay individual and team championships on the line in the annual Big Five Meet.

Varsity squads from Duke, State, Wake Forest, and Davidson will also participate in the race which starts at 4:00 over the State College course. The unbeaten Carolina frosh will also run tomorrow, competing with yearling teams from State, Duke, Wake Forest, and Louisburg College in a meet preceding the varsity clash at 3:30.

The race for honors tomorrow promises to be a two way affair between State and Carolina in all divisions, Beatty and Mike Shea of State will fight it out for individual honors in the varsity division, while the team championship should go to either the Tar Heels or Wolfpack. The same holds true for the team title in the frosh division, while the yearling individual winner should be either Carolina ace Wayne Bishop, State star Don Barry, or Sam Incoe, also of State.

Coach Dale Ranson's varsity runners will be out to turn the tables on the Wolfpack after an early season loss to the West Raleigh runners. In the first meet of the year, State whipped the Tar Heels by a 24-32 count as Mike Shea edged Jim Beatty for first place. On the basis of this Pack win and the home course advantage which they hold, Coach Paul Derr's harriers have been established in the favorites role for tomorrow's scrap. The Carolina Tar Babies, winners of seven consecutive regular season meets, find themselves in just the opposite position from their varsity older brothers. The Tar Babies topped the State Wolf-cubs twice during the regular campaign by a narrow 27-28 margin, so the State runners will be gunning for the Tar Babies.

Pitt Eyes Bowl

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 12 (AP)—The bowl shoe was on the other foot today after Pitt smashed unbeaten West Virginia 26-7.

Scouts representing the Sugar Bowl, at New Orleans, and the Gator Bowl, at Jacksonville, Fla., had come here to report on the unbeaten Mountaineers.
