Phi To Talk Civil Rights

Last Tuesday night the Phi met for a short time and moved directly into executive session without debating on the bill which was to have been brought before the floor.

At that time Reps. Baucom, Olson, Dent and Simmons were initiated. Tonight, the Assembly will take up the bill originally scheduled for last week, which deals with civil rights under the 5th Amendment.

The bill states in part that the Phi Assembly should go on record as opposing any attempts to deny citizens the rights contained in the 5th Amendment, and that the Assembly should go on record as recognizing that there are many who stand falsely accused because of their use of the 5th amendment.

Jess Stribling of the Ways and Means Committee said "The reaffirming of the 5th Amendment is of the utmost importance for the preservation of the American way of life."

Proponents of the bill are expected to argue that too many innocent people have been penalized by the government and the public opinion for invoking the 5th Amendment. They are also expected to say that the real protection that the 5th Amendment was intended to afford is being denied in too many instances.

Opponents of the bill are expected to say that a measure of this sort would only serve to further handicap the government in its dealings with the people who misuse the 5th Amendment.

Education Conference Opens

(Continued from Page 1) "At the same time, we know that everybody must have a good education if they are to properly discharge their functions as a citizen of America."

This, Eisenhower said, was "the heart of this whole problem."

"We want good facilities on the one hand, and we know that there are many areas in which people cannot afford to build the schools." He spoke of the dilemma in which many educators find themselves today:

"If we depend too much on outside help, too much on the federal government, we will lose independence and initiative. But if the federal government doesn't step in with leadership and with providing credit and money where necessary, there will be a lack of schools in certain important areas. And this cannot be allowed."

The President said, "I don't expect the conference to find any easy solutions" to education's problems.

"But I do know this," he added. "When sensible Americans — men and women — sit down together to discuss a problem . . . something sensible comes out. We don't have crackpot ideas. We don't have doctrinaire opinions or solutions."

The persistent question of federal aid to schools threatened to dominate the session despite other plans by the conference leadership.

JUDGE FOR and you'll already know the LOR is without fession.
