Rosenbluth Hits 31 4th Straight Win

Yayda Hits 16, Kearns 11, Brennan 10 In ACC Victory

WAYNE BISHOP
American forward Lennie Rosenbluth returned to his old form by hitting 31 points, to lead the Tar Heels in their fourth consecutive victory by trouncing South Carolina 92-75 in an early season game.

played his usual steady ball for the Tar Heels, dropping 16 points through the hoops, including his 1,000th point as a Tar Heel. Yayda is one of three Tar Heels ever to score 1,000 points.

Lead All Way

The Tar Heels led all the way, taking a 12-4 lead in the early moments of the game. At halftime the Tar Heels had pulled into a 48-36 advantage. After the intermission they gradually added onto the score and built up their margin. Their biggest margin was 22 points when Carolina led 82-60.

Coach Frank McGuire changed his starting line-up for the first time this season, inserting Pete Brennan as a starter and removing sophomore guard Tommy Kearns. Brennan had his slowest scoring effort of the season with ten points. He and Kearns, who wound up with 11, rounded out the Tar Heel scoring in the double figures.

Center Joe Quigg, the 6-9 sharpshooter, was held to only nine points, the first time he has not hit the double figures this season. Forward Grady Wallace pumped in 20 points to pace the Gamecocks.

Two Wins, Two Nights

For Carolina, it was the second win in as many nights. Friday night the talented Tar Heelers dumped Georgia Tech 83-76 in Charlotte.

Carolina tried 73 shots from the floor, hitting on 32 for 44 per cent accuracy. South Carolina could only hit 28 per cent of their shots.

The next game for Carolina is Wednesday night in Woolen Gymnasium, when the Tar Heels run into Alabama, ranked number six in the nation.

BISHOP'S BUNK

Chancellor House is expected to come out with the news any time now which will tell the fate of Tar Heel Football Coach George Barclay. Many Tar Heel fans, on-campus and off-campus, have been eagerly awaiting the final decision, and it should not be much longer before they hear the word.

Opinion among different Carolina supporters varies sharply. Many people do not think Coach Barclay has a chance, simply because he did not win enough games. Another faction strongly stands beside the Tar Heel mentor and points toward the strong finish at the end of the season. Most of the people fall in one of the two groups with very few followers who have no opinion on the matter.

During the question of renewal of Barclay's contract, the athletic program has taken a beating from quite a few, along with Barclay's coaching method. We believe, however, that neither can be duly criticized. Any close follower of the 1955 Tar Heels could see that the program is now on full beam. True, at the first of the season, the Tar Heels were not winning; but the way they closed the season was enough evidence to us that the Tar Heels have arrived. Coach Barclay's team closed the 1955 season with just as good a team as there was in the Atlantic Coast Conference, with the possible exception of Maryland. It took time to bring the right combination, with the winning spirit, but Barclay brought it to Carolina.

1956 PROGRAM PROMISING:

With the bulk of the 1955 team returning next year, the Tar Heels are looking forward to the 1956 season. The sophomores that Barclay strung along with this season will be experienced and veteran players. The juniors will be steady ball players and the boys up from the freshman team will prove valuable reserves. The 1956 squad points toward the strongest of the Barclay regime, which is the pattern that a coach has to follow. When Barclay took over, he had mostly single-year players. He finally has gathered the kind of team which he has won with in the past. His program is improving every year, and within two or three years the Tar Heels followers should have no room to complain at all.

However, if Barclay goes, some one else will probably take over and try to bring in his kind of team. It will take any human being which includes the ever-popular Jim Tatum, at least three years to mold that team. Although the Tar Heel schedule is still just a little ahead of the program, we do believe that behind Barclay, the Tar Heels have definitely passed the big rebuilding stage and are now on the brink of football success.

Chancellor House has an important decision, and he is bound to draw much criticism on either choice—we just hope he is guided in the way best for the University.

FRYE GOES TO BOWLS:

Will Frye, Carolina's two-year All-Conference end, has accepted invitations to extend his holiday football playing. The Hickory, N.C., senior had been invited previously to participate in the East-West game at San Francisco on January 2. Now he has added the Hula Bowl at Honolulu on Jan. 8 to his excursion. The Hula Bowl annually pits natives against a picked team from the United States, numbering several of the East-West players.

Three other North Carolina seniors will play in Holiday Bowls. Halfback Ken Keller, tackle Jack Maultsby, and guard Bill Koman will participate in the Blue-Gray game at Montgomery, Alabama.

Bobby Barden, Carolina senior track and cross-country star, has returned from Newark, N. J., his home, where he went for the funeral of his father, who died at his home last week.

Pete Cotran, soccer ace, competed in the first of the Olympic soccer tryouts at New York this weekend. Games were played Friday and Saturday in which the first of the eliminations, leading to the selection of a 15-man squad to go to Australia, will take place.

Tar Babies Win 87-74 Behind Salz And Groll

By ALBERT GOLDSMITH

Paced by guards Stan Groll and Harvey Salz the University of North Carolina freshman basketball team dropped a fighting Wake Forest freshman squad 87 to 74 here last night to remain undefeated.

The two Carolina hotshots, both from Brooklyn, N. Y., kept the Baby Deaclet defense on its toes throughout the game by their spectacular shooting. Salz tallied 28 points and Groll 25 to keep the nets sizzling for Carolina.

Last night marked the fourth consecutive time that Salz has scored over 25 points in a game. He now boasts a 27.8 shooting average.

The freshmen from Wake Forest made a close game of it only in the opening minutes of the first half when the lead exchanged hands as often as the ball. Midway in the second half the Deaclets attempted a rally and succeeded in narrowing Carolina's broad lead but failed to catch up with the rolling Tar Babies.

Coach Buck Freeman's Tar Babies, after their fight for the lead in the first 3 minutes pulled out ahead with Salz leading the way. Midway in the first half they led 29 to 17 over the Deaclets with Groll and Salz hitting with amazing accuracy and forward Danny Lotz putting in an outstanding performance in getting needed rebounds. The Tar Babies pushed on to lead 44 to 25 at halftime with Salz accounting for 18 of Carolina's points.

Carolina's second half performance didn't equal their romping first half play but they held on despite Wake Forest's attempt to overtake the Tar Babies. Sparked by Olin Broadway and Joe Ladd, the Deaclets narrowed the Carolina lead to 9 points but never got any closer.

High scorers for Wake Forest were Broadway with 19 points and Ladd with 20 points. Forward Dickie Odom was third for the Deaclets with 14.

For Carolina Danny Lotz and Gehrman Holland turned in perhaps their finest all-round performances of the season. Lotz was
