Forum Gives Plan to Solve Parking Mess

Forum, UP nominee for president of the student body, came today with a student-entire plan for solving the parking problem here. "I propose that I be responsible for enforcing the parking regulations, and that the fines which come from violations be used for the construction of new parking lots," he announced in a prepared statement.

There is some available space
throughout the campus which can be utilized.

Attend to exhaust all these ideas before thinking of any restriction on student cars," said the presidential candidate.

College campuses are overcrowded with the parking problem here at Carolina the students have an opportunity to work out a solution for themselves," said.

Danforth Fellowship Awarded

Miss Susie E. Roberts, senior from Asheville, has been awarded a Danforth Fellowship according to an announcement yesterday from Dr. Kenneth I. Brown, executive director of the Danforth Foundation.

She is one of 25 winners in the country. The scholarship entitles Miss Roberts to spend a year on a college campus other than her own in order to work with religious activities already on that campus. The work is considered as field experience in religious work.

Miss Roberts, along with the other winners, known as "Danny grads," will not know which campus she will go to until after completion of a 5 weeks' training program at Camp Miniwawa, Mich. Assignments will be made then, according to the announcement.

Miss Roberts, a member of the Valkyries, highest women's honorary group, and vice-president of Carr Dormitory, has been active in campus religious activities, especially in the Wesley Foundation and the YWCA. She is also a member of the Methodist Church choir.

OFFICIALS SAY:

Entrance Exams Are Not "Keep Out" Signs

Widow Jenkins and Farmer Lambert
"Miss Maggie" Jenkins, played by Flora Roebuck, is a husband-hunting widow school teacher with an eye for matrimony with slow-talking farmer Keith Lambert, played by Paul McCauley, in the Carolina Playmakers' new student-written folk comedy, "Cat In Gloves," slated to appear at the Playmakers Theatre this weekend.

"Cat In Gloves" Begins Thursday

"Cat In Gloves," a new Carolina folk comedy, will be the next production by The Carolina Playmakers, this Thursday through Sunday at the Playmakers Theatre at 8:30 p.m., with a 2:30 matinee Sunday.

Directed by Foster Fitz-Simons of the Playmakers' staff, the comedy was written by Baxter Sasser, who received his M.A. degree in Dramatic Art at UNC last June and is now teaching at St. Mary's College in Maryland.

Set in the area of Sasser's native Mt. Olive, N. C., the play is in the vein of the early UNC student-written folk-dramas three and four decades ago, in the era of Playmaker's founder, Frederick H. ("Proff") Koch. Most noted of the early UNC folk-playwrights are Paul Green, Bernice Kelly Harris, and Thomas Wolfe, who studied playwriting before becoming a novelist.

The posters being used by the Playmakers' publicity department for "Cat In Gloves" are the same ones used thirty years ago to advertise the regular folk-plays more frequently presented at that time. The posters, in perfect condition, were recently found in storage in the basement of the Orange Print Shop.

The story of "Cat In Gloves" is about honest, hard-working Aunt Rosa, played by Les Casey, wife of Swimming Coach Ralph Casey. Aunt Rosa has been caring for her dead sister's family for seven years, and has been almost wife and mother to Keith Lambert, played by Paul McCauley, and Keith's three children. The "almost" proves to be a wide margin when husband-hunting widow, "Miss Maggie," played by Miss Flora Roebuck, rides into town with an eye for matrimony.

Aunt Rosa, who was too timid and un-scheming to stop Maggie from luring away her intended husband 20 years before, still keeps her blue lace wedding dress which was never worn. She finally gives it to her niece to wear on a date, and just about gives up hope of every marrying Keith, who nearly succumbs to the flirtations of Maggie. Family unity turns out to be a bigger obstacle to Maggie than she had reckoned for, though, and Rosa wins her man.

According to the Playmakers' publicity director, "If the performances provide as many laughs as the rehearsals have, for the cast, director, and observers, the play should be one of the funniest ever seen on the Playmakers' stage. The seduction scene is hilarious."

Tickets for the five performances are available at 214 Abernethy Hall, Ledbetter - Pickard's, or Box 1050, Chapel Hill. All seats are reserved at $1.50.

Letters Have Applauded New Tests

Tar Heel parents who fear their sons and daughters may not pass the new entrance examinations can be assured that the state is not erecting "Keep Out" signs.

To the contrary, "Come On" signs are being put up, for the tests are expected to disclose students who "ought to be going to college" and do not go. Scholarship assistance will be sought for them.

That assurance was made known by University officials who explained some of the conditions of the Board of Trustees' new admissions policy, to become effective in the Fall of 1957. At the same time, the University indicated receiving a large number of letters applauding the decision.

"DRY RUN" Announcement has been made of a "dry run" entrance exam — experimental tests to be administered April 7 and April 14, 1956, at 23 testing centers throughout the state.

Scorching rumors that the tests for entrance to the University will be excessively high, Dr. W. W. Pierson, dean of the Graduate School and chairman of the All-University Committee which helped prepare the admissions requirements, said (1) enrollments are not going to be pegged at the present level, (2) studies covering the past four years show that only 8 or 9 per cent of an entering freshman class would have been rejected during those years had the new admissions plan been in effect. (3) these studies also show that less than four per cent of those students who would have been rejected were able to pass their work and graduate.

Although the plan as adopted applies only to the Consolidated University at Chapel Hill, Greensboro and Raleigh, there are indications the system of examinations may be extended to all 12 of the state-supported institutions of higher learning in the state. Advice of the State Dept. of Public Instruction also is to be available in administering the tests.

OTHER ASPECTS Some other aspects of the examining system are:

1. Tests will not necessarily keep out students who are poorly prepared, merely because the high schools they have attended are not as good as certain other high schools or preparatory schools. The examinations will be comprehensive enough to test aptitude, potential ability, as well as the level of scholarship already attained. If the student is teachable, and if he has prospects of maintaining the University pace, admission will not be denied.

2. Those who don't pass the examination the first time will get a second chance if they request it.

3. There is no truth to the statement that the size of the student bodies will remain at the present enrollment level. The plans envision an increase in enrollments of qualified students.

4. High school students not planning to go to college but who score high on the test will be encouraged to change their minds and attend the University. Scholarships will be sought for them. (See EXAMS, Page 4)
