Plans Underway For Parts of Y Programs To Merge; Will Make Plans Together

By RAY LINKER

Plans for the YMCA and the YWCA to merge many aspects of their programs are now under way. According to YM General Secretary Claude Shotts, and YW Director Mrs. Kirsten Milbrath, study and cooperation toward merging various functions of the two groups has been going on for the last three years. It was pointed out, however, that the YMCA and the YWCA will continue to maintain their separate identities. When the Executive Councils of the two organizations, headed by YM President Gerry Mayo and YW President Martha Richardson, started meeting together in March, they decided to plan next year's program together. The two presidents said this did not mean every phase of the program would be carried out jointly, but every project that was deemed practicable to be carried out as a joint function would be so conducted. The two groups will function together only where they can do so feasibly. Plans are to have co-chairmen of must committees, one woman student and one male student.

PROJECTS

Joint areas of work include projects concerning study groups, conferences, weekly membership roundup, social service activity. (See MERGER, Page 3)

Math Students Given Welcome By UNC Dept.

A special welcome mat, with tassels on it, is reserved for good math students here at UNC — and the mat was rolled out the other day when nine star algebra and geometry seniors of Fuquay Springs High School came to give the University the once over. UNC has an informal motto: "Now is the time for all good men to be on the lookout for good math students." So the Fuquay Springs prospects were welcomed, both in the mathematics dept. in Phillips Hall and in South Building. Acting Provost of the Consolidated University, Dr. W. M. Whyburn, says the shortage of mathematicians in the state and nation poses an acute problem which the University hopes to do its part in solving. The new entrance examinations for admission to the University are expected to disclose much new mathematical talent among high school seniors. Such promising students may find scholarships waiting for them. The Fuquay Springs students were accompanied by their math teacher, Kenneth Newbold. The students are: Harriet Davis, Kate Crabtree, Jimmy Sears, Betty Bufaloe, Phillip Handell, Boyd Collier, Waverly Fitzhugh, Ralph Lytle, treasurer; Henry L. Ferguson, and Henry P. Leighton.

Others who applied for the GMAB presidency were Bob Staton, Juan West and John Raper.

Local police were yesterday preparing arrest papers for several Carolina students who will be charged with malicious damage and theft of property in the police station late Monday night. The incidents stemmed from the arrest of a student on charges of drunken driving.

Some of the student's friends, who had come down to the station in an attempt to talk the police into dropping the charges, reportedly did the following: set fire to a wastebasket, took a revolver out of the police chief's drawer, took a number of traffic tickets and ticket payment notices, ripped out the wires leading to two telephones and took a couple of fingerprint rollers and fountain pen desk sets.

UP Will Elect New Officers Tuesday Night

The University Party will meet next Tuesday night to elect officers, according to Chairman Bill Sabiston. Jim Exum, UP candidate for president of the student body in spring elections; John Kerr, student body treasurer-elect; and Sabiston will comment on the recent elections. ## N. C. Symphony To Play Annual Concert Friday

The North Carolina Symphony will play its annual concert here on Friday at 8:30 p.m. in Memorial Hall. Featured with the Symphony will be Karl Krauter, violinist, and Phyllis Krauter, cellist. They will play the Brahms Concerto for Violin, Violoncello, and Orchestra, Opus 102. This concerto was written with the violinist, Joseph Joachim, and the cellist, Robert Hausmann, in mind. Although it is considered a significant and solid work, its initial reception was not enthusiastic.

The second half of the concert will begin with an interpretation of Mozart's Symphony No. 32 in G major (K. 318), a symphony rarely played. It is a short work in one movement, although a slow andante is inserted in the middle. The precision of detail and love of particular interest is the fact that Mozart used four horns in this composition.

Also to be played by the Symphony here is Wheat Field at Noon, a suggestive musical landscape by Thomson. The work develops a theme embracing all 12 tones of the chromatic scale, and it is somewhat reminiscent of musical impressionism although it was composed in 1948. From Benjamin Britten's opera "Peter Grimes," Four Sea Interludes will be interpreted. They include "Dawn," "Sunday Morning," "Moonlight," and "Storm." Peter Grimes was first performed in London in 1945. Waltzes from Strauss' opera, The Rose Cavalier, are also programmed.

The damage and thefts were committed quietly in an adjoining room to the acting desk sergeant's office. Some of the acts were not discovered until morning. Most of the missing items were returned yesterday.

With the exception of the ticket payment notices, Blake said the missing items were returned yesterday.

UGLY CLUB

Blake also said a number of students, reported to be members of the "Ugly Club," a student social organization, would be charged in the local recorder's court in connection with the incidents. The names of the students to be charged were not released, pending arrest.

Police gave the following general account of the events:

About 11:30 p.m. Police Patrolmen Howard Pendergraft and Amos Horne arrested Hosea E. Wilson, junior from Danville, Va., on charges of drunken driving. After the 21-year old Wilson was taken to the station, Officer Graham Creel allowed him to telephone some of his friends, who were understood to be at an "Ugly Club" party at a local fraternity house, to come to the station and sign a $200 bond for him.

Creel said several boys — between 10 and 15 — came to the station shortly thereafter, and he conferred with them and with Wilson on posting the latter's cash bond which two of them did.

While he was conferring with Wilson and a few of the others, some of the rest went into the adjoining room and committed the acts.

The group left the station a few moments later and the police patrolman smelled smoke in the adjoining room, the chief's office. He entered the room and found a wastebasket burning. One of the students returned to help him douse the flames, he said.

Early yesterday morning, it was discovered that the wires on an extension phone and on an auxiliary phone had been pulled from the wall. The theft of the other articles was then discovered. The revolver, according to Capt. Blake, was an old unused and unloaded weapon from which the firing pin had been pulled.

Assistant Dean of Student Affairs Ray Jefferies returned the stolen articles to Town Manager Thomas D. Rose. The police, however, made it clear that they were not going to drop the case.

Police Chief Sloan said "I've been here for 32 years and this beats anything I've ever seen. The boys here have always been nice and this is the first time anything like this has happened here."
