

Bob Young Suggests Changes In Student Legislature Asks For More Housing For Married Students

By NEIL BASS
President Bob Young touched on six specific campus "situations" in his State of the Campus Address delivered before the student Legislature last night.

Other than stipulating prevailing conditions in numerous phases of campus life, the most conspicuous portion of Young's address was aimed at bringing about minor changes in the legislative branch of student government.

In this area, Young suggested: (1) Reactivation of the Legislature executive committee to increase cooperation and understanding on all sides.

(2) Increase in the power of the Rules Committee to allow resumption of the practice of administering qualification tests to legislators.

(3) Establishment of a Styles Committee to make grammatical and stylistic changes in legislative measures.

OTHER SITUATIONS
Other situations dealt with by Young were:

Graham Memorial: Young stipulated that a committee of the GM board of directors is "preparing a very extensive and comprehensive report . . . of the dire need for a new and expanded building to meet the need of our rising enrollment. Our plan is to prepare a strong case for a new building and present our case to the 1957 General Assembly, if the local administration approves our plans."

Athletic Situation: The president thanked the athletic director for reducing date tickets, complimented the basketball team, and the handling of the "Vince Owen Case" by the Men's Honor Council.

Housing Situation: Young announced that he would meet with James Wadsworth, housing officer, and the administration to prepare a "strong case" for the request of 200 apartments for married students.

Chancellor Situation: President Young complimented vice President Sonny Evans's committee which aired the recommendations offered by students to fill the seat to be vacated by Chancellor Robert House in the spring. Young also eulogized House, calling him "the symbol of Carolina with all its traditions and glories."

Student Government Situation: Here Young offered his suggested improvements in the legislative branch, and apologized for the "inconvenience" caused to the campus by fall elections. He put the blame on his shoulders for certain election "regularities," saying it demonstrated a "lack of foresight" on his part.

Young's address in full will be released on the editorial page of this paper.

Young Calls Officers Week Important Time

In connection with the present "Know Your Dorm Officers Week" declared by the Interdormitory Council, President Bob Young issued the following statement:

"For all mens dormitory residents, this should be a most important time of the year. It is for your benefit and for the benefit of the IDC that this has been declared Know Your Dorm Officers Week."

"During this week much emphasis will be placed on projects that will help each resident know who his dorm officers are. I hope each of us will take advantage of this opportunity."

"This 'Week' is a new idea for student government initiated by Sonny Hallford, IDC president. The success of the work of our dormitory officers and our dormitory projects will depend on whether or not all dormitory residents get to know each other well and work together for the rest of the year."

"Let's make it a successful year for the IDC. You do your part and the dorm officers will do theirs."

Mackay Says Georgia To Remain Within Law On Court's Decision

By CLARKE JONES

James A. Mackay, representative in the Georgia General Assembly, said yesterday his state "is not championing integration but will be against" measures taken outside the law to get around the Supreme Court's decision.

Speaking to members of a state government political science course of Dr. David G. Monroe, he said "I believe you've got to live within the framework of the law."

"I think the point will come, as

Gov. Marvin Griffin said, when we will settle down and accept the decision."

Mackay called for calmness and reflective thinking on the subject. He pointed out Georgia has an attorney general who goes "hogwild" and says you're a traitor if you are calm about it.

His remarks came after questions were put to him by class members.

In answer to a question as to how Georgia college students feel about the Court's decision, he said they are "generally bored" with the whole thing. If there is a vote on whether the college is to be integrated or not "students usually vote overwhelmingly in favor of integration. But usually they don't care," he said.

Forces Of Change In South Seen By Mckay

By GRAHAM SNYDER

"There are movable traditions and irresistible forces effecting changes in the South," James McKay told a group of people last night in Lenoir Hall.

While beset with conflicting traditions and numerous problems, the Georgia General Assembly representative declared that the South is striving to conquer these setbacks in its forward moves.

Citing the state of Georgia as an example, McKay enumerated the problems facing the region of the South and then recounted the factors responsible for the changes of improvement in the South. He stated that there are "acute limitations in the public school system, inadequacies in communications and in newspapers, and in the existence of almost unbelievable conditions of poverty in some regions." McKay stated that although the state of Georgia has many natural resources, there is a lack of facilities to exploit them.

McKay attributed many of the South's problems to a "defined opposition to change and a prevalent sense of suspicions among many people."

Although the bi-racial situation in the South is a major problem confronting the South today, McKay declared, "it is a problem as old as the South itself, and one subject to the forces of change."

Listing the changing moves apparent in the South, McKay again used the state of Georgia as an example of improvements which would promise greater future changes. He declared that if the South can solve its scientific, educational, and political problems, it will have solved its setbacks.

McKay concluded: "I am charged with being a hide-bound optimist; I look with expectation to the future—in the next fifteen years—and to the astounding changes the future will bring to the South. I feel that these forces of change will create new values and will still retain the useful ones of the past."

Note Declares Miss Pickerrell Innocent

By GARY NICHOLS

New evidence has come to light in the "Sutton murder case."

Yesterday the DTI received a confession note which had also been sent to "Sheriff" David Evans testifying to the innocence of Miss Dickie Pickerrell.

Miss Pickerrell goes on trial tonight in the trial of the State of Manning vs. Pickerrell.

Miss Pickerrell has yet to make a comment on the case other than a plea of not guilty.

The letter reads: "Dear Mr. Evans, "I have contained myself this long, and now I must get this off my mind."

"I can't bear to see this innocent girl, Dickie, be slandered and accused. I must tell you the truth. I killed Sutton. I had to do it. Something inside just forced me."

Imports To Be Guests For Dance

Approximately 200 women from Meredith College will arrive by bus at Woolen Gymnasium between 7-8 o'clock Saturday night.

The occasion is a campus-wide informal dance sponsored by the Order of the Grail.

The dance, music for which will be provided by the 15-piece Duke Ambassadors, will last from 8-11 o'clock. Admission will be $1. per couple or stag.

PRESIDENT'S STATEMENT

In connection with the dance, freshman class President Charlie Wilson released the following statement:

"As this Grail dance was organized primarily for the benefit of freshmen, your class officers urge you to attend."

"There will be approximately 200 unescorted girls from Meredith, therefore you need not have dates to attend."

"As freshmen are denied the right to operate cars on campus by Trustee regulation, such functions as this are particularly beneficial to our class."

"Therefore, by attending this dance and contributing to its success, perhaps a present will be established which will enrich our social program here at Carolina."

The dance is informal with coats and ties requested, according to Grail Delegata Luther Hodges.

The following activities are scheduled for GM today:

Magill Speaks About Duties Of Dorm Heads

Director of Student Activities Sam Magill spoke to the Interdormitory Council Wednesday night on "Responsibilities of Dorm Officers."

Magill, a former dorm resident himself, emphasized the need for "community" on campus.

"The campus is fragmented," Magill said. He mentioned "compartmentalization of Greeks and independents, and the necessity of establishing 'unity' between the various groups."

PREREQUISITES

Magill listed the following factors as prerequisites toward establishing the desired unified "campus community":

(1) Establishment of "identity" of individuals.

(2) "Acceptance" of individuals in the overall scheme of dormitory life.

(3) "Redemption" of unacceptable and unsuccessful individuals through corrective judicial action.

Other items discussed on the Council's agenda were:

(1) Necessity of alleviating the present "vending machine situation."

Many dorm residents are being cheated by mechanically ineffective machines, it was pointed out.

Several vending machines have been raised, President Sonny Hallford stated.

REPORTS

During committee reports, Vice President Neil Bass reported that:

(1) Excuses for absences due to fraternity meeting conflicts would not be accepted by the Rules Committee.

(2) Solicitation in dormitories except during the annual Campus Chest Drive is "illegal." Of-

Lambda Chi Bowl Game Tomorrow

The fourth annual Lambda Chi Alpha Bowl Game will pit the Lambda Chis from Carolina against the Lambda Chis of Duke.

The game will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday in Duke Stadium.

According to Kim Ballis, Intramural Manager, the Lambda Chis from Carolina will have the edge over the brothers from Duke as to weight, ability, and experience. Even with these advantages this could prove to be a tight game for the Carolina brothers, as was evidenced by the 6-6 tie in Kenan Stadium last season.

The boys from Carolina have developed several top notch plays which will depend on the ability of several outstanding former high school players.

According to sources on Methodist flats, a fairly large crowd is expected to turn out to watch
