New Stand Seen Forming

RALEIGH — The Visiting Committee of the Consolidated University's Board of Trustees appears to be taking a stronger view and stand on married students' housing.

In the Visiting Committee's report, released Monday at a meeting of the full Board of Trustees, the group recommended "that the administration push forward immediately for legislation providing for self-liquidating units for married students."

Many influential members of the State's General Assembly have for a long time maintained that married students' housing at Chapel Hill and State College should be treated as a secondary consideration. The Visiting Committee's report acknowledges: "Argument has been advanced that all single students should be housed before married students are accommodated."

However, states the report, "This argument today is not sound in our opinion, and we must furnish sufficient housing for this group which has been greatly neglected and discriminated against."

The Visiting Committee recognized the theory that "family units for married students can be financed by self-liquidating bonds without jeopardizing the rent scale in the dormitories for single students."

There appears to be opposition, however, on the horizon for this last statement. The State Board of Higher Education, in its Biennial Report released recently, states:

"The board believes that the present methods of financing self-liquidating loans through agencies of the federal government or through private financial institutions impose limitations on the ability of the institutions to finance such projects without charging their students

Faculty's Salary Hike Inadequate, Feels President

By CLARKE JONES
Special To The Daily Tar Heel

RALEIGH — Consolidated University President William C. Friday told trustee members Monday the faculty salary increases recommended by Gov. Hodges and the Advisory Budget Commission were "inadequate."

He said the University would stand behind its original request as made to the State Board of Higher Education. If the General Assembly turns down this request, Friday said he would ask for the same increases other state workers will receive during the 1957-59 biennium.

"Our greatest concern today is faculty and staff salaries. The value of faculty members to the University cannot be overemphasized," he said.

The Budget Commission's recommendations for the library were also inadequate.

Retiring UNC librarian Andrew Horn last week said he was deeply disappointed with the recommendations and added if he had not already rendered his prior resignation, he would have done so after seeing the new budget.

He called the state's budget making policy "very conservative."

Friday told of several instances where faculty members within the Consolidated University had received offers from other institutions at a much higher rate than they get here.

Included in his examples were: 1. A UNC professor who was offered $5,000 more annually by another school, an increase of 25 percent.

2. A Woman's College faculty member who was offered a $3,000 increase, approximately 43 percent more than she was being paid at WC.

3. A member of the State College faculty, offered $3,000 more for nine months' work than he receives at State for 12 months.

University's Chancellor Is Professor Of Law Here

By CLARKE JONES AND FRED POWLEDGE

RALEIGH—William Brantley Aycock, a short, smiling University of North Carolina law professor, is the new chancellor at Chapel Hill.

The 41-year-old native of Lucama, N. C., was unanimously approved by the full Board of Trustees, meeting Monday in Raleigh. He will succeed Robert B. House, who will retire at the end of this academic year.

Aycock is now a visiting professor at the University of Virginia law school. He was president of his student body at N. C. State College, then came to the University at Chapel Hill for law school. He was editor of The Law Review.

Aycock was one of four men whose names came out of months of consideration by a special selection committee, composed of faculty, trustee and alumni representatives. Consolidated University President William Friday chose him and gave his name to the executive committee of the Board of Trustees Monday morning.

The committee approved him, and later in the afternoon he received the approval of the full board.

President Friday described Aycock as a "man of high courage and energy." Trustee Victor Bryant of Durham, who nominated Aycock in the board meeting, said he represents "courage, tact and scholastic attainments."

Friday told the trustees that qualities stressed by those looking for a new chancellor were those of an "educator with administrative ability," youth, public speaking ability, and those of a man who is a "Southerner of, with Southern ideas and traditions."

Blackwell Is Named As WC's Chancellor

Special To The Daily Tar Heel

RALEIGH — Dr. Gordon W. Blackwell, UNC sociologist, was elected chancellor of the Woman's College in Greensboro Monday.

The Consolidated University Board of Trustees unanimously elected Blackwell to the position, which has been open since Edward Kidder Graham resigned last spring. Blackwell is a Kenan professor of sociology at Chapel Hill and director of the University's Institute for Research in Social Science.

President William Friday of the Consolidated University, in recommending Blackwell for the job, said "he is a man of integrity, great vision and energy."

Shepard New Business Man; Whyburn Gets Graduate Job

Special To The Daily Tar Heel

President William Friday today announced the appointment of Alexander H. Shepard as business officer and treasurer of the Consolidated University of North Carolina.

Mr. Shepard has been acting business manager of the University at Chapel Hill.

Mr. Friday stated, Mr. Shepard's superior capabilities and his intimate knowledge of the functions and details of finances and business management of the University are the reasons why he was the natural choice in making the selection. His years of devotion to duty in the University affairs and his fundamental ability were prime considerations.

Shepard is a native of Wilmington and a graduate of Davidson College. He has been with the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill since 1932, and has been assistant to the business manager since 1943 and acting business manager since Sept. 56. He is married to the former Miss Sallie Cowell who was from Washington, N. C., and they have a son and a daughter.

EMPHASIZES HIGH ADMISSION STANDARDS

Trustees Hear Friday's New Athletic Recommendations

RALEIGH—Consolidated University President William Friday outlined his recommendations for future University athletic policy in a statement delivered to the meeting of the Board of Trustees in Raleigh. The report, emphasized the high admissions standards of the University, the position of the Athletic Council, and the University's policy of compliance with the regulations of the ACC and the NCAA.

"Much has been written and said during recent months about the intercollegiate athletic program of State College and the University in Chapel Hill.

"Since this is my first opportunity to do so I feel that there should be a restatement and clarification of the policy and procedures of the University concerning intercollegiate Athletics.

"The executive committee by a motion passed at its meeting on January 25th 1954 placed the responsibility for the administration of intercollegiate athletics in the hands of the chancellor at each of our institutions. Respecting this procedure and seeking as much conformity as possible I conferred with Chancellors House and Boston and they, along with all members of the consolidated office and staff and I, submit to you the following statements with our recommendation that it be approved by you, that it replace prior board action which may conflict and that it become operative on your approval:

"(1) The admissions standards of State College and the University in Chapel Hill, as in the past, will be set by the respective faculties.

"(2) The academic standards of State College and the University in Chapel Hill, as in the past, will be set by the respective faculties (I should like to say parenthetically that the present academie standards of our institutions are higher than those of the Atlantic Coast Conference and they are being enforced.)

"(3) The Director of Athletics shall be responsible, unto the Chancellor, for the administration of the intercollegiate athletic program at each of our institutions and he shall work with and through the duly established Faculty Committee on Athletics.

"(4) The Executive Committee of this Board of Trustees on January 25, 1954 stated that the Athletic Council at each institution shall be advisory to the Chancellor and shall not have administrative or operating authority or responsibilities, except as may be specifically prescribed by the Chancellor and approved by the President.

"(5) The Scholarship Committee and each institution is the agency that awards athletic grants in aid and it is the agency that revokes grants in aid.

"(6) State College and the University in Chapel Hill are members of the Atlantic Coast Conference and the National Collegiate Athletic Association and we will abide by both the letter and spirit of the regulations established by these organizations.

"(7) Periodic reports on all phases of the intercollegiate athletic program will be made to the faculties of our institutions and to the Board of Trustees by the Chancellors or their designated representatives.

"We believe that compliance with the standards and regulations will safeguard the moral and academic integrity of the Consolidated University of North Carolina.

To make our position clear, the members of the Consolidated Staff and I will not tolerate any infraction of these standards or regulations."
