Psychology Students' Best Friend

Tarheel, the mascot of UNC's graduate students in psychology, appears to be the object of a study concerning whether his "aggressive" traits are due to heredity or environment. While the students debate the question, Tarheel hopefully begs for snacks and ice cream.

Mascot Slightly Phobic After Recent Encounter

By CHERRY PARKER

He "ain't nothin'" but a cur dog. However, Tarheel, unofficial mascot of UNC's graduate students in psychology, is a special sort of cur dog.

Tarheel, also called "Pavlov" by a few students, was born in a cage at the Ciba Pharmaceutical Lab in New Jersey where his mother was an experimental animal. Ted Holden, who was then working for Ciba, thought he was such a cute little beast that he claimed him.

When Tarheel was six weeks old, and Ted came south to do graduate work, he brought the dog with him.

GOOD QUESTION

Tarheel very soon began to show traits interesting to psychology students. It is a good question as to whether his traits are due to his heredity or his environment.

"He has a tail like a chow's," Holden says, "and like a chow, he has an aggressive personality." Tarheel has often been known to challenge larger dogs to duels.

"I think he is pseudo-aggressive," another student says. "Have n't you noticed how he hides under a japonica bush if he thinks the other dog means business?" Someone else answers, "But that's only since he has been conditioned." It seems one month ago Tarheel spent a week at the Vet's after an encounter with a boxer twice his size, and he has been slightly phobic ever since.

The talk goes on. Meanwhile, Tarheel sits and begs for snacks and ice cream. (He will eat chocolate, but he prefers vanilla.)

And it is evident it doesn't really matter if he is phobic, or aggressive or even dependent. Because Tarheel serves a purpose to the psychology students, and they serve a purpose to him. They are "mutual reinforcement" to each other.

AT VALKYRIE SING:

Trouble-Maker 'Eloise' Wins Trophy For KD's

By PATSY MILLER

"Eloise" came to college Monday night and romped around Memorial Hall stage long enough to win the hearts of her audience and the Valkyrie sing competition for Kappa Delta sorority.

Placing first in the sorority division, the KD's gathered around the trouble-making "Eloise," in the personage of Miss Pee Wee Batton, and her friends, "Baby Doll" and "Elvis," to escort them among the Carolina populace.

When it was all over, "Eloise" had lived up to her billing to become the "campus rage."

The remaining entries in the sorority group, the largest division, presented a wide variety of harmony, calypso beat, and novelty numbers. Skit and musical combinations were given by the Alpha Delta Pi's, in "Stairway to the Stars," the Chi Omega's in "Chi O

Calypso," the Delta Delta Delta's in "A Spring Bouquet," and the Pi Beta Phi's in "The Boy Friend."

Mangum in the uncontested dormitory division sang "Standing on the Corner" and "We Ain't Got Dames."

In the women's dormitory competition Smith won with improvements suggested for Carolina in their skit "Gracious Living." Carr sang a medley of songs entitled "Americana."

RETAINED

St. Anthony's Hall retained the fraternity division cup by singing a few close harmony numbers: "Saloon" and "Slow Motion." Pepper Tice did a guitar solo. No other fraternities competed.

The Monogram club won the special group division by humorously introducing the first string of the basketball team and coaches. Delta Sigma Pi, competing in this division, sang the "Roses of Delta Sig."

Then the UNC Glee Club sang a few selections and Hoke Simpson entertained with his guitar and calypso songs.

The judges were: Miss Sara Q. White, Orville Campbell and Gene Strassler.

UNC Drill Team Places First In Competition

The UNC drill team won first place in the first annual North Carolina AFROTC Drill Competition held here Saturday. Duke University received top honors in the crack drill contest portion of the program.

The competition which was sponsored by the Arnold Air Society was composed of teams representing Duke University, N. C. State and UNC.

Col. George J. Smith presented trophies to the winning teams. Commander James Howey of the Arnold Air Society here said the drill competition will be an annual event. He indicated it will be held at Duke next year.

Competition in future years will include all ROTC drill teams in the state, a spokesman of the Arnold Air Society said.

Judges for the drill competition Saturday were: Lt. Col. Basil I. Mishtowl (USA), N. C. State, Maj. Clarence L. Morrison (USMC), Duke and Maj. Lawrence C. Norton (USMC), UNC.

Following the completion of competition and drill events a party was held for participants in the Lambda Chi Alpha House.

Evans Supports Orientation Program Drives

Sonny Evans, president-elect of the student body, gave his full support yesterday to the Orientation Counselor program which is currently in the organizational processes of recruiting new members.

In a statement yesterday, Evans said:

"The responsibilities of an orientation counselor fall into the category of one of the real contributions an individual can make to the campus.

"The impression he makes is often the most lasting one and for that reason it is important that the most capable and able people apply for the job," he said.

"With the expanding student population, there is a corresponding expanding need, for much of a student's attitudes and feelings are developed during that all important first week. Adequate attention must be given to each in coming freshman," Evans said.

Jerry Oppenheimer, chairman of the Orientation Committee repeated his announcement of yesterday that a meeting of prospective counselors has been postponed until next Tuesday.

The rescheduled meeting will be held in 106 Carroll Hall at 7:30 p.m. Deadline for applications has been extended to that date.

Oppenheimer urged once again that everyone interested apply for any of the 120 positions open. Application blanks may be secured from Graham Memorial, the YMCA, the Library, Lenoir Hall or the Monogram Club and are to be returned to the Y or Graham Memorial.

CDA's Annual Festival Begins At 2 Tomorrow

Featured production in the Carolina Dramatic Assn.'s annual festival here tomorrow through Saturday will be the Seaboard-Jackson Neighborhood Players' presentation of a new play, by noted Carolina writer, Bernice Kelly Harris, of Seaboard.

The play, entitled "Yellow Color Suit", will be given at the Playmakers' Theater Friday at 8 p.m. The 34th annual festival, which will include 25 plays, will begin at 2 p.m. tomorrow and continue through the final session Saturday at 7:30 p.m. All performances will be held in the Playmakers' Theater and an admission fee of $50 will be charged.

"Yellow Color Suit", directed by George Harris of Seaboard, was adapted by Mrs. Harris from part of her novel, "Hearthstones", published in 1948, which developed from a short story in Colliers in 1942. Mrs. Harris' novel "Purslane" won the Mayflower Cup, and six of her plays have been published as "Folk Plays of Eastern Carolina".

The Playmakers have had all of her plays at Chapel Hill at one time or another, several of which have won awards, such as "Three Foolish Virgins". The new play will be the first representing Seaboard at the CDA Festival since 1939, although three members of the cast have been appearing in Festival plays since the early 1930's.

The three-act play concerns four elderly sisters during World War II who have been secluded on an island in Eastern North Carolina, isolated from the rest of the World since their father's desertion during the Civil War. In the cast are: Blanche Gay, Bickley Bullock, Frances Magee, Rebbe Long, Betty Gay, and Burgess Stephenson.

A one-act play by the Campbell College players, originally scheduled to follow Mrs. Harris' play Friday night, has been switched to Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The play, "Four on a Heath," was written by Foster Fitz-Simons of the UNC Dept. of Dramatic Art when he was a student.
