

'Peer Gynt' Instruction

Composer Joel Chadabe goes over some points in the script for "Peer Gynt" with Page Williams. Chadabe, a sophomore music major from New York, wrote the score for the Carolina Playmaker production and set the orchestration for a fifteen piece orchestra, which he conducts. He is also directing the chorus for the show.

President Friday

(Continued from page 1) in North Carolina's "Piedmont search Triangle, a scientific-economic social agency that promises to be a wellspring for economic development in the state and region.

8. President Friday has made significant appointments, among them being two Chancellors at two institutions of the Consolidated University, and another being the appointment of a vice-president in charge of graduate studies and research, the latter displaying the importance he attaches to the role of graduate research in the life of the three-fold University.

In both the first and the eighth of the list of accomplishments written here, emphasis is placed on President Friday's determination to put academic achievement and scholarly excellence at the top of his goals for his Presidency of the University. Friday is an administrator who relies upon constituted members of the faculties of the three institutions—in the colleges, the school and departments—for counsel on vital academic aspects of University life. He has already put into motion machinery for selecting men and ideas, and it is already apparent that the University will be characterized by both teamwork and leadership under his administration.

Bill Friday is laboring mightily on that address right now. Many North Carolinians, all the members of the faculties of the University, and many others, will be following the words of his inaugural address for signs of what he intends to do, and what are his aspirations for the University. But one or two advance indications of what he is going to do are obvious. A look at his record in a little more than a year shows clearly that the University of North Carolina has a man of vision, of dedication to academic excellence and devoted adherence to democratic education.

"PROJECT HEALTH" television show will originate from the kitchens of Memorial Hospital Friday, it was announced recently. The program will be staged by the Dietary Dept. of Memorial Hospital in connection with National Hospital Week (May 12-18). The program will explain how food is bought, stored, cooked and served in a modern hospital. It will also describe dietitians who run the kitchens and something of their duties.

TELEVISION TONIGHT

8:00—Channel 2—"Flesh And Blood" with Tommy Sands. This probably will not be much good, but Master Sands seems to be the new idol. Although Elvis may have his faults, Sands looks weak by comparison. Maybe he will prove to be the converse of the rule—an actor who cannot sing. At any rate, the producers promise that Tommy will launch a new hit on this show, hoping, obviously, to repeat the stunt they pulled with the TV-previewed "Teen Age Crush."

9:00—Channel 2—Jazz Spectacular: Ellington's "A Drum Is A Woman." This is an important first for television, a landmark in the history of jazz, and a major musical event. Besides writing some of the classics of American popular music ("Take The 'A' Train," "Mood Indigo," "Don't Get Around Much Any More," etc.), Duke Ellington is also one of America's finest composers for the concert stage.

Tonight's show is the premier of Ellington's first concert work in too many years, presented as a visual entertainment with the dance used to aid in telling the story. "A Drum Is A Woman" is Ellington's conception of the development and the nature of jazz.

THINGS TO LOOK FORWARD TO

MOVIES—"Oedipus Rex"

This is the wrong time in the semester to be tempted by worthwhile films, but there seems to be an abundance of them "Twelve Angry Men," "Richard III," and "Lust For Life" are just departed; coming to the Varsity on Sunday is "Oedipus Rex." The film is a faithful reproduction of the production given at Stratford, Ontario, with the same cast and setting. Direction is by Tyrone Guthrie.

THEATRE—"Peer Gynt"

Starting Friday evening and continuing through the weekend is the Playmaker's production of Ibsen's "Peer Gynt," presented in the Forest Theatre.

Quite apart from local enthusiasm, this is an event in the theatre: Director Kai Jurgenson has used his own translation of the work, coupled with original music and dance, all set against some imaginative scenery, to produce his version of "Peer." Weather permitting, there are few better ways to spend a summer evening.

Monday Night Is Bridge Night For Many In GM

All is quiet. Play has begun, and bridge pairs are hotly contesting for part-score, game, and slam contracts. "Six no trump!" thunders a familiar voice across the room. All turn their heads. Some smile affectionately. Others nod their heads doubtfully. Its another night of Duplicate bridge at Graham Memorial.

Each Monday night is the night for bridge addicts, and students, faculty members, and towns people gather downstairs at G.M. for another nerve-wracking session of Duplicate bridge.

For a few short hours, a small number of pairs will compete rabidly for thin pink fractional Master Point slip awards—infitinably small stepping stones to the most coveted prize of all for bridge players: eminence and recognition as a Life Master Bridge Player.

Actually these pink slips are not the real lure. The game itself is the lure. Bridge is a dueling, grueling, highly competitive, not-always-social, intellectual game.

It demands closest attention and cooperation by partners. If one slips, both slip. And because the game is so ego-involving, tempers sometimes flare. Friendships and marriages quaver in disputes about the proper play (or improper misplay) of bridge hands.

But if it is the game that severs partnerships momentarily, it is also the game which draws them back again and again into irresistible combat for pasteboard kings and queens. And what was last week's tragedy becomes this week's triumph.

Rubber bridge players who have not converted to Duplicate play are in for a real treat. Here is a game where card holdings do not matter. Bridge pairs all play the same hands, and comparisons are made only between pairs playing the same holding of cards.

Mitchell Gets $5,906 Grant

The United States Public Health Service has granted $5,906 to Dr. David L. Mitchell of the University of North Carolina School of Medicine, Department of Anatomy.

The money will be used for a one year study of how the salivary glands effect dental caries (tooth decay).

Specific objectives of the proposed study are two fold. One aspect is an attempt to determine the extent to which cellular features of a salivary gland are related to the products of its secretory activity. The other aspect is an attempt to determine whether certain constituents of saliva are consistently associated with dental caries.

Dental caries are known to occur with varying severity among different people, and usually occurs with varying incidence throughout the life of any one individual. The disease may be completely absent in some mouths.

The funds granted will be used to determine whether the salivary constituents are in fact active agents in the development of caries or in resistance to caries.

Dr. Mitchell is a native of Canton, N. C. He attended Duke University, and received his D.D.S. degree from the University of North Carolina School of Dentistry in 1956.

Wandering Serenade By Fraternity Group

A group of between 20-30 Sig Ep's, led by George Ballard and his guitar, provided a wandering serenade program for girls in the Tri Delta, Alpha Gamma Delta, Kappa Delta and Chi Omega sorority houses Monday, according to an announcement released yesterday from Jim Westbrook.

The minstrel-style impromptu program drew a wonderful response from the distaff audience in the four houses, Westbrook said. The Sig Ep group sang numbers of a traditional Carolina nature and on occasion, according to members of their audience, at tempted vocalizations in a more popular mode.
