World In Brief

May Keep Passports

BALTIMORE (AP)—A top State Department official hinted today that 42 young Americans who violated a ban on travel to Red China may be allowed to keep their passports if they promise not to do it again.

Roderic L. O'Connor, department security and consular affairs chief, said decisions will be made "fairly and expeditiously" on the cases of the travelers, 37 of whom are still in Red China.

The State Department already has decided to pick up passports of all 42 once they reach American territory. Each of them then can appeal to the Department's passport office within 60 days. After that the courts are open to any of them who do not like the decision.

Hoffa Indicted

NEW YORK (AP)—James R. Hoffa, vice president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, has been indicted on five counts of perjury by a federal racketeer grand jury.

The indictment charged that the 44-year-old union leader, a candidate for the presidency of the teamsters to succeed Dave Beck, lied to the grand jury, during its probe into alleged wiretapping of teamster union headquarters in Detroit.

The grand jury also indicted Benjamin Franklin Collins, secretary-treasurer of Local 299, which is headed by Hoffa. It accused him of 12 counts of perjury in connection with the same investigation.

Trial Resumed

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The jury in the Confidential magazine criminal libel conspiracy case has gone back to work with the condition of its ailing member improved.

Dr. Marcus Crahan reported to Superior Judge Herbert V. Walker that juror Carl Rush was capable of continuing deliberations.

Rush complained yesterday that he was suffering from a cold. The jury's deliberations were interrupted so Rush could be examined by Dr. Crahan, medical director of the sheriff's department.

The jury entered its eighth day of deliberations today.

Originally there were three jury alternates but there is only one left. Two previously replaced regular jurors who became ill during the six-week trial.

STUDENT ENTERTAINMENT COMMITTEE

The Student Entertainment Committee will meet in the Woodhouse Conference Room from 5-6 p.m.

The N. C. State Fair Arena will seat up to 10,000 people, each with an unobstructed view.

Enrollment

Two more boys dormitories are being planned to house approximately 400 boys by September, 1959.

Additions to Phillips and Peabody Halls are expected to help alleviate classroom needs.

In addition to the General College, other schools showing decreases in enrollment of fall, 1956, over fall, 1957, include the following: a decrease of 3 in the School of Journalism from 63 to 60; 18 in Law School from 241 to 223; 1 in the School of Library Science from 41 to 40; and 4 in the School of Dentistry from 227 to 224.

Enrollment increases were noted in nine colleges and schools: 149 in the College of Arts and Sciences, 7

Dr. Boyd: He Holds His Class 'Spellbound'

By CHERRY PARKER

One hour spent in any of Dr. Bernard Boyd's religion classes, and it's easy to see why Bible study has caught on with students on the University of North Carolina campus.

Dr. Boyd strides into the classroom just as the bell sounds. He starts lecturing immediately, and though he never consults a note, his words flow—smooth and rich as Jersey cream. Even remote Bible characters take on meaning and life as Dr. Boyd plucks them out of books like Job or Ruth and sets them down in 20th century settings.

Dr. Boyd speaks of the "Robin Hood" career of David, which trained David to live as a leader for the future. He calls the story of David a parable of human nature. Labels Solomon "the harem-jaded king."

About the proverbs, Dr. Boyd says, "Solomon collected proverbs like FDR collected stamps and Ike plays golf."

Of Absalom, Dr. Boyd says, "Absalom declared to himself, 'I think I'll take over. Daddy is falling to pieces.' Absalom engaged in a whispering campaign against his Dad. He got in the headlines—he even rode to the post office in a chariot. And Absalom had a way with people comparable to FDR's. FDR could feed the king and queen winners in the backyard and get away with it—or share a cheeseburger with a deckhand equally well. So could Absalom.

"When God told Jonah to go to Ninevah," Dr. Boyd says, "Jonah was afraid God might save a Ninevite, and then Heaven wouldn't be any fun. So instead, Jonah heads due West—he takes a Mediterranean cruise from Joppa—there was a terrible storm." Dr. Boyd pauses. "Can't you just see Jonah—a prophet doing the breast stroke in the Mediterranean?"

"Books like Ruth and Jonah are not 'little' books," Dr. Boyd says. "Their modernity is eternal."

One student states, "Before Boyd, I associated the Bible with Sunday School and Noah and the Ark. Dr. Boyd has pieced the threads of the Bible together for me, and interpreted it into a meaningful plot."

Many notables have sat in on his classroom lectures. Both Ex-Chancellor Robert B. House (famous in his own right for his Sunday School teaching) and Mrs. House have attended them, as has Kay Kyser. Kay Kyser says, "Dr. Boyd is one of the finest communicators I've ever known. Not many can talk for fifty minutes at a time, day-in and day-out, and really be saying something."

Dr. Boyd's reputation has spread as the man to call upon for the Bible hour when big religious conventions are being planned. He just spent a week lecturing at Princeton, and is slated to speak, along with Billy Graham and President Eisenhower, at the Presbyterian Men's Convention to be held in October in Miami, Fla.

In light of the department chairman's increased responsibility and of the increased interest and enrollment in religion classes at Chapel Hill, it is pertinent to consider the activities of the entire department during the decade of its existence.

The department was set up 10 years ago with one instructor paid from state funds. The department got under way in temporary quarters loaned to it by the Department of Political Science in Caldwell Hall.

What is the picture today? Today, there is no doubt that the department's work has caught on fire with students on the campus, or that it is a respected and admired "institution" by people of North Carolina.

Yet the department still has needs. The first of which is a home of its own. "Right on the campus," says Dr. Boyd, "where it can be in the middle of things." Currently, the department is still in temporary quarters at Gardner Hall, and because of limitations of space, many students who want to take the courses must be excluded. Today, there is still only one instructor who is on state funds, and department members would like to offer a graduate program.

Some of the questions which have been asked about the Department of Religion are: Who are the teachers now in the department? How are they financed? How do they cooperate with other departments at the University? And, do they teach ministerial students?

Dr. Boyd himself came to the department in 1950 as the James A. Gray Professor of Biblical Literature. James A. Gray, a former Chairman of the Board of R. J. Reynolds Company, established the "chair" because he had had several sons at UNC, and he wanted to make it possible for UNC students to learn about the Bible if they were interested in it. James A. Gray funds have provided also for bringing to the campus distinguished biblical scholars for lectures and lecture series.

Dr. Arnold S. Nash is the one professor employed on state funds. Dr. Nash, who teaches the History of Religion, wrote the book, "The University in the Modern World," and he is recognized as an authority on the relationship of Christianity to the educational process. He has addressed groups at Yale, Oxford, and many other famous universities.

A third professor, Dr. Emmanuel Gitlin, offered for the first time at UNC a course in beginning Hebrew (a recent issue of Newsweek Magazine mentioned this innovation at Carolina as one of the many evidences of a new interest in and emphasis on the study of religion in America). This course will not be offered at UNC next year, however, as Dr. Gitlin has now accepted a position at Southern Methodist University in Texas.

A generous annual donation from Mrs. Karl Prickett of Greensboro has been given to the department for the purpose of securing assistants to aid Dr. Boyd in his work. Because of the Prickett funds, the department will be able to have Marvin Berry of Asheville as an instructor, and Joe Walsler of High Point as a full-time assistant in 1957-58.

The UNC department is unique in that it is the only department of religion in a State University that is truly integrated into the University curriculum. Theoretically, it occupies the same status as 'Eng-

Winner Named Of $800 Grant

An $800 creative writing scholarship has been awarded to Harry Durham, UNC graduate student in the Department of Radio, Television and Motion Pictures.

The scholarship is awarded from funds supplied by Screen Gems, Inc., a subsidiary of Columbia Pictures Corp.

Earl Wynn, department chairman, announced the selection of Durham, an Alabama native and Auburn graduate, who entered UNC in February, 1957. The scholarship period is September, 1957, through August, 1958.

A grant of $2,500 was provided in the spring of 1956 by Screen Gems, Inc. to encourage creative talent and to get student-written scripts usable on network television.

"Until this year we have not felt that we had anyone qualified to receive one of these scholarships," Wynn said. The first recipient, Durham, is working toward an M. A. degree in Communications to prepare him for a career in the production of motion pictures for TV use, and in motion picture writing.

A native of Fort Payne, Ala., Durham received his B. A. degree in English from Alabama Polytechnic Institute in 1954. He gained his first experience with films and TV while serving in the U.S. Army Signal Corps in Germany. For two years he directed production of newsreels and film for Army TV use.

Durham, in addition to his UNC studies, is on the staff of a Chapel Hill radio station.

GMAB Group Forming

The tournament committee of the Graham Memorial Activities Board is currently in the process of organizing for the present school year, Benny Thomas, president of GMAB, announced yesterday.

Chairman of the committee is Betty York Reece, a senior from Lincoln and a history major. This is a new committee organized to sponsor various tournaments throughout the year with a competitive spirit in mind.

Some of the tentative tournaments on the agenda include ping pong, billiards, bridge, chess, checkers and horseshoes. The tournament committee is one of fourteen committees of the Graham Memorial Activities Board, the programming phase of our student union, Graham Memorial.

"Miss Reece has some grand plans for the tournament committee and is in need of some very interested students to work with her," Thomas said.

Any student from a freshman to a senior, both men and women, may apply for this committee. Applications are available at the Graham Memorial information desk.

Interested students should come by GM and fill out an application before Monday if possible.
