

UNC Library Is Observing Press Week

Wilson Library is participating in the observance of "National Newspaper Week," Oct. 1-8, with an exhibition on the main floor of recently published books in the field of journalism, principally on the freedom of the press.

National Newspaper Week is annually observed at this time in honor of the daily and weekly newspapers of the nation, under the sponsorship of the Newspaper Association Managers, Inc., the nationwide organization of state, regional and national press association managers.

The purpose of this special week is "to demonstrate to the American reading public their right to know, as exemplified by Federal and State Constitutions," and the slogan for this year is "Your Newspaper Serves."

The American Library Association is cooperating in the nationwide observance. In a letter to the Newspaper Association Managers, Lucille M. Morsch, president of ALA, said: "This year, it is especially significant that librarians salute editors and publishers, because the theme, 'Your Newspaper Serves,' characterizes simply and directly the chief responsibility which newspapermen and librarians mutually share.

Together, we 'serve' our fellow-citizens with information, inspiration, and entertainment. We have stood together, too, for full freedom in making available all the facts on any subject, in the tradition of democracy's great contribution to the thinking of free men everywhere."

Card Winners Are Announced

The following students were announced as winners of Monday night's bridge tournament:

North-South: first place, Ted Hill, playing with townspeople, Bill Perkins, second place, Malcolm Clark and Mike, Athens.

East-West: second place, Joe and Sue Converse; third place, Bettie and Richard Hicks.

The next regularly scheduled game is set for next Monday at 7:30 p. m. in the Rendezvous Room at Graham Memorial.

Dean Settles Cut Questions

Absences from 8 and 9 a. m. classes on October 12 and classes on October 14 will not count as double cuts, according to an announcement yesterday by Dr. J. Carlyle Sitterson, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences.

This announcement came as a result of doubt aroused concerning whether or not University Day, October 12, is considered a University holiday.

Dean Sitterson said that the two classes Saturday morning, October 12, and classes on Monday, October 14, may be cut without any double-cut penalty.

Just the 8 and 9 a. m. classes will be held on October 12 so that the students will be able to attend Chancellor William Aycock's installation at 10:30 a. m. that day.

Fall

the sun isn't quite as important as it was in June.

Could it be the time when hay fever goes south?

Fall could mean different things to different people. To the old it may mean of slippery walks and an aching joint; to the young, the approach of Halloween, the experience of eating too much during Thanksgiving, and a promise of tinsel and candy to go with a December Christmas.

Fall is the time of the hunter. You know Fall is here when you are first awakened by the sound of geese heading south for the Winter. Guns appear from closets. Alarm clocks ring a little earlier. And strangely enough, arising early for hunting is not the same as arising early any other time... another puzzlement of Fall.

To some, Fall might easily be defined as simply a season conducive to hayrack rides. This is health reasoning, but not comprehensive.

Whatever it is we're glad it's here.
