Deacons Were Plenty Tough Saturday

From the Carolina-Wake Forest game Saturday, this observer feels that there are two points which should be made for the benefit of those who were not on hand.

- 1-Wake Forest is a hustling aggregate which absolutely refuses to give up regardless of the odds against it.
- 2-Carolina did not play as badly as it might seem and the reason is point number one.

The Tar simply encountered a team which had the desire to play its heart out and did exactly that. The Deacons don't know the word quit and that was obvious to the estimated 15,000 fans on hand for the battle.

Jim Tatum said after the game that he had never been happier in winning by a touchdown. Rightly so, The Tar Heels should be proud of the victory, for in no other contest this season have they met more determined opposition. The Deacons have certainly won the admiration of football fans, writers and coaches, and before this season is over, you look for that intangible quality to be rewarded.

Line Looked Good And Cummings Shone

Saturday's game cannot be labeled exciting. For the most part, it was a sluggish mid-field battle with neither team exhibiting any tremendous offensive power. But it gave the unsung heroes in the front wall a chance to shine. Defensively, both ball clubs showed some very fine prowess.

Tatum has pointed to boys like Phil Blazer, Mac Turlington, Stu Pell, Ralph Steele and Ronnie Koes as instrumental figures in the Tar Heels' victory. Buddy Payne played his usually fine game, highlighted by his terrific catch of Jack Cummings' pass in the end zone for Carolina's first score. Turlington also hauled in a pass which looked almost impossible.

As for Cummings, little could be said to overrate the play of this promising sophomore signal-caller from Lower Merion, Pa. Smiling Jack was the epitome of calmness all afternoon as he directed the ball club with the precision of a veteran. If one single man had to be given credit for the victory, it would have to be Cummings. He has definitely labeled himself a man to be reckoned with in future competition.

Gaca Showed 'Em How To Move A Football

There was another fellow out there Saturday who showed his ability to play this game of football. His name was Giles Gaca, a hard-running fullback who has been riddled with injuries all season. Gaca grinded out 90 yards for the Tar Heels and scored their second touchdown. Giles' performance has probably won him the starting assignment against Tennessee this Saturday.

There was, however, something missing in the Carolina attack. It's hard to say just what it could have been the absence of Dave Reed and Leo Russavage. But it must be remembered that halfback Jim Schuler did not play, and hard-charging Don Coker played much less than he has in the past. Add this up, and you might find that missing bit of potency.

Perhaps the weather had a good deal to do with the more or less "sluggish play" which was prevalent throughout some parts of the game. It was a miserable afternoon, not conducive to good watching or good playing.

Deacs Have Good Comedy Team

Wake Forest Coach Paul Amen called the game a "moral victory for his Deacs." At least, The Deacon mentor has done a great deal in keeping up the morale of his ball club through these trying weekends, and he must have received some consolation in his club's performance against the Tar Heels.

Amen, "Coach of the Year" in the ACC 1956, is one of the most likeable fellows in the coaching ranks. He is a relatively quiet, unassuming person who never gets too excited about anything. He sidekicks is a fellow named Floggie Ariel, the Deac trainer and one of the funniest fellows around. The two would make a good comedy team.

On hand in the press box was Charlie Carpenter, the fellow who was destined to quarterback the Deacs this year but underwent an operation and had to lay out a season. Charlie was doing some spotting for the press.

Did He Score Or Not, Who Knows?

Rumor has it that one of the refs told one of the Carolina players that fullback Pete Manning did not go over just as the half ended for the Deacon's touchdown. The way we heard it, one ref thought he did and threw up his hands, the other said he didn't. Doesn't make too much difference now, and besides, it's just a rumor.

Jack Cummings was the top kicker for Carolina Saturday, booting the ball five times for 168 yards and a 33.6 average. Don Coker kicked once for 31 yards and Curt Hathaway had one 34 yard kick.

Top receiver for Carolina was Buddy Payne who caught three chunks for 46 yards, one good for the aforementioned TD. Mac Turlington accounted for 25 aerial yards and Emil DeCantis had 15.

Sutton Going Great For Redskins

Ed Sutton is going great guns for the Washington Redskins. The ex-Tar Heel star was great against New York Sunday, scoring one touchdown. The Redskins have what is perhaps the finest crop of rookie backs in the National Football League. Aside from Sutton, Jim Podolev, Don Bosseler and Joe Walton are all seeing plenty of action in the nation's capital.

Speaking of Washington, reminds of us the time "way back when" the Washington Senators were having a hard time seeing daylight in the American League. Some ingenious Washington fans erected a big banner out in center field which read: "Washington, first in war, first in peace and last in the American League."

Scene on the campus: Unhappy students looking downcast and walking toward the gym. Reason: Physical education has resumed after two weeks layoff, compliments of the flu bug.

Watch out Oklahoma. The Sooners are getting closer and closer to the inevitable. Saturday, Colorado gave Bud Wilkinson's crew the scare of its life. The mighty Sooners just did edge by the four touchdown underdog Colorado team, 14-13. Everybody's gunning for the Sooner powerhouse now.

Never have seen a coach singing the blues like Bill Murray of Duke. Guess he's shooting for that perfect record, because the State game didn't make much difference. The Durham contingents have the Orange Bowl bid wrapped up. But didn't that State club give the Devils a tough time Saturday?

ROD AND GUN CLUB MEET TODAY

The Rod and Gun Meet, which was scheduled for last week, will be held this afternoon at the Durham Wildlife Area. The meet had to be rescheduled because of the widespread flu disease.

Light Work Is Held By Tar Heels

Carolina players who participated in the 14-7 victory over Wake Forest last week took it easy today, drilling in light gear.

Other members of the squad had a long session of heavy contact work as the Tar Heels began preparations for the homecoming game with once-beaten Tennessee here Saturday.

Center Ronnie Koes, who played an outstanding game against the Deacons, was in the infirmary with a sinus infection. There was no word as to when he will be released for practice.

Asst. Coaches Pat Preston and Fred Tullai presented a scouting report on Tennessee and defenses were set for the high-powered Vols, who are led by tailback Bobby Gordon.

Duke Faces Tough Tilt With Tech

DURHAM, N. C., Oct. 28 (AP)—Duke is in for another rough Saturday this week against Georgia Tech, according to the scout report given at Duke's regular Monday press luncheon today.

"Just because Georgia Tech isn't undefeated when we are playing them this year, doesn't mean they don't have a great team and that we can expect to have an easy time of it," scout Herschel Caldwell told newsmen.

"Tech has a very good defensive team and, I might add, well-drilled in every respect," Caldwell continued. "I do not think their defense is better than the offense, especially their passing attack."

"Tech has changed its offensive setup this season and once the team gets together their boys will run with anybody. They have 17 different formations from which to run. Also, fumbles have hurt them a lot this year."

Caldwell, defensive end coach, has been scouting Georgia Tech since 1933, when the Duke-Tech series started. Caldwell has seen the Yellow Jackets go against Auburn, and LSU this season.

Coach Bill Murray added that anytime a team goes to Tech's Grant Field to play a game, it's hard to win.

"However, we feel we have a jump in preparing for Tech," Murray said. "N.C. State runs many plays similar to Tech and we just experienced a hard week in preparing for State's offense."

In speaking of the Duke-State game Saturday, Murray handed out more praise for the Wolfpack.

Weigh - ins Must Be In By 5:30 Today

Intramural wrestling competitors must complete weigh-ins by 5:30 p. m. today, Tommy Johnson of the intramural office said yesterday. He added that from noon to 5:30 p. m. weigh-ins will be conducted in the basket room.

Johnson also announced that all second round results in intramural tennis must be reported by 5 p. m. today to the intramural office.

Third round tennis results are due Friday, Johnson said.

Duke Blue Devils Begin Preparations For Tech

DURHAM, N. C., Oct. 28 (AP)—Duke Blue Devils, smarting from a frustrating tie with North Carolina State, began preparations today for Saturday's game with Georgia Tech.

Coach Bill Murray told reporters at a press luncheon today that "we play Tech every year and we know it's tough to beat them any time at any place." He pointed out that since taking over the reins at Duke the Blue Devils have played Tech three times in Atlanta and have taken two defeats and a tie.

Assistant Coach Herschel Caldwell, who scouts Tech, told the newsmen that Coach Bobby Dodd

WAKE FOREST SIDELITES

WF Greek Week Had Miserable Finale, Thanks To Tar Heel Club

By ED ROWLAND

Carolina paid the Deacs back for a disappointing 6-6 tie in 1956 with a win Saturday, but it was a pity not many fans were able to see the game.

Bowman Gray Stadium, a horse-shoe-shaped concrete affair, holds only 17,000 persons. But the televised battle between State and Duke must have drawn many fans indoors, because only some 15,000 persons showed up for the game.

And the proverbial "a great time was had by all" does not apply to the occasion. Wake Forest was celebrating Greek Week, with queens, fraternity displays on campus, and a big dance. And some half a dozen high school bands were present for half-time activities.

But to lose the game caused many good Baptists to drown their sorrows, or something. They didn't yell very much in the second half.

Roy Thompson reported in the Winston-Salem Journal Sunday morning that the fraternity display drawing the most comment was in front of the Sigma Phi Epsilon quarters.

They had a mannikin lying in a bed wearing a black brassiere. A sign said, "I dreamed I beat Carolina in my Maidenform Bra."

It turned into a nightmare. And on the Carolina side of the stadium fans were subjected to taunts and ridicule from the Wake Forest Deacon. But late in the game he was being cajoled by a Tar Heel holding a shepherd's staff when another Carolina gentleman crept up behind and threw a flying tackle on the Deac.

It was a better tackle than some on the playing field. But the two finally shook hands and parted friends.

And throughout the game it rained—not much, but enough to make things miserable. And it was cold. It was the kind of day that internal fortification is deemed necessary by a large segment of the population. So said fortification was downed by great gulps.

Tarheel's Tatum: "Winning's Not The Big Thing . . . It's The Only Thing!"

Will coach Jim Tatum's "big-time" ideas work at North Carolina? How do the alumni feel about them? And how do new recruiting rules affect the Tarheels' football future?

In this week's Saturday Evening Post, you'll join the nation in a close-up look at the controversial Jim Tatum. You'll read what he really thinks about recruiting talent, giving scholarships, college athletes and students in general!

And you'll find out why he left Maryland for less money, less popularity and more headaches . . . and how close he actually came to leaving the Tarheels, too!
