University Changes Tests For Entrance

By ANN FRYE
The Consolidated University is now acting under a new policy of entrance examinations for students applying for admission in September, 1958.
For the past two years the University has operated under selective admissions tests administered by the University.
The policy now requires that candidates for the 1958 freshman class make satisfactory scores on the scholastic aptitude tests of the College Entrance Examination Board.
College Board exams were acceptable substitutes for the University's admissions tests in 1956 and 1957.
Approval of this policy came this fall by the Board of Trustees.
However, before the change-over to College Board exams could be activated, the University waited for some assurance from the State Budget Commission that financial losses from the exams would be reimbursed.
Under the plan to give the aptitude tests, anyone taking the tests pays a $7 fee to the College Entrance Board of New Jersey, which administers the exams. And the University has said that any North Carolina resident admitted to the freshman class would have the $7 fee credited toward his tuition payments.
Financial losses by the three units of the University, because of incurring the $7 fee for each of its North Carolina freshmen, was estimated to be $27,000 each year.
This financial yoss by the University neared elimination Saturday when the State Budget Commission said it would recommend to the Governor and Council of State that the University be reimbursed from Contingency and Emergency funds.
The reasoning behind the University's state policy of deducting the $7 from a freshman's tuition is that the University bore the expense of the admissions test it administered in 1956 and 1957.
The State Budget Commission Saturday also urged the State Board of Higher Education to draw up a plan under which aptitude tests would be given to all high school graduates in the state.
Unlike the selective admissions tests given by the University in 1956 and this year, the aptitude tests are designed to find any hidden or undeveloped talent and not merely to test the knowledge of a student.
If the aptitude tests are given to all high school graduates, better vocational guidance and determi-

Manhunt Seeks Killer

RALEIGH, Nov. 15 (AP) — Grim-faced lawmen across the nation watched today for some sign of a 26-year-old ex-convict who bragged that he would be his brother's keeper — and who allegedly slew two North Carolina highway patrolmen he thought would keep him from his mission.
The watch was especially tense in the Southeast. For the fugitive, Frank Edward Wetzel, only a petty criminal when he escaped Oct. 21 from a New York State mental hospital — had boasted to fellow hospital inmates that he was going to Mississippi to free his brother from the death house.
State patrolmen in Mississippi, where National Guardsmen have been patrolling the penitentiary that holds William Wetzel, 37, were warned today not to take any chances with Frank Wetzel.
William is under death sentence for the April, 1953 slaying of a fellow prisoner. No execution date has been set because William's lawyers plan to appeal the sentence to the U. S. Supreme Court.
Private citizens were asked to be on the lookout for Frank Wetzel, and thousands of "Wanted" circulars were distributed to post offices. The hunted man was described as 5-10, weighing 160 pounds, brown hair, and a scar on the upper lip.
The fugitive had been in and out of New York State jails since he was 12, mostly for such convictions as assault and larceny. He was sent to the mental hospital at Willard, N. Y. last September for observation. There, before his escape, he bragged that he would go to Mississippi and free his brother.

Business, Economics Will Have Closer Link

An increased practical application of economics to business operation was predicted by Princeton economist Oskar Morgenstern this week in a UNC seminar talk.
Dr. Morgenstern, addressing the UNC Business Administration School's seminar in economics and business, said that the current "breaking with tradition" may prove to be the biggest development in economics in over a century.
"Economics is becoming more abstract, technical and abstruse," he said, "but, simultaneously, it is becoming more practical and useful."
The director of Princeton University's economics research project noted that the new trend is bringing about a "blurring in the sharp distinction between 'economics' and 'business economics.' This merging would be helpful for both the theoretical and empirical fields.
"It is remarkable that economists have paid so little attention to decision-making by big businessmen," Dr. Morgenstern said. Careful calculation goes into each component part of the decision, he commented, but the final choice often rests almost solely on intuition.
In discussing problem solving through application of economic theory, Dr. Morgenstern commented that the electronic computer is the greatest tool ever devised for the social scientist.
"What the microscope has been to the natural scientist, the computer can be for the social scientist—opening new worlds," he continued.
Born and educated in Austria, Dr. Morgenstern directed business cycle research at the University of Vienna before coming to America during the 1930's. Now professor of economics at Princeton, he is well known for his book, "The Theory of Games and Economic Behavior," which he co-authored with the late John von Neuman, noted developer of electronic computers.

CLUES UNCOVERED

HONOLULU, Nov. 15 (AP) — Fire-scarred wreckage and broken bodies provided grim clues today to the mystery as to why Pan American's "Romance of the Skies" plunged 10,000 feet into the Pacific a week ago without one radioed word of trouble.
Eternal injuries and broken bones of the 17 bodies recovered made clear the big strato-cruiser hit the sea with terrific force.
The fact most of the bodies were shoeless and clad in life jackets suggested the 44 plane occupants were aware a ditching was being attempted.
Whether fire broke out before or after the big plane hit was not clear. But the Navy said there was evidence of fire in the floating mail, cushions and other bouyant parts.

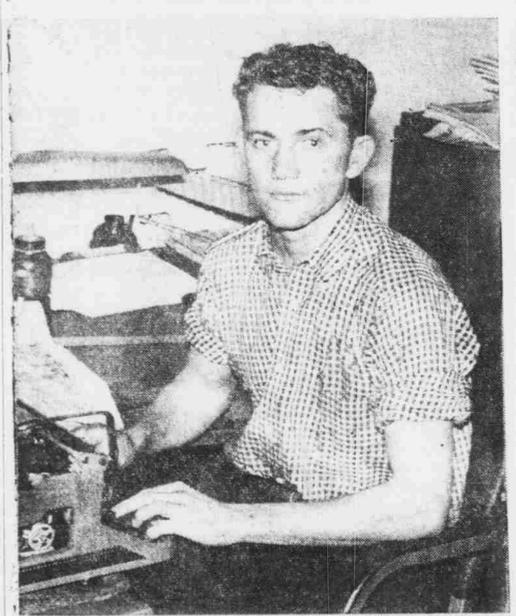

Talent Tryouts Slated Monday

Tryouts for the Carolina Cavalcade Talent show will be held in the afternoon and evening of Monday, November 18, in Memorial Hall, Mrs. Eleanor Riggins Brawley, director, announced today.
The show is scheduled to take place in Memorial Hall at 8 p. m. on November 25. The producer of the show will be G. C. Pridgen.
The director announced Bob Fox as stage manager, Jack Mitchell assistant stage manager and Ed Crow as set designer. The Embers Orchestra will furnish music between acts and for a background for the master of ceremonies.
This year's program will not be competitive, but will be presented for entertainment only, according to Mrs. Brawley.
Any person interested in participating in the show is urged to register for a try-out time at the information office of the YWCA, or contact Mrs. Brawley in Graham Memorial Building.
The Embers Orchestra is directed by Cal Huber. It is made up of former professional musicians of name bands who are now employed in other vocations in the Chapel Hill area.
The Y-Nite Committee and GMAB will sponsor the talent show.
Some old talent which will appear is Les Sutorius and combo, Nick Kerns with his rock and roll piano, Jerry Farber, piano comedian, Pee Wee Batten, and Hoke Simpson.

Bass, Rule, Winston Meet Public Debate Among Recall Candidates Set For Monday

NEIL BASS

Editor Predicts Voters To Uphold 'Free Expression'

By BILL CHESHIRE
Plans got underway today for a public debate among the contestants in the recall race for editor of the Daily Tar Heel. Sponsored by GMAB, UP and SP, the debate will be held in conjunction with informal meetings of both campus political parties and is scheduled for 7 p.m. in Gerrard Hall Monday.
All three candidates—Barry Winston, Paul Rule and Editor Neil Bass—expressed their willingness to participate in this meeting. Benny Thomas, president of GMAB, will serve as moderator.
Following the discussion in Gerrard Hall, the two political parties will hold regular meetings at which they will decide whether to endorse a particular candidate for the office of editor, and if so, which one.
Commenting on the proposed debate, Editor Bass expressed the hope that as many students as possible would attend.
"I feel the open forum is an excellent idea," he said. "The entire student body should definitely have the opportunity to hear all sides of the present recall movement."
Bass also urged "a strong vote" in the recall election, which is slated for November 26. "A strong vote will definitely negate the votes of the organized recall minority," he said.
"I sincerely feel," he added, "that the students will support free editorial expression, regardless of disagreement on particular issues."
"The student body does not want a non-controversial student newspaper—a paper in which only pat platitudes are expounded upon—agreeable, pat platitudes," he also implied that the movement to unseat him was the work of a "political clique." He predicted, however, that their efforts would meet with little success.
"American in Paris," free flick for this week, has been held over for one showing tonight at 7:30 in Carroll Hall, according to Mike Strong, chairman of the Free Film Committee of G.M.A.B. The film stars Gene Kelly, Leslie Caron and Oscar Levant.
"What Every Woman Knows" is the third show of the Playmakers' season. A comedy of marital misunderstandings by James M. Barrie, the show will be presented Dec. 11-15.
Four women and eight men will make up the speaking roles in the cast.
Harry E. Davis, professor of dramatic art, has announced that all tryouts will be open to the public. Interested persons have been invited to read. Copies of the play are available in the Reserve Room of the library.
III. Alexander, Winston and Conner, and won a one-year seat.
"I think his primary purpose (in running) was to present the views of the athletes, and I think it is a good idea," said Whit Whitfield, SP party chairman.
"It is time athletes got a voice in legislature," Whitfield continued. He pointed out that athletes are a sizable group of students who previously did not have any of its rank in the legislature.
Speaking of Kearns, Bill King, Sports Editor of the Daily Tar Heel, said, "He is the man expected to take up where Lennie Rosenbluth left off."
King pointed out that Kearns had been chosen for several All-American basketball teams of different sports magazines.
Last year he played a vital role in the Tar Heels' success. He was one of the high scorers of the team and is noted for his hustle and drive on the court.
The SP ran Tom for sergeant-of-arms of the legislature at the last meeting. Kearns lost by only one vote to Neal Boden (UP).
Tom, who lives in Bergenfield, N.J., is a senior and is majoring in history.

World In Brief

Space Boss
WASHINGTON, Nov. 15 (AP) — Secretary of Defense McElroy said today he will appoint a single boss to manage such space programs as satellites and anti-missile missiles.
McElroy said that within a month the Defense Department hopes to name a new officer to be the "single manager" of what he termed "upstream" type projects such as the anti-missile missile and military application of outer space vehicles.
The job will be separate from one held by William M. Holaday, McElroy's guided missile aide. Holaday will continue to have supervision over the perfection of intermediate range and intercontinental ballistic missiles.

McGuire To Get Notice Of Contract Extension
A letter to Athletic Director Chuck Erickson officially notifying him of the extension of Coach Frank McGuire's contract here was in the mail today.
Chancellor William Aycock said Erickson's office will turn the letter over to McGuire, notifying him that the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees has extended the contract for a five-year period at an undisclosed salary.
Meanwhile, however, McGuire declined comment on the contract which would retain him as the Tar Heel basketball coach. It would become effective July 1, 1958.
Chancellor Aycock said in a report released Tuesday that he requested approval of a renewed contract for McGuire on the recommendation of the Athletic Council.
The Executive Committee of the trustees then passed the recommendation, although complete terms
