

UNC Officials Clear Lambda Chi In Misconduct Charges

By ANN FRYE

Lambda Chi Alpha Fraternity was cleared officially of all misconduct charges today after investigation of an alleged "pajama party" in the early morning hours Sunday at Jack's Drive-In.

All that remained of the highly publicized incident was resentment by the local fraternity as it continued denial of accusations made by a state ABC agent and Durham County law enforcement officers.

But even the state agent, ABC man John Buck, had earlier recalled a previous statement that he saw 20 to 25 couples "in various stages of undress and intoxication" when he and other officials arrived at the roadhouse between here and Durham.

No Misconduct

After a meeting with University officials and fraternity members in Chancellor William Aycock's office Monday night, Buck issued the following statement:

"I saw no student involved in any misconduct. I saw nothing that indicated immorality.

"Two deputy sheriffs were with me and no arrests were made because no violation of the law by the members of the party was observed in my opinion.

"The purpose of the investigation was to check on the complaint in regards to possible illegal activities at the establishment."

Buck and two Durham County sheriff's deputies had gone to the roadhouse on a tip that illegal activities were being carried on there.

Loudspeaker Warning

Buck had said that he and the deputies arrived at the roadhouse about 3 a.m. Sunday and that as they were entering the establishment a voice on a loudspeaker warned, "Get rid of your bottles right now, the inspector is coming!"

Curtis Fields, president of Lambda Chi Alpha, said that to his knowledge no announcement over any loudspeaker was made.

Fields, in commenting on the dress of the 40 people present at the party, said that the girls wore Bermuda shorts, slacks and sweaters. Some of the girls, he said, were wearing over their other clothes night shirts which were given as favors to the girls during the pledge dance of the fraternity Saturday night.

Fields said some of the boys were wearing pajamas over their other clothes.

The three law enforcement officers walked into the room where the party was being held, brandishing flash lights, and then left after five minutes, Fields said.

First Information

The first information the fraternity members had of the first statements of Buck to the press was when Chancellor Aycock summoned some of the boys to his office Sunday.

The students denied implications in the first statements by Buck. Then Buck retracted some of his first remarks. But the misinformation already had been given to the State Press.

By the time the revised story was released, the Associated Press had already sent out an account containing the original statements by Buck, and this story was used in the first editions of several state newspapers.

In a joint statement last night, Fields and Bill Redding, Interfraternity Council. President stated that they regretted that "the news stories were released as they were.

"We realize that publicity such as this brings a bad name to a fraternity, and in any such future cases, we hope that all the correct information is obtained before anything is printed," said Fields and Redding.

The two fraternity officials declared that "the publicity was not correct when first released. We also hope that the corrected versions of the story will be carried by the state papers which did not contain the true facts in the first releases of their stories."

Redding said that no action would be taken against the fraternity by the IFC or IFC court because "no action is warranted in this case."

Sam Magill, director of student activities, said yesterday there was no evidence found of any misconduct. However, he said, "This doesn't mean I necessarily approve the propriety of holding a late party at a place like Jack's. This indicates some lack of judgment."

UP To Hear Honor Discussion

The University Party will discuss the Honor Council bill introduced in the Student Legislature last week at its regular meeting tonight.

The meeting will be in Roland Parker Lounges 1 and 2 at 7:15 p. m.

Party Chairman Syd Shuford said yesterday George Ragsdale, chairman of the Men's Honor Council, and Sonny Hallford, attorney general, will attend and discuss the bills with members of the party.

Bill Proposals

The bill, tossed in the hopper under the sponsorship of both campus political parties, proposes to abolish the separate Men's and Women's Councils and include jury trials for students accused of violating the honor code. The new council, if established, will be composed of five members and nine jurors and will have original jurisdiction on code violations.

The bill is scheduled to come out of committee for possible action Thursday.

Shuford said, "It is seldom that a subject of such fundamental importance to us as students is brought up." He added that "every student should make it his duty—as it is his privilege—to participate in policy-making, especially when it affects his everybody life as this does."

Urges Attendance

Shuford urged each dorm, sorority and fraternity to send representatives to the meeting, and he declared that any interested student could represent himself at the discussion.

The party chairman added: "It is party policy to air any and all issues that come within the realm of student government, for it is through uninhibited discussion that the wisest choice is ultimately made."

Y Discussion Groups Begin

The first of three-day discussion groups on opportunities for summer work will be held today in the Council room of the Y Building from 2 to 5:30 p. m.

Members of the Y staff and students who have attended work-camps here and abroad will be on hand to discuss the work involved and the opportunities for securing such work.

Several agencies will be represented in the session today. All students interested in summer work have been invited to stop by the Council room sometime between 2 and 5:30 p. m.

These discussion groups are being sponsored by the Campus Christian Council, in conjunction with the local Y.

Mary Morgan, chairman of the special Y Committee holding the sessions, said yesterday that activities of students in workcamps, such as excursions, study and discussion groups on prevalent topics, will be discussed today by Miss Anne Queen of the Y staff and students Pooh Jones, Don Wells, Southerland and, Tom Ray.

GLADIOLAS — A highlight of the Winter Germans will be the presentation of the well-known singing group, the Gladiolas, who are accompanied by a five-piece combo, who are best known for their popular hit "Little Darling." The group will be one of the features at the Winter Germans dance this Saturday night.

Outstanding Composer Performs Here Tonight

By WESTBROOK FOWLER

A noted Australian pianist and composer, Percy Grainger, who was chosen by Edward Grieg, Norwegian composer, to perform his Piano Concerto in A Minor on an important occasion in 1907, will appear here in joint concert tonight, at 8 o'clock in Hill Music Hall.

Grainger, playing with the UNC Symphonic Wind Ensemble, conducted by Herbert W. Fred, and the University Chorus, directed by Walton Mason, will be the soloist in the first movement of Grieg's famous concerto. Compositions written or arranged by Grainger himself, will compose the greater part of the program.

Child Prodigy

As a child prodigy, Grainger, born in Melbourne, Australia, toured Europe giving many piano concerts. During this period Grieg recognized him as a performer of outstanding ability. The young artist went on to become one of the most popular pianists of the early 20th century. Many of Grainger's compositions, both vocal and instrumental, are based upon English folksongs collected by him since 1895. His works, recognized for their use of irregular rhythms, have been performed frequently in this country and abroad. Although technically difficult to perform, they are models of melodic tunefulness.

Music Series

Currently Graingers is coediting an important music series, English Gothic Music. He is doing this in addition to his regular concert appearances. The concert Tuesday night which is open to the public, is being sponsored by the Department of Music and Graham Memorial.

Three Beauties Grace Local Women's Store

A local clothing store was tripping graced Saturday morning with the presence of Elaine Herndon, Miss North Carolina, and Cecile Martin and Dottie Bull, the November and January Miss Fashion-plates.

All three appeared at Robbins clothing store in connection with the showing of a special collection of spring dresses designed specifically for Miss Herndon.

Elaine, a lovely and vivacious brunette who attended summer school at Carolina last summer, graciously handed out roses at the door of the store as Dottie, a slender red head, and Cecile, a pretty blonde, drifted among the customers.

Official Duties

When asked what her official duties now consisted of Miss Herndon said, "I do some modeling, visit civic groups, speak sometimes, and visit church parties and ladies' nights, and sometimes I entertain."

She explained that she entertained by singing and dancing or by sometimes reciting while playing the piano.

When asked how she developed her talent, she grinned and said, "I guess I inherited what little I have. My grandfather was a Methodist."

Paddy Wall, Ragsdale And Hallford Discuss Honor Council Revision Bill At SP Meeting

By Pringle Pipkin

Phi Society To Debate Work Laws

Right-to-work laws, the national intercollegiate debate query for this year, will be debated by the Phi Society at its regular meeting tonight.

Warren Coolidge, chairman of the ways and means committee, has announced that the bill resolves: the requirement of membership in a labor organization as a condition of employment should be illegal.

The bill favors right-to-work laws, which have been enacted by 18 states, Rep. Coolidge disclosed. Members of the University Debate Squad have been invited to 8 p. m. meeting, which will be held in Phi Hall on the fourth floor of New East.

New Feature

A new feature of the organization this year, the invitation to a faculty member who is an authority on the topic of the evening, will be inaugurated. A member of the economics department will serve as guest critic.

Tonight's bill states that the McClellan Committee has uncovered illegal practices in labor unions, and that compulsory membership in private organizations should not interfere with an individual's right to follow any of the common occupations of life.

Jess Stribling will preside over the meeting.

Three student leaders gave varying opinions about the bill to revise the Honor Councils at a meeting of the Student Party last night.

Sonny Hallford, Attorney-General of the Student Body, said that he considered the bill a "work sheet" and not in its final form. There is a difference between violations of social rules and of the Honor Council, he said.

The attorney-general asserted that even though under the proposed system the attorney-general's staff investigates a case, the jury decides a verdict, and the Honor Council renders a sentence, these groups would function as a single council.

Compromises

He said, "I would agree to make compromises as long as we all agree that the compromises are good." What we are undertaking is an experiment," he commented later in the evening.

Miss Paddy Wall, a member of the Women's Honor Council, claimed that the student body needed to feel a definite responsibility to the Honor System, and that the student do not now feel this responsibility.

Anyone on the campus should be subject to jury call, she said. The idea of having a combined men and women's administration of the Honor System was not, she said, in the Women's Honor Council's opinion a good one.

A Single Case

Miss Wall stated that she did know of "a single case" where boys and girls had been implicated that different sentences had been given. This type of case is the minority by a ratio of about 25 to one, she commented.

There are important facts, she said, that a girl would not bring out before a mixed council. She said that many social violations often involved Honor System violations.

"Think about it, and put yourself in the offender's place," she permanent place to hold large dances."

George Ragsdale, Chairman of the Men's Honor Council, said he did not like the idea of having a single male and female administration of the Honor System.

Amendment

He stated that he was going to try to have the bill amended so that there were two administrations of unmixed sexes.

Ragsdale claimed that a mixed jury would cut down on the amount of the more personal testimony that an offender might give.

While this testimony might not be helpful in deciding guilt, he asserted it would be important in making a sentence which would be "corrective."

He told the students to put themselves in the position of the offender and asked for a "separate (men from women) but equal system here."

After the talks the speakers answered a number of questions.

Mardi Gras To Be Held As Planned

By CHARLIE SLOAN

Carolina's Mardi Gras weekend will be held as scheduled.

Last week the Mardi Gras committee was told that they could not use the Tin Can for the dance because the building would be unsafe for a large number of people.

Saturday a state building inspector looked over the Tin Can and has declared that its floor is safe. He said some alterations on the lights and doors will be necessary.

When the inspector announced his findings, Phys. Ed. Dept. Chairman O. K. Corawell approved the Mardi Gras Committee's request to hold the dance in the building.

Mardi Gras Chairman Gerry Boudreau said he hoped this "small incident will show campus leaders and administrators the dire need for a permanent place to hold large dances."
