Prime Consideration Is News States Frye

Ann Frye, candidate for editor of The Daily Tar Heel, stated Friday that news is fundamental to the Tar Heel and should be the main consideration of the editor.

"Any person on this campus can mimeograph his opinions (and the editorials are one person's opinion, after all), but publication of news is the main function of a newspaper and should be treated as such.

"The Tar Heel needs better campus news coverage, better written stories and a better selection of the news that appears. To accomplish this basic and necessary news project, the editor must provide the incentive and work with the news editor and reporters for betterment of the news pages.

"Students on this campus, from my discussions with many of them, form their opinions from reading the facts in news stories in the Tar Heel. The editorial serves as a place where the editor can compare their opinions with that of the editor.

"In the past, editors of the Tar Heel have over-evaluated the importance and influence of their editorials and grossly under-emphasized the news. On a college newspaper where the editor is limited in the time he can spend, the decision must be made as to which aspect of the paper will be considered most important.

"I maintain that the campus news must be given priority above all else. Only if this basic function of the newspaper is given the importance it deserves by the editor, can the Tar Heel ever hope for improvements along other lines.

IN THE INFIRMARY

Students in the infirmary yesterday included:

Misses Nancy Grubb, Donna Kelly, Phillis Jones, Mary Ann Stamper, Anita Edwards, Jean Gorwill, Jean Culbreath, Carolina Richards, Kenny Graham, Hilda Holt, Sally Armfield, Roberta Williams, Susan Inman and Catherine Bolton and Barton Kaplan, Will Ferguson, Jim Ruse, David Parish, Johnny Smallwood, Joe Ferrell, Khalil Nancy, Herb Samman, Ed Goodman, John Claire, Chris Jones, Jerry Wilmire, Henry Caldwell, Don McGregor, Cecil Garrett, Frank Kalil, John Reeder, Carl Capps, Paul Russel, Herb Wilson, William Lewis, Wayne Houser and John Alexander.

"The editor can improve the news that appears in the Tar Heel, but only if he is willing to work with news himself and willingly to understand and solve the problems connected with a non-salaried, student staff."

BLOSSOMS

The cherry trees with their white flowers are usually the first group of trees on campus that will blossom forth in the next few days of Spring.

4 Plays Highlight Final Drama Day

Today ends the ninth annual meeting of the Southeastern Theatre Conference in Chapel Hill. The last four of Paul Green's plays are to be presented tonight in Memorial Hall at 8:30.

These plays include "The Last of the Loweries," produced by Catawba College; "Quare Medicine," by the University of Alabama; "Fixin's" by the Chattanooga Little Theatre; and "The No Count Boy" by Tennessee A. and I. University.

Tickets are on sale in the Playmakers Business Office and Ledbetter-Pickard.

The Carolina Playmakers, celebrating their 40th year of successful play production, have been sponsors for the conference.

Keep Student In Mind In DTH Says Whitley

John Whitley, candidate for the editorship of The Daily Tar Heel said Friday that "The Daily Tar Heel should be published with the student in mind, and strive for the good of the students and the welfare of the University."

Continuing his statement, Whitley said:

"I believe in basically a conservative editorial policy, but one which will take a definite stand on issues. The editor should have first-hand knowledge about issues before writing; he should not be too liberal, not too extreme.

"The editorial page should devote itself primarily to local issues. I see the need, however, to keep the student body up-to-date on the most important world news.

"More interpretative editorial columns are needed to acquaint the average student with his University. Letters to the editor are a vital part of the editorial page. I would encourage all constructive criticism.

"All campus organizations should be covered as thoroughly as possible. To accomplish this, I will strive to institute a larger staff and bring the Tar Heel to a closer working association with the News Bureau and the Sports Publicity Office.

"Very important world news should be published, but only the most important. National news could be condensed by rewriting the articles into short briefs.

"I believe in big-time athletics as long as they do not interfere with scholastics. I think all University programs should be top-notch.

"I would strive to improve the appearance of the paper. Photography could be improved, and the quality of the pictures appearing in the paper could be made better with slight changes in the present system.

"I think the advertising radius could be expanded to enable the staff to publish more six-page issues.

"The editor should be a good organizer. He should be energetic, know the system from top to bottom, place his personnel where they are most efficient, and maintain harmony in the front office.

"Although the last stage in the process, circulation is all-important. I plan to revamp the circulation department so that papers will be placed before each individual dormitory door every day.

"I plan to work with the Greek-letter societies, as I will all groups, in as fair a way as possible. I will see that they receive all the publicity they deserve concerning their positive and constructive activities.

"The Daily Tar Heel needs to be more lively. During this campaign, I have learned that a large percentage of the students do not even read their newspaper.

"I think interest can be revived by the use of stimulating editorials, original features, and humor. The students deserve a newspaper of which they can be proud. I will strive to give them that type of paper."

"I feel I am well qualified for the position. Other than being editor of my high school newspaper at Thomasville, N. C., I worked as a part-time rewrite man for the High Point Enterprise for one year, where I became familiar with all phases of newspaper work and the city daily system.

"In addition I was a sports correspondent for the Thomasville Tribune and the High Point Enterprise for three years, during which time I also served as a special writer for the Greensboro Daily News, the Winston-Salem Journal and the Charlotte Observer.

"Add four years experience as a printer, and you have a candidate who has been from one end of the newspaper industry to the other," Whitley concluded.

Student Council Picks Jim Long

Jim Long, a junior from Yanceyville, was elected chairman of the Student Council Wednesday night.

Long, a Morehead Scholar, was appointed to the Council in his freshman year when a revision of the Student Constitution called for an extra seat in the body. Since then he has been re-elected each successive year.

In addition to his Council work Long is secretary of Chi Psi fraternity, second vice-president of the Wesley Foundation and co-head manager of the Carolina football team.

In a statement to The Daily Tar

Heel Friday Long said, "Our Student Council as set forth in the revised Student Constitution of 1957, is still a relatively new judicial body. Since the ratification of that constitution, however, the council has taken many strides toward the development of a sound and consistent policy to aid in its operation under new judicial limitations. I feel the council has used intelligent discretion in rendering recent decisions involving both Campus Code violators and constitutional questions. It is my hope that we shall continue to grow and to contribute a just decision at the trial of every case."

Candidate Gans Calls For Livelier Paper

Curtis Gans, candidate for editor of The Daily Tar Heel summed up his program calling for a larger, more lively, educational and responsible Daily Tar Heel Friday.

"In the past two weeks, I have presented a program which would lead to a financial sound, provocative, journalistically honest and technically competent paper.

"I'm exceedingly gratified at the support given me by the majority of the staff of The Daily Tar Heel and by the Student Party. This represents a ratification of a sound program for newspaper improvement by both journalists and student leaders.

"My program calls for a provocative editorial page utilizing both divergent opinions as well as the resources of the university faculty.

"The paper should include features on all walks of campus life not only the student government beat. Moreover, the paper should undertake studies and investigations into various aspects of campus life, utilizing the GMAB Polls Committee to sample student opinion on the various issues that the Daily Tar Heel is studying.

"The Daily Tar Heel can more fully cover the campus by utilizing a stringer and news tip system which I have advocated in the past. A more full coverage of intramural sports, minor sports and women's athletics is included in this program.

"The Daily Tar Heel can be a larger paper if it wants to, by putting advertising men on a commission basis to give them some incentive to get ads.

"The paper can become more financially sound by tapping on the resources of the 40,000 living alumni and 7,000 parents, who represent a potential revenue to the paper of $200,000.

"Many of these parents and alumni cannot be reached on a daily basis, but if The Daily Tar Heel had a large Sunday paper with a news of the week in review section and perhaps a people in the news feature, the paper might be able to sell subscriptions on a weekly basis, which in itself would raise advertising rates and add extra revenue.

"A training system must be established for the staff to both create and perpetuate good journalism on the paper.

"Editorials dealing at least 50 per cent with campus events will provide a proper balance, so that the editor realizes his responsibility to the campus as well as placing the campus within the world scope.

"I feel that with over six years newspaper experience affiliated in various capacities with such papers as the Asheville Citizen-Times, Sylva Herald, New York Times, New York Herald-Tribune and many others, as well as over two years of experience in all phases of The Daily Tar Heel operation, I will be able to put out the most journalistically competent newspaper.

"The participation in student activities for a period of almost three years on this campus, has given me knowledge of the entire campus.

"I hope the student body will take into consideration, my experience, ability and program for newspaper improvement before they vote."

MISS SYLVIA CAREWE—This celebrated painter will exhibit her work Tuesday in the Morehead Building. She will speak Monday in Room 210 Gardner Hall under the sponsorship of the University Art League.

Death Claims Rev. Stratton, Former Rector

By The Associated Press

The Rev. Alfred Stratton Lawrence, 76, rector emeritus of the Episcopal Chapel of the Cross since 1943, died at his home here today after a long illness.

Funeral services will be conducted at the Chapel of the Cross at 4 p.m. Saturday with interment in the Chapel Hill Cemetery. The family requests no flowers, but contributions may be sent to the church building fund.

Mr. Lawrence was rector of the church from 1921 to 1943, was examining chaplain and secretary and registrar for the Episcopal Diocese of North Carolina for many years.

Inside The Infirmary, Or Behind The Measley Curtain

By MARY MOORE MASON

It is late at night. The hospital corridors are ghostly, and nothing is heard but the screams of those patients with laryngitis and the Academy Awards on television.

Here in the heart of the UNC Infirmary is entombed our brave reporter—victim of that fatal but romantic disease—spotticus pokidotticus—better known as German Measles.

Upon first arising the other morning this brave reporter found that she had a slight rash but attributed it to too many Hershey Bars and kumquat sandwiches. Then when people began to look askance and move away from her in classes she began to wonder. Could it be—could it possibly be?

But it was, it was! she was rushed to the infirmary in a black Jaguar, surrounded by four state policemen on English bicycles.

Nurse Moans

"Alas, another case of spotticus pokidotticus," moaned the nurse at the admission desk. "The 12th case of such admitted in the last couple of days."

There in the ward were eight symmetrical white hospital beds, containing five unsymmetrical white hospital patients. Alas—too many to play bridge and not enough for Red Rover. What a measley room this was!

editor and managing editor, as well as acting editor news editor, sports editor and photographers—all of which he has held on The Daily Tar Heel, as being necessary if an editor expects to turn out a top quality newspaper.

A top quality newspaper, Sloan said, should be the editor's first target. When this is accomplished, then thought can be turned to expansion of the staff, advertising and circulation.

struggled in. "I was put in the room with a pregnant woman," she said sadly, "and was asked to leave."

Still Not Enough

Our number was now six. Still not enough for Red Rover! Where were those handsome interns we had heard about? The only males we saw in the halls were unfortunate enough not to have the measles. One of these dashing young six feet, four inches specimens strolled by adorned in white bucks and horn-rimmed glasses, with a brair pipe and his white

"angel Robe" flapping around his knees. No buckle! The infirmary should provide more Ivy League raiment for the patients.

At last—young Dr. Malone came in, only he said his name was Lind-

Candidate Sloan Lists 6 Proposed Programs

Charlie Sloan, candidate for Daily Tar Heel editor, has summarized six major programs he will carry out if he is elected.

Sloan pointed out that every one of his plans can be well on the way to being accomplished by April 11, one school week after the elections.

"Charlie," observed Mike Simpson, Sloan's campaign manager, a retiring fellow, who is more given to working than to talking, has a program."

The program includes:

"1. A MORE ATTRACTIVE PAGE TWO—remember the lively editorial pages when I was associate editor? More pictures, varied makeup and more lively writing invite more readers.

"2. DORMITORY STRINGERS—for recognition of activities in the dorms. A reporter in every dorm means complete campus coverage.

better editorials—and gives the editor more time to spend as head of the entire Tar Heel organization. This plan assures each writer time to gather facts and rewrite awkward phrases, resulting in more interesting and thought provoking editorials.

"4. WORLD NEWS-WITH LOCAL INTEREST—experts in every field are to be found right here in Chapel Hill—their comments put the world at Silent Sam's feet.

"5. DAILY EDITORIAL STAFF MEETINGS—for a better coordinated newspaper and pooling of ideas among the news and business staffs.

"6. STAFF TRAINING—a night staff increased in size and improved in quality, recruited from the present staff for immediate improvement in the paper."

The editor of The Daily Tar Heel has to be editor of the entire paper, not just page two, Sloan explained.

He listed the positions of reporter, night editor, proof reader, associate

Pringle Pipkin Urges Thought Before Action

Pringle Pipkin, Daily Tar Heel Editorial candidate, in a statement Friday stressed the importance of careful consideration of all problems by the editor before launching into controversial issues.

"The editor should think first of the good of the campus and its students before he worries about trying to provide some provocative controversy.

"There are many problems on this campus which need intelligent investigation and consideration, and the editor should confer with student and University officials to learn more about these problems.

"But the editor should never stoop to stirring up dissension for the purpose of assuring that he will be able to stimulate and excite the students every day.

"The editor must remember that what he will write will probably influence the public one way or the other, and consequently, his criticism should be constructive and his ideas should be practical. "The editorials should relate primarily to the campus or events of campus. During the past two years I have covered the news of the campus, and I feel I am fit to express intelligent views on these matters.

Aware Of Problems

"My approach to the campus will be dual, for I am in a fraternity and I also live in a dormitory. I am aware of the problems facing both groups of students, and I will deal sympathetically with both groups.

"I do not intend to avoid controversy. I will face every issue squarely. However, my chief aim is not to create controversy, but rather to urge reform when it is for the good of the students and the University.

"My basic beliefs, I feel, are those held by the majority of the students. While the editor should say, "How are you fixed for rash?" he shouted congenially.

Upon proving that our backs all looked like a Sunday School picnic for red bugs, he asked, "What other complaints do you have besides having to be here?"

Screamed

There were screams of mid-terms that had to be taken, SAE pledge weekend, and Azalea Festival, all of which the good doctor, now joined by several of his colleagues, was oblivious to.

be willing to urge worthwhile reform, he also has a responsibility to student opinion.

Will Take Stands

"I will take definite stands on various issues after I have considered the facts involved. Unless the editor knows the facts, his stand can hardly be wise regardless of his high flown phrases.

"Speaking of the news aspect of the paper, I intend to increase the staff by instituting an organized recruiting and training program next year.

"The campus news must cover a wider range of activities. The newspaper should make the students aware of the many worthwhile, though small, organizations which exist on this campus.

"On the business side of the paper, the circulation can be improved and the paper should work to get more advertising."
