

Professors who teach 8 or 9 o'clock classes this morning may be surprised to find their classrooms strangely vacant. A whole lot of cutting going on. The reason? Most of the students of the University were up sort of late last night. A little matter of a football game that didn't start until 11 o'clock our time.

As this was written way before game time yesterday afternoon, we don't know whether the students sat glued to their radios from the opening kick-off to the final gun, or gava up after the first few plays. We hope it was the former.

While the rains apparently have come to stay in Chapel Hill, at last report the weather in sunny California was just that—sunny.

PREDICTIONS

Here we go again. Last week another wave of upsets knocked our percentage below .500 as we only hit 2 of 5. Here's the way they line up as I see it:

Duke 15, Illinois 12. After two straight defeats, both upsets, the Blue Devils are out to get somebody and it looks like the Illini catch it this week. A close one.

South Carolina 29, Georgia 13. The Gamecocks should snap back from their humiliating 45-8 defeat at the hands of Army last week. Hawkins, Dixon and Co. shouldn't have too much trouble with the Bulldogs, who haven't won a game.

CLEMSON OVER MARYLAND

Clemson 23, Maryland 6. Although Maryland beat State last week, they still haven't convinced us that they are that good. And viewing the Tigers last week more than convinced us that they are loaded.

Florida State 15, Wake Forest 13. Wake has won two straight, but we can't forget last year's miserable showing. Florida State is tough, but it may be close.

PACK OVER CAVALIERS

State 25, Virginia 6. The Cavaliers have gambled their way to a 1-1 record, including an upset over Duke. But the Pack should have by now figured a defense to stop Whitley. State to snap back and take it.

Carolina 26, Southern Cal 19. The Tar Heels, after dropping two straight, are gritting their teeth for this one. If the Heels had won the first two, we wouldn't pick them. But it looks like they'll be tougher than ever this week. Add to this Southern Cal has lost their starting quarterback.

ATHLETICS GET ROLLING

Carolina athletics in general really get rolling for the first time this week-end. The football team, of course, has been playing, but yesterday Bud Carson's frosh gridders swung into action against the Virginia yearlings. With Ray Farris guiding them, the Tar Babies look for, and should get, a banner season. 37 scholarship boys on a strong squad build toward an athletic career at Carolina.

The powerful cross-country team gets underway today as Clemson visits. The return of Dave Scurlock and Wayne Bishop is enough to make most of the coaches in the conference concede to the defending champs, and many other star runners practically cinch the Tar Heels' bid to regain the title.

The soccer team is the latest starter; they don't begin play until next Friday when Lynchburg College visits. Marvin Allen may have his best team in five years down behind Woolen Gym.

Harriers Open Season Against Clemson Here

By BING SOMERS

The 1958 UNC cross country season opens officially today when the Clemson Tigers invade Chapel Hill at two o'clock for a dual meet with the ACC defending champion Tar Heels.

With an overabundance of taped ankles and head colds enveloping the team, Coach Dale Ranson may find it hard to run a full eight man squad.

Scurlock's Status Doubtful

The status of Captain Dave Scurlock is still doubtful. Only recently escaping a siege of sickness, he is far from top shape, but, being Scurlock, could still probably out-leg anyone but Wayne Bishop. The latter's mechanical legs should beat to a rapid and rhythmic run-away pace thus keeping his unbeaten cross country record intact.

Both Cowles Lipfert and Sonny Sweet are recovering from sprained ankles, but may run anyway, and the shape of little Howard Kahn for the 3.7 mil course is also a question mark.

The most unique case of ills belongs to Doug Henderson. He has come up with a pretty nasty collection of boils, but this should not keep him from running.

3 in Top Shape

All this leaves two besides Bishop who are in pretty good shape no turned ankles, no colds, not even a boil. They are stanch and stocky Alex Coffin, who is running better than he ever has, and sophomore Bing Somers.

Despite all their aches and pains, most of the above should rise to the occasion, run or hobble around the course, and finish in quick enough fashion to tame the death-starved Tigers. Clemson has never beaten the Tar Heels and it looks as though they lack the horses with which to do it this year.

Tar Babies Trounce Cavayearlings 29-8.

Charlottesville, Va. — One down and four to go. That's the story for coach Bud Carson's Tar Babies who blasted the University of Virginia freshman here yesterday to the tune of 29-8.

Tar Baby quarterback Ray Farris dominated the ball game as he figured in the scoring of all the Carolina touchdowns. In addition to scoring two touchdowns himself, Farris completed two passes each of which was good for 6 points.

The Tar Babies controlled the ball most of the game and did not allow a score until late in the fourth quarter when the Cavayearlings managed to score on a pass to Ted Denby.

Farris Scores First

Farris led off the Carolina scoring parade by making the first 6 points himself on a running play. Breck Regan kicked the extra points and the Tar Babies took a lead they never relinquished.

Gene Shuford picked up the next touchdown for the visitors by hauling in a Farris pass. Regan ran the extra point this time and the Tar Babies had a 15-0 lead by halftime.

The Carolinaa frosh picked up where they had left off when the third quarter got under way. Bill Ludlam scored the first TD of the second half on a pass from quarterback Farris. Following Ludlam's 6 points, Regan again ran for the extra point and picked himself up 2 more markers for a day's total of 5.

Farris completed the Tar Baby scoring by making the last touchdown himself on another run. For the first time of the afternoon the Tar Babies failed to make the extra point as the Virginia line refused to yield to another running play.

Every member of the Tar Baby squad got into the game which was played under cloudy skies. Although it rained during part of the game, the Carolina offense was not affected by the poor playing conditions as fullback Joe Davies ground out yardage on the running plays and Farris connected on his passes.

Carson Pleased

Coach Carson was greatly pleased by his team's victory since he had expected the final score to be much closer. Prior to the game Carson had stated that he expected the Virginia contest to be one of the two toughest battles of the season for his team.

Tackles Don Amos from Murphy and Ben Gallagher from Charlotte played exceptionally well in this opening game. Amos was moved up to the first string last week to take the place of the injured John Hagarty.

The Tar Babies play their next game on October 17 in Winston-Salem where they will meet the Wake Forest frosh.

Fencing Meeting

Coach Pebley Barrow has announced a meeting of all those interested in joining the fencing team report to room 304 Woolen Gym Tuesday night at 7:30. Barrow said that it is possible that the team will gain varsity recognition from the CAA. The purpose of the meeting will be to elect a captain and outline the program for the coming year.

WAA Murals Start Soon

WAA intramural events are about to get under way down at the Women's Gym, and competition is mounting between the various dormitories and sororities. One of the main group participation functions of these organizations is the intramural sports which lead to Awards Day in the spring. Each year the Women's Athletic Association presents to the team having copiled the greatest number of points during the year an All-Sports Trophy. If a team should cop this trophy for three consecutive years, the trophy is retired.

Tennis intramurals have been delayed by the rainy weather hovering over Chapel Hill, and so the WAA council representatives should contact all the girls in her group and turn those entries in as soon as possible.

Coming up soon is the Annual Co-Rec Sports Carnival, which each year brings droves of students to the main gym. Such events as balloon bursts, worm relays, archery, and many others are favorites. Each dorm or sorority will receive a pairing with either a men's dorm or fraternity and these teams will compete together for the trophies and awards to be given.

Intramural Plans Set

The deadline for the fall golf tournament has been extended to October 9. All students, faculty members, townspen and University employees now have until October to submit their qualifying scores. The scores must be handed in to Ed Kinney at Finley golf shop.

Swimming

The entries for the intramural swimming contest are due on Wednesday October 8. The events will be 25 yd. butterfly; 25 yd. freestyle; 50 yd. backstroke; 50 yd. breaststroke; 50 yd. freestyle; 100 yd. individual medley; 100 medley relay; 200 yd. freestyle relay and diving. Contestants may qualify in event. Those interested in the swimming contest should contact their intramural manager.

Cake Race

The field for the cake race, as yet, is not full. This is a great opportunity for someone to win for himself a delicious cake. The entries must be in before October 8.
