

Police Charge UNC Professor With Peeping

A UNC professor was charged Thursday with "peeping secretly," according to Chapel Hill police.

Police said Peter H. Nash, 37 year old associate professor in the Department of City and Regional Planning, was charged with two counts of peeping secretly. A warrant was sworn on the basis of information and belief.

Other complaints against Nash had been reported previously according to the police department.

The first of the counts allegedly occurred Sept. 19 and the second complaint was reported Oct. 30. Both instances reportedly occurred on Hillsboro St. The complaints were filed by Fred L. Hooper and Eric Elliot and their wives.

Nash is scheduled to appear in Chapel Hill Recorder's Court, Tuesday before Judge W. S. Stewart.

In other police action James F. Fox was charged with a parking violation.

CAMPUS FASHION NOTES

Sweater Girls At Carolina Are Sporting Autumn Colors

By JOAN BROCK

The brilliant hues of the changing autumn leaves now dominating the campus are no less striking than the colorful, elongated, "shift" sweaters being worn by Carolina coeds.

Emphasizing "the school and college look," most of this season's favorites reveal a light-hearted air with just the right touch of sophistication perfected for campus and classrooms, sports wear, leisure wear and the dress-up hour.

As skirts grow shorter, sweaters are bound to become longer, and the transition is being accompanied by an illusion of heaviness in both knit and texture. Displaying youthful lines and authentic lengths, the new creations find expression in immortal Shetland, aristocratic mohair-and-wool, and the cashmere-soft blend of wool and nylon.

Defying all laws of sensory perception, some of these bulky affairs weigh ounces instead of pounds. This is due to the blending of new fabrics, such as fur or mohair with wool. Also accounting for the heavy look and light weight are the large stitches which are so big you can almost see through them.

Another feature of the new creations is their intricate trimmings and original designs. Some shifts are carefully bowed at the neck and waist, while others are neatly ribbed and just as neatly buttoned down the front and across the bottom.

Another favorite is the low-slung shift with a belt and a subtle grain of stitching from the shoulder to the waist. For simplicity, a buttoned-down-the-back sweater framed in ribbing around the hips and the wrists with that "fitted just enough" look is sure to win approval.

The more decorative creations are accented by a combination of ribbing and cables, delicate fringe, cowl collars, or bateau necklines. Many of the season's sweaters are successfully coordinated with pleated and blanket plaid skirts.

Vivid shades of red, orange, and gold are predominant and varying hues of blue and green are being featured in multi-colored creations.

Thus, the highlight of the sweater parade this fall is the dizzying clashes of color on brand new textures and their mingling with kaleidoscope suddenness to throw last year's notions of mixing and matching right out the window!

New Officers Are Elected By Arnold Air

The Jesse J. Moorhead Squadron of Arnold Air Society has elected new officers for the 1958-1959 academic year and has released a list of new pledges to the Squadron.

The special election was held because most of the previously elected officers were appointed to offices within the Areas Headquarters recently established at UNC.

Cadets elected to Squadron offices were: Lewis D. Sanders, executive officer; Michael F. Smith, adjutant recorder; Douglas N. Kelly, comptroller and Robert D. Fulghum, information services officer. Appointed as parliamentarian was Frederick F. Wolfer.

The pledges of the Squadron are currently in their training period. The pledge program is under the direction of Cadet 1st Lt. Bogdan Zlotnicki, squadron operations and training officer.

The cadet pledges include: James A. Caldwell, George L. Craver, William B. Edmond, James H. Frost, Edmond L. Graham, Ronald P. Kelly, Donald Kemper, Charles F. Lano;

John A. Lasley, James F. Little, Roger K. McGuire, Neil C. Mullen, John A. Rhoades, James A. Singleton, Larry A. Stephenson, Leslie S. Sutorius, Jack E. Thompson, Kenneth R. Walker and Robert M. Wilkinson.

Cadets are chosen from the AFR-OTC cadet corps for leadership by members of the society based upon the cadets' showing traits of an Air Force officer candidate.

Prize Offered Top Guesser

The Daily Tar Heel will offer a $5 for the person who guesses the correct make-up of the House of Representatives, Senate, and Governorships by party.

Students, faculty, and townspeople are invited to enter.

Each person will be allowed one entry which must be delivered to The Daily Tar Heel by mid-night Monday. The person coming closest to guessing the right number of Republicans and Democrats in each group will be awarded the prize and in case of a tie, duplicate prizes will be awarded.

The Daily Tar Heel will maintain a bulletin board in Graham Memorial which will keep hour-by-hour results of national and state elections.

No unauthorized person will be allowed in the newspaper office during Tuesday evening in order that votes may be tabulated.

LEGISLATURE

Meet Well Attended

stated the basic qualification for jury duty as interest.

Norman Smith (Ind.) spoke in favor of the bill, pointing out that under random selection jurors would be selected from the body politic and that the defendant might turn down any juror found objectionable by him.

Discussion continued for some time with the main objection seeming to center around the proposed random selection of jurors. Most of this opposition seemed to stem from the University Party, with the Student Party appearing solidly in favor of passing the bill. Debate on this measure will continue at next week's meeting.

Legislature Speaker Ralph Cummings reminded the group several times during the course of the meeting that the body was close to a quorum and that any member might call for a roll call vote at any time in the course of voting.

The meeting was well attended at its beginning, but dwindled as members slipped away after consideration of several bills.

Bills passed by the Student Legislature in Thursday night's meeting were:

(1) A bill to establish a committee to study the fraternity parking problem with possible construction of a parking lot at the site of the old Chapel Hill high school gymnasium;

(2) An enactment establishing a committee to investigate study area problems on campus;

(3) A bill approving the purchase of a TV set for Whitehead dormitory; and

(4) Passage of a bill to appropriate $140 for the inclusion of the Ram and Ewe and the Carolina Handbook in the Yackety Yack.
