Budget Seen As Desire To Enlarge Class Size

By DAVE JONES

"Apparently there seems to be a desire to enlarge the size of the classes" began Prof. Harry Davis, acting chairman of the Department of Dramatic Art, when asked what he felt of the implications of the new advisory budget.

"For a great many courses, such as the ones we teach here, that means that there will be a sort of mechanical mass education instead of individual attention. Both the professor and the student lose, but it is the student who really has to pay the price."

SPACE PROBLEM

In commenting on the Dramatic Art Department specifically, Davis said, "Our main problem here is that we are scattered around so much. It would be a great physical and moral advantage if we were in one building. The University is keeping that in mind and is trying to resolve this problem for us, as a part of a larger space and facility problem. Actually, we are only one aspect of a total problem of space for the whole University."

Dr. H. D. Crawford, acting chairman of the Department of Chemistry declined comment when asked about the budget.

NEED SALARY RAISES

Prof. Samuel B. Knight, of the Department of Chemistry, said, "On Salaries I feel that we're going to have to have more money if we hope to compete nationally for professors in all grades, but especially for full professors."

"We've got to move," Knight continued, "if the anticipated expansion comes upon us. We've got to move especially in the realm of undergraduate teaching, as well as in research. And we've got to have more money for equipment."

PRICES RISE

"Laboratory equipment and apparatus has jumped up by leaps and bounds—instruments we used to get for $500 now cost $2,000—and we never have enough money for books."

Prof. Norman E. Eliason, of the Department of English said, "The amounts provided for as salaries and for the library are totally inadequate. Unless the amounts are greatly increased, the University will suffer. This will become apparent almost immediately, and a year or two hence the prestige and effectiveness of the University will have declined so much that it will be necessary to spend far greater sums to bring them back to where they are now."

Deadline Near For Positions On GMAB

Today is the deadline for applications for the offices of president, vice-president, and secretary of GMAB.

Interviews will be held next week by a committee composed of Bob Cantor, the acting president; Howard Henry, director of Graham Memorial; and Don Furtado, president of the student body.

The officers will be approved by the GM Board of Directors and will work with the old officers for about two months in an orientation and planning program.

New committee chairmen will be appointed after the officers have been elected. Any student is eligible for these offices.

Deadline Is Extended

The deadline for applications for the orientation committee has been extended until Feb. 26, David Parker, chairman, announced Thursday.

Parker urged all interested persons to come to the student government office in Graham Memorial for interviews. The interviews will last Monday through Thursday; students will "sign up" for these interviews on a first come, first served basis.

Applicants for secretary and treasurer are particularly desired, he said.

All the interviews will be conducted by the Bi-Partisan Selections Board and will be held in the Woodhouse Conference Room. Appointments will be made on Feb. 27.

New 'Y' Head Outlines Vast Policy Changes

By BEN TAYLOR

Recently elected YMCA President Randy Shelton yesterday outlined a vast program of Y policy changes slated to "realign the programs of the Y into a more effective calendar."

Shelton, who took over the reins of the Y upon the resignation of Bill Sugg, expressed doubt that "the Y is communicating as it should to the entire student body."

"The Y leadership and advisory boards are analyzing and attempting to realign their policies to meet the needs of every student regardless of race or religion," he said.

The Winston-Salem senior commented that his work for the remainder of the year will center around carrying out the program plans of Sugg, publicizing the "Y" cabinets and future changes of policy, and drawing more students into the program.

Speaking about the YM-YWCA on an international level, Shelton stated the big question the Y must deal with today is: "Does the word 'Christian' in YMCA hinder or help its position in a student community as becoming international in nature?"

Shelton, 25, an Air Force veteran, was recently accepted by the American Friends Committee to attend work camp in Europe. Following his summer tour, he plans to enter UNC Law School.

Legislature Approves Athletic Council

By DEE DANIELS

The Student Legislature sanctioned the establishment of a student Carolina Athletic Council last night.

According to Jim Crownover (SP), originator of the bill proposing such action, its basic purposes are to coordinate student desires concerning athletics, to have an organization connected with athletics close to the Legislature and to provide a coordinating agency for the budget requests of all organizations concerned with athletics.

The article dealing with budgetary matters was deleted in an amendment by Charlie Gray (UP). The bill was approved as amended.

Further business included the appropriation of $310 to the Forensic Council for carrying out its intercollegiate debating program. The bill was introduced last session by Norman B. Smith (SP) on behalf of John Brooks, chairman and treasurer of the Council.

The original request was for $600. The amount was decreased to $310 by the Finance Committee. The solons sanctioned a bill, introduced by Gordon Street (UP), advocating the establishment of a bad check committee.

The committee, in no way a collection agency, would notify UNC students of their bad checks. Working through the Merchants Association, Street called the action a step forward in relations between the Association and the student body.

He further explained it would insure the student privilege of cashing checks with no questions asked.

Street called the committee "a beginning in the education of the student of the Merchants Association and the ideals of what good credit rating means."

Dave Jones' (SP) bill providing for the election of head cheerleader was passed.

Women's Fees Illegal Says Student Council

The $2 social fee and the $1 activities fee collected in women's dorms is unconstitutional, according to a decision of the Student Council last night. This fee has been levied by the Women's Residence Council.

The decision of the Student Council is not retroactive, according to Jim Long, chairman of the Council, but will go into effect at the end of the present semester. The fees which have been already collected this semester, need not be returned.

The case was brought before the Student Legislature by Mary Alice Rowlette and Jeannette Hornsby. While Miss Rowlette had paid her $3 social fee for the semester, Miss Hornsby had not.

The Student Council made no ruling as to whether or not the House Council of Miss Hornsby's dorm had the power to force payment of her fee.

Jim Long said that she would have to bring that question up before the Council as a separate case. Miss Hornsby was not available for comment as to whether or not she intended to pay the $3 or take her case before Student Council.

In giving the decision the Council stated that it is nowhere implied in the Student Constitution that a student organization has the power to levy fees, and that only the Student Legislature can appropriate funds.

The Council suggested that a legal means of collecting fees would be for the Residence Council to request the Student Legislature to request a referendum of the women students.

Student Has Minor Injuries After Wreck

Roger L. Earnhardt, UNC student from Monroe, N. C., received multiple lacerations and contusions late yesterday afternoon when the car he was driving went out of control on the Pittsboro Rd. near Merritt's Service Station.

According to Robert F. Neal, student and employee of The Chapel Hill Weekly, who arrived an estimated three minutes after the accident occurred, Earnhardt was traveling south when the car left the road and traveled approximately 65 yards during which the car jumped a ditch and snapped a telephone pole guy wire. The car came to a stop pointed north and lying on its side against an embankment.

Earnhardt was taken to the UNC student infirmary where Dr. T. P. Harris reported him suffering from multiple lacerations and bruises. Harris said he did not appear seriously injured.

State Highway Patrolman Tom Winborne, investigating officer, stated that from the estimated 200 feet between where the car left the road and where it finally stopped, he would conclude that Earnhardt was traveling faster than the 35 m.p.h. speed limit for that area. Winborne in continuing investigation of the accident.

Poth Neal and Winborne estimated the car, 1958 model Thunderbird, as a total loss.

Neal said Earnhardt was cuts about the head and face. He was alone at the time of the accident. Passing motorists removed Earnhardt from the car.

Daniels Named Head Of Women's Handbook

Dee Daniels will edit the Carolina Women's Handbook this spring for distribution to new co-eds during the summer.

Miss Daniels was selected this week as editor by the Women's Residence Council from four applications for the position.

The theme she will use for the Handbook is "Freedom and Responsibility."

"Through the Women's Handbook this year, by using a theme of 'Freedom and Responsibility,' I hope to convey to the incoming coeds the concept that as an individual she will achieve a freedom for the growth of her own ideas and philosophies and for which she alone is responsible," Miss Daniels said.

The new Handbook editor has asked that coeds interested in helping with the publication contact her at 8-9142 or at The Daily Tar Heel office.

A transfer from Stephens College in Missouri, Miss Daniels is majoring in journalism at UNC.

Cyprus Is Free; Conference Votes Island Freedom

LONDON—(AP)—Peace came to Cyprus yesterday after four years of violence. A five-party conference reached agreement on independence for the island after 31 years under the British flag.

A historic document establishing the Mediterranean island as a republic was initiated tonight in a London hospital room by the Prime Ministers of Britain, Greece and Turkey.

Prime Minister MacMillan and Greek Premier Constantine Karamanlis carried the official document to the bedside of Turkish Premier Adnan Menderes, recovering from injuries suffered in a plane crash outside London Tuesday.

CONFERENCE MARRED

The agreement came in the third and final session of a conference dogged by rumors of discord and snarled by the Menderes plane crash.

Archbishop Makarios, 45-year-old exiled leader of the Greek Cypriots, ended up by signing the agreement after dropping earlier objections to some of its clauses.

With Turkish Cypriot leader, Dr. Gazil Kutchuk—who also signed—Makarios accepted Britain's proposals that military bases on Cyprus remain under British control.

SEVERAL SIGN

The agreement—actually a complex series of documents—also was signed by Greek Foreign Minister Evangelos Averoff, Turkish Foreign Minister Fatin Zorlu and British Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd.

The three prime ministers initiated a cover document, making it official.

"I'm very happy with the accord," said Makarios in his Dorchester hotel suite.

Asked if he would be returning to Cyprus, the bearded archbishop smiled and replied: "Yes, in a few days." He is expected to be the first president of Cyprus.

Makarios was sent into exile by the British in 1956. The British charged he supported the Greek Cypriot underground, EOKA, which backed its demands for union with Greece with bombs and bullets.

AGREEMENT ENDS RIFT

The agreement at last heals the serious rift between NATO partners Greece and Turkey that had threatened the Atlantic Alliance on its vital southern flank. Both once demanded possession of the strategic island.

The agreement means that 400,000 Greek speaking Cypriots and 100,000 Turkish Cypriots will be running their own affairs, perhaps within a year when independence is proclaimed.

A bill must be passed in the British Parliament before surrender of British sovereignty over most of Cyprus becomes a reality. The measure may be submitted by MacMillan's government within the next six months.

DETAILS VAGUE

Many details of the Cyprus constitution still have to be worked out. But in essence, it will follow the broad outlines of the plan worked out by Karamanlis and Menderes in Zurich last week. This calls for a Greek Cypriot President of Cyprus and a Turkish Cypriot vice president. Each will have veto powers.

There will be a national assembly, 70 per cent Greek Cypriot and 30 percent Turkish Cypriot. This proportion also would be applied in communal assemblies handling local affairs.

There is a chance that Cypriots may decide to become members of the British Commonwealth.

A major advantage would be to have the continued commercial protection of the sterling area. A powerful segment of the Cyprus business community is believed to favor commonwealth status.

CAN STAY IN COMMONWEALTH

MacMillan said tonight in the House of Commons that "if, in due course, the government of Cyprus declares its desire to remain associated with the Commonwealth, Britain, in consultation with other members of the Commonwealth, will consider sympathetically now that desire can most properly be satisfied."

The full details of the agreement will be announced in London, Ankara, Athens and Nicosia next Monday.

The participants in the London conference, held in the cream and gold music room of Lancaster House, all seemed happy with the results.

Greek Foreign Minister Averoff tipped his hat as he left Lancaster and said loudly: "It's a 100 per cent agreement."

Averoff's Turkish counterpart, Zorlu, rushed to the London clinic to talk with Menderes. He smiled at the clinic entrance and told correspondents: "I'm very, very happy."
