Committee Tables Grigg Resolution On Policy

By STAN BLACK

The David Grigg resolution concerning the policy toward subsidiary organizations of Student Legislature, particularly the IDC and the IFC, was tabled by the Ways and Means Committee after its controversial reception last week.

The purpose of the resolution was to have the Legislature limit its own power in passing legislation dealing with dormitory and fraternity policy. This would have left the IDC and IFC free to legislate without the close supervision of the Student Legislature, as long as they continued "to follow the high purposes for which they were created and best serve the interests of those they represent."

Norman B. Smith, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, gave these reasons for tabling the resolution: its possible unconstitutionality and the recognition of a present statute making it the recommended duty of the introducer of a bill to consult with the persons or organizations affected by the proposed legislation. Rep. Grigg concurred in allowing his resolution to be tabled.

Bills introduced in the Legislature's meeting Thursday night concerned revisions in the Election Law and the establishment of a picnic and recreational area in Victory Village.

Dave Jones (SP) introduced a bill providing that residents of Teague Dorm, who are mainly medical and pharmaceutical students, vote in Parker Dorm. A bill introduced by Charlie Gray (UP) provided that two polling places be set up in both Town Men's I and Town Men's III. This would facilitate voting by students living in areas distant from the present single polling place in each district, he said:

Troy Blanton and Bill Miller co-authored the bill on a Victory Village recreational area. The bill calls for the appointment of a committee of three to study the problem and report back to the Legislature its findings as to the necessity and feasibility of such a project.

Women's Dean Visits Grads

Katherine Kennedy Carmichael, dean of women, will visit women's dormitories and sorority houses to speak with graduating seniors Monday, Feb. 23, through Wednesday, March 4.

The purpose of her 11 p.m. visits is to answer any questions about the University, records and getting jobs that seniors may have.

Her schedule for the dorms is as follows: Carr, Feb. 23; Alderman, Feb. 24; Smith, Feb. 25; McIver, Feb. 26; Spencer, March 2; Whitehead, March 3; and School of Nursing, March 4.

TOP RATING GETS TEST

Maryland Terps Play Host To Heels Tonight

By RUSTY HAMMOND

Carolina's Tar Heels, the number one team in the nation, put their top ranking on the line tonight when they journey to Maryland to battle the defending Atlantic Coast Conference champion Terrapins at 8 o'clock.

The powerful Tar Heels will be gunning for their 12 straight victory, and a win tonight can clinch at least a tie for the regular season ACC championship. Carolina's conference record is 11-0 with three games remaining.

Coach Bud Millikan's crew will need a victory over the Heels to stay in the league's first division. The Terps are currently in fourth place with a 5-7 record; their overall mark is 7-12.

Heels Won First Game
Carolina has defeated Maryland once this season, beating the Terps 64-57 in Chapel Hill. York Larese developed hot hands in that one and banged in 32 points for the winners.

Maryland considered a definite conference threat before the season began, has disappointed us in its so-so play. In their last outing, the Terrapins bowed to lowly Virginia 62-50.

Carolina's last game saw them whip sixth-rated North Carolina State for the second time this season, this time by 74-67.

The Terps' finest hour came early in the season in a losing cause when they pushed then first-ranked Kentucky to the limit before bowing 56-54.

Last season Maryland lured the Tar Heels into their spacious coliseum and handed them their first conference loss before a boozing sell-out crowd of 13,000. Carolina later reversed the decision in Chapel Hill.

The Tar Heels, who go into the contest with a 17-1 overall record, continue to place all five starters in a double figure scoring average. Sop guard York Larese leads the pack with 16.8, followed by Lee Shaffer (13.9), Doug Moe (13.2), Harvey Salz (11.4) and Dick Kephley (10.6).

The big guns for Maryland will be Charlie McNeil, Al Bunge and Jim Halleck. Gene Danko and Bill Murphy will probably fill out the Terrapin line-up.

Coach Frank McGuire said of the game, "It's time for Maryland to have a big game, and this being number one can be a dangerous thing. Maryland has some fine ball players, fellows like Bunge, McNeil and Halleck."

Young Is Editorship Candidate Trustees To Meet On Budget

Says He Will Seek Both Parties' Support

Davis Young, sophomore class president and former editor of the UNC Summer School Weekly, yesterday became the first candidate to announce for the editorship of The Daily Tar Heel in the spring elections.

Young has worked on The Daily Tar Heel as a reporter, columnist and feature editor.

In addition to his class presidency and college newspaper activities, Young has worked with the Carolina Symposium, Student Legislature, Student Party, Orientation, Honor Council Jury, Current Affairs Committee, State Student Legislature and the Consolidated University Council. He is a member of the Chi Phi social fraternity.

SEEKS TWO PARTY SUPPORT

Young announced he will seek the support of both the Student Party and the University Party. He said that he will not, however, align himself with either party as editor. Young issued the following statement on his candidacy: "The issues facing The Daily Tar Heel can be conveniently divided into three categories: (1) The Daily Tar Heel itself; (2) the campus; (3) miscellaneous.

DAVIS YOUNG

"Naturally, I favor the continued independence and student control of The Daily Tar Heel. However, the price of student freedom is student responsibility.

EDITORIAL IRRESPONSIBILITY

"A good example of editorial irresponsibility was the recent series on sex at UNC by Cort Edwards. Sex is a delicate subject at any time; there is always a thin line between comment which is in good taste and comment which is vulgar and/or childishly obscene. Had it been my decision, this particular series would have found its way into the waste basket.

"As editor, my first act will be to restore Peanuts, Pogo, and Li'l Abner to the editorial page, from which space nothing short of World War III will remove them.

"All other campus issues are now secondary in importance to the overriding need for more money. We need more money for the serfs who toil on our faculty; we need more money for the library which is now inadequate and daily growing more so; we need more money for a decent gymnasium to house the national champs; we need more money for a student union. In short, the University must have more money. As editor, I can assure you that the paper will emphasize this problem and give loyal support to President Friday and Chancellor Aycock in this crucial area.

GIVES POLITICAL STAND

"My general political stance is that of a Lyndon Johnson Democrat. I agree with the political leadership of North Carolina that Supreme Court decisions are the law of the land. On foreign policy problems I am with Senator Fullbright of Arkansas who seems to think that talking with the Russians is better than fighting them.

"I am not a crusader; I do not own a soap box. It has been my experience that crusaders and soap boxers never achieve their objectives. The dogmatic fanaticism of the crusader is not to be confused with a genuine liberalism which gets results.

I will amplify this basic platform in subsequent statements and speeches in the course of the campaign."

Investigation Started Of Coed Study Rooms

An investigation to determine facilities needed for study rooms of women's dormitories has been launched by J. S. Bennett, director of operations.

The probe is in answer to a letter from student body President Don Furtado, in which were reported the findings of a committee formed to determine the need of such facilities and to suggest solutions to the study problems existing.

"My department will do all we can to fill these needs," said Bennett, "but the biggest problem is money. There's so much to be done by way of improvement that my department must make sure that the items suggested in Mr. Furtado's letter are of more importance than improved necessary. I can't say anything further until we have time to look over the dorms."

According to Furtado's letter, "It was pointed out (by the committee on improvements) that the physical facilities of the study rooms in the women's dormitories were often not conducive to the maintenance of the atmosphere of study."

Listed in Furtado's letter were the following suggestions for improvement, as compiled by Charlene Bass, member of the Women's Residence Council:

- Whitehead Dorm, at least three floor lamps, comfortable chairs for the study room;
- Spencer, at least two card tables for the study room;
- Alderman, lamps for every desk in the social room, better heating in the study room, some place to type after hours;
- McIver, lamps for tables in the social room, new file cabinet, comfortable chairs for the study room;
- Carr, a study room, as no facilities of any nature are available at present; and
- Smith and Nurses Dorms, nothing needed.

Irregularities Found, But No Dishonesty

By NEIL MURPHY

The Institute of Government's records were found to contain "irregularities" by the State Audit Board yesterday. The board also reported there was no evidence of dishonesty.

W. D. Carmichael Jr., vice president and finance officer of the University, said the criticism in the audit report "was aimed at procedures" and "there was no shortage of funds."

The report said, "Due to the lack of internal control, the inadequate records and receipts, and the loose manner of handling cash, the total amount of receipts could not be accurately determined. Since the records were inadequate, it was not possible to make a final determination of the unrecorded receipts."

"Therefore," the report said, "we have relied on the memorandums of disbursements as being a more accurate basis for establishing the amount of unrecorded receipts."

A member of the Institute of Government staff said, "It is all caused by state red tape. At times money was simply taken in and spent without recording or depositing it in the usual way."

Budget Skips Areas Vital To Research Triangle

By DAVE JONES

The Research Triangle, the downgrading of public servants, public school finance and a Student Union were among the topics touched upon by members of the faculty of the Economics Department when asked about the 1959-61 Budget.

"The governor seems to be inconsistent in placing so much emphasis on the Research Triangle and then neglecting two of the three organizations on which it is most dependent, UNC and State," said Prof. Paul N. Guthrie, chairman of the Department of Economics.

"One thing that seems to be forgotten is that the Legislature, even when it does well, makes appropriations to match existing needs—not realizing that by the time that the biennium ends, we may have 1,000 more students who will have needs to be taken care of," Guthrie said.

ATTRACTING PROFS PROBLEM

"One of the greatest concerns I have is the problem of holding full professors and of attracting new full professors. If the sort of recommendation as those made is adopted, it would place us in an almost impossible position. We are competing not only with other colleges but with business and with government. This is especially true in economics and business administration.

"If the University is going to compete for professors, our competition will not only be local or regional—and this is where a lot of people delude themselves—but will be national. We must compete with Yale, Harvard, California and universities all over the country," Guthrie concluded.

Prof. Lowell D. Ashby said, "In general it's increasingly difficult for the University to maintain itself at bargain prices." He said that it was impossible to "maintain a good department in absence of a good salary for the staff, even with a good dean and research facilities."

UNIVERSITIES RATED LOW

"The fact is that universities are generally rated low and that other government services are also low. The public takes little pride in its public servants." In pursuing this line of reasoning Ashby recommended "The Affluent Society" by John Kenneth Galbraith as a good primer.

UNC Leaders Present Views Before Board

Five Consolidated University of North Carolina leaders will present their viewpoint on the present budget as recommended by the Advisory Budget Commission at a meeting of the full Board of Trustees to be held Monday, at 11 a.m. at the Capitol in Raleigh.

President William Friday, Chancellors William Aycock, Gordon Blackwell, and Carey Bostian of Carolina, State, and Woman's College will give their commentary as a kickoff in a campaign to get funds for the three Universities.

At a Chancellor's Cabinet meeting held yesterday, Aycock announced that the University would present its recommendations for the capital improvements budget to the Board of Higher Education, March 6.

MEETING TO FIX POLICY

The meeting will be held to fix the Board's policy towards the capital improvements of the various institutions in light of the Advisory Budget Commission's recommendations.

The Consolidated University of North Carolina officials will also meet with the joint appropriation committee March 18, where approximately three hours is reserved for them.

The Chancellor gave the group a breakdown on the budget figure which was prepared during the past several days, when many meetings have been held to study the budget.

APPEAL TO STUDENTS

Both Aycock and Dean of Student Affairs Fred Weaver appealed to the students to help out with the budget and to stay with the University team in fighting for an adequate budget.

The Chancellor made it clear that no person was being told to keep silent and that the right to express opinion was something that he had no wish to tamper with, however, he added that local commentary, notably by The Daily Tar Heel, was in his opinion making progress more difficult rather than easier.

For all offices and Legislature seats, the nominees will speak for themselves. Nominees for student body offices and editor of The Daily Tar Heel will be allowed two speakers. All other nominees will be allowed one speaker.

At Monday night's UP meeting candidates for the following positions will be selected: editor of The Daily Tar Heel, editor of the Yackety Yack, senior class officers (president, vice president, secretary, treasurer and social chairman), chairman of Women's Residence Council, president of the Carolina Athletic Association, president of the Women's Athletic Association and head cheerleader.

Candidates for these Legislature seats will also be elected Monday: one one-year seat and one six-month seat in Dorm Men's I, two one-year seats in Dorm Men's IV, one one-year seat in Dorm Men's V, one one-year seat in Dorm Women's I, one one-year seat and one six-month seat in Town Men's I and three one-year seats and one six-month seat in Town Men's III.

Tuesday night the following offices will be up for nomination: student body president, vice presi-
