GOOD NEWS — James Poteat as M. Jourdain is shouting the good news about available seats for the Wednesday, Thursday and Sunday performances of Moliere's "The Would-Be Gentleman." Listening intently is Lorr Schuller as Nicole. The rather stunned gentleman on the right is Robert Ketter as Do-rante. The Carolina Playmaker production is a modern version of the French classic translated by Russell Graves a visiting professor of dramatic art. The play opens Wednesday evening at 8:30 in The Playmakers Theater. Tickets are on sale at 214 Abernethy Hall and Ledbetter-Pickard. All seats are reserved at $1.50. Tickets for the Friday and Saturday performances are sold out.

Friday Asks For Complete Budget

UP Endorses Young For DTH Editorship

By DEE DANIELS

Davis Young was endorsed by acclamation as a candidate for the editorship of The Daily Tar Heel last night by the University Party under its new system of voting by five-member delegations.

Elected as the UP candidate for senior class president was Wade Smith, who defeated Hugh Patterson for the nomination.

Selected by acclamation as candidate for president of the Carolina Athletic Association was Angus Duff.

Running for the one year Student Legislature seat in Dorm Men's I will be David Rubenstein, while Bill Craig will compete for the six months seat. Both were elected by acclamation.

UP candidate by acclamation for one of the two 1 year seats in Dorm Men's IV is Bill Bates. The vacancy for the other will be filled tomorrow night.

Carl Ragsdale, selected also by acclamation, is the candidate for the one year seat in Dorm Men's V.

Dean Tells Of Faults In Budget

By DAVE JONES

"In 1952 we had 795 women students, today we have 1,504. But we have the same staff and relatively the same budget today that we had in 1952," said Miss Katherine Karmichael, dean of women, when asked how the budget affected her office and its effectiveness.

"This means that we have had to resort to petty economies to stay in business. I have had to strengthen the organization of the work here even at the risk of making services too impersonal.

"I also feel that I have lost something by having to give up teaching as well as speechmaking and other public relations efforts like club work, thereby diminishing my participation in service within the University and leadership in women's groups throughout the state," said Miss Karmichael.

Prof. F. Burton Jones, chairman of the Department of Mathematics, declined to comment, saying that he had not had time to study the individual items and their implications.

The oldest professor in the University, John W. Lasley Jr., of the Department of Mathematics, a member of the staff since 1906, said, "The Library is the main concern. If we keep it going the rest of the University will make it."

He also said that he felt a good staff is the next most important consideration. "I can remember back about 1910 when we threw our hats in the air in jubilation when the state legislature gave us $75,000."

Richard Baker, a graduate student doing political science research on a Southern Fellowship, said, "One of the big problems is the Library — they do insist we do research — it costs money to maintain a collection, and a lot more to rebuild it."

"In order to live in a degree of decency in teaching, you have to take vows of chastity and poverty (See BUDGET, page 3)

UNC Trustees Okay Consolidated Stand

UNC Campus Budget Meet Slated At 4

The University's budget, drastically cut by the state's Advisory Budget Commission, will be discussed at a meeting of students, administrative personnel and faculty today at 4 p.m. in Carroll Hall.

Chancellor William B. Aycock called this meeting in an effort to mobilize University forces for restoration of budgetary items cut by the commission.

All interested persons have been urged to attend.

President William Friday of the Consolidated University of North Carolina came out for complete restoration of the budgetary cuts by the Advisory Budget Commission in a prepared address before the Board of Trustees yesterday.

The Board followed quickly with a resolution placing its faith in the Consolidated University Administration and assuring the administration of its help in securing the necessary restoration.

The motion was introduced by H. L. Riddle of Morganton.

John Umstead, representative from Orange County capped the drive by urging all members of the Board to contact the legislator in their area in order to mobilize support for the budget.

Friday pointed out that to lower the standards of excellence and quality now would be a costly decision for the state to make.

Chancellor William B. Aycock pointed up the need for faculty funds, showing that the Advisory Budget Commission had actually cut funds from the "A" Budget in this crucial area. The "A" budget was for continuation of present operating level of quality with increases only for enrollment and cost of living.

Aycock pointed out that no funds were given for extra positions in the "B" budget which is for faculty improvement.

The Chancellor dispelled the notion that the advisory Budget Commission wrote into its report calling for the student-faculty ratio to increase. The Chancellor pointed out that the teacher does not live the leisurely life that many people suppose him to live.

He added that the University has an extremely high student-faculty ratio in comparison to other colleges in the United States and showed a study to prove his contention.

He concluded by saying that the University needs more faculty members if it is going to grow greater as it grows larger.

Vice-president and finance officer William Carmichael showed that the University ranked as one of the lowest institutions in faculty pay according to the standings of state supported institutions in the American Association of Colleges and Universities. The University rated anywhere from eleventh to fifteenth among fifteen state supported institutions at the various levels of faculty pay.

In other action the Board of Trustees approved the Visiting Committee report calling for larger library appropriations, higher salaries, and a new student union.

UNC Renews Interest In International Studies

By NORMAN B. SMITH

The development of a post-graduate curriculum in international relations and the reorganization of membership in the Southern Council on International Relations are highlighting a regenerated interest in international studies and understanding at the University.

"We are interested especially in international trade and the exchange of persons as a medium for international peace," said Dr. Keener C. Frazier, professor of political science, who has been active in planning and developmental stages of international studies programs here.

In the near future a master of arts degree in international studies will be offered by the University. The program will probably be of an interdepartmental nature including instruction in economics, history and political science.

Other requirement for the master's degree will include (1) a larger course requirement in the minor, (2) four "supplementary" courses, one each from the departments of Economics, Sociology and Anthropology, and Geology and Geography and (3) a conversational competence in a modern foreign language.

Utilizing present facilities of the University, a certification in regional studies will be offered along with the degree. Instruction in societies, cultures, economics and institutions of Latin America and Western Europe would be available for regional studies certification.

Frazier, who is a director of the Southern Council on International Relations, is seeking new membership for that organization in Chapel Hill. One of the chief aims of the Council, Frazier said, "is to educate the people of the South in political, cultural and economic aspects of international trade."

Activities of the Council include programming institutes for the study of international relations, distribution of literature, establishment of community study centers, student and teacher exchange programs, publishing a periodical, and promotion of international trade. The membership dues are $1 per year. Subdivisions of the Council are sections for each of the Southern states.

Already in operation at the University is an undergraduate program in international relations. A bachelor of arts degree in international studies was first offered in 1957. About 20 students are now enrolled, and two gained their degrees last summer.

Position Still Open For Coed Coordinator

Juniors coeds who want to coordinate women's orientation in the fall still have a chance to apply for that position.

Bryte Abernethy of the Women's Residence Council said Saturday that the deadline for applications has been extended through 4 p.m. Tuesday. By Saturday only six girls had applied.

Applicants may apply for women's orientation coordinator in the dean of Women's office.

Interviews with candidates for coordinator will be held Wednesday by the Women's Residence Council and Orientation Chairman David Parker. Three girls will be chosen from these interviews to go before the Bi-Partisan Selections Board for the final selection.

Interviews Continue For Orientation Com.

Interviews for the Orientation Committee are being held through Thursday from 2 to 4 p.m. in the Woodhouse Conference Room in Graham Memorial.

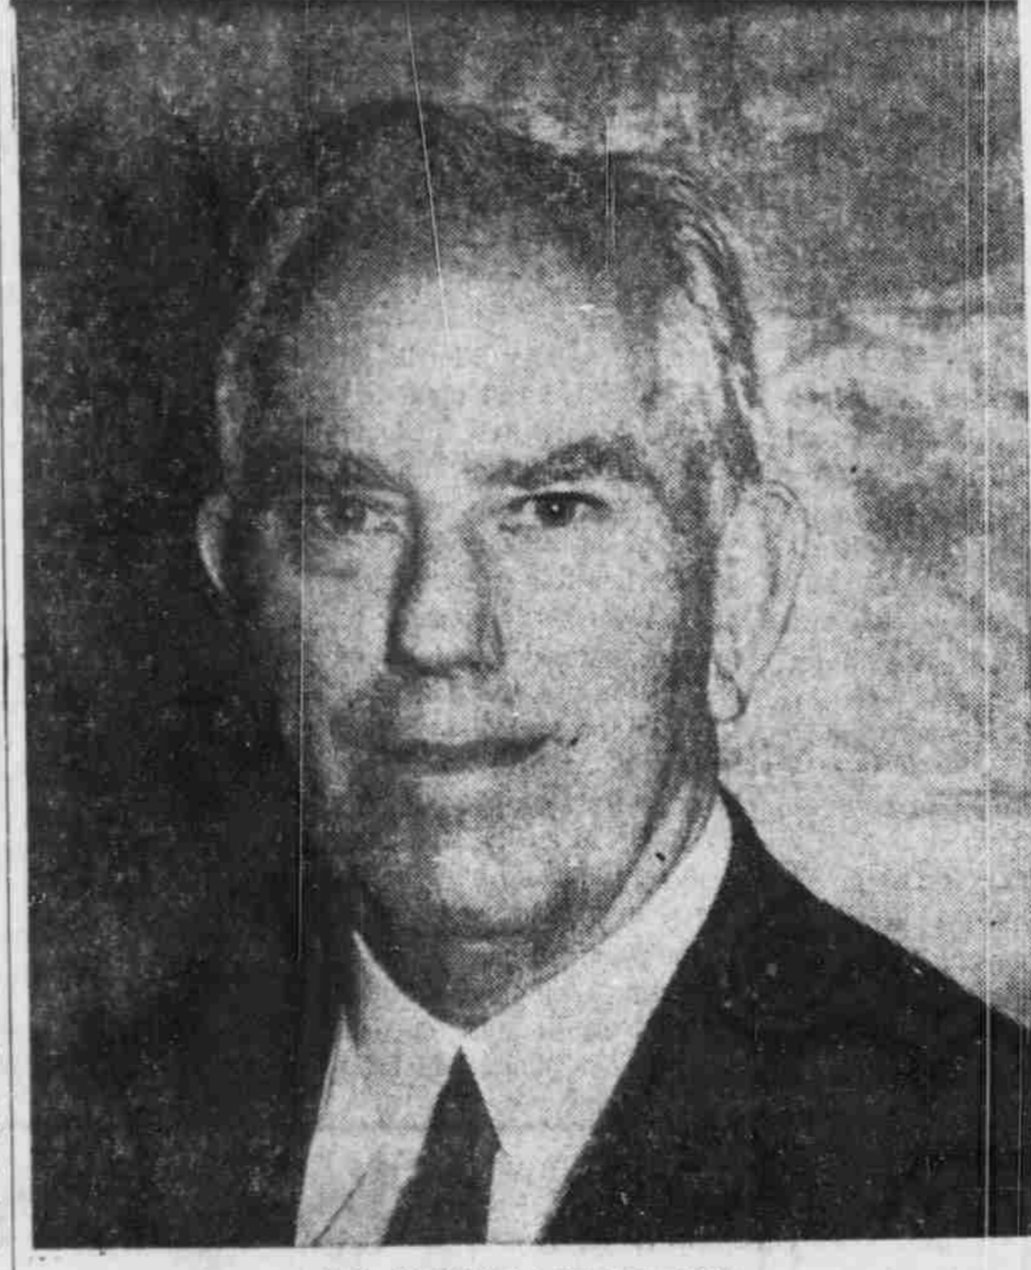

These interviews are being conducted by the Bi-Partisan Selections Board on a first-come, first-served basis.

Nominations Continue Tonight In UP Meet

University Party nominations continue tonight with the selection of candidates for the top student government positions and 18 Legislative seats.

Tonight's UP meeting will begin at 7 o'clock in Carroll Hall.

UP members will elect candidates for president, vice president, secretary and treasurer of the student body and for these Legislative seats: one one-year seat in Dorm Men's II, two one-year seats and one six-month seat in Dorm Men's III, two one-year seats in Dorm Men's VI, one one-year seat in Dorm Women's II, two one-year seats in Town Men's II, six one-year seats and one six-month seat in Town Men's IV and two one-year seats in Town Women's.

DR. ROBERT LEE HUMBER

State Senator Humber Speaks To Phi Tonight

State Senator Dr. Robert Lee Humber will deliver the key address at the inauguration ceremony for new officers of the Philanthropic Society tonight in Phi Hall, fourth floor New East at 8 o'clock. He will speak on "Peace in our Time."

Dr. Humber, who was elected to the state senate last fall, received an honorary doctor of laws degree from UNC in June.

He is founder of the North Carolina Art Society.

New officers to be installed are John Brooks, president; David Matthews, president pro tem; Stan Black, parliamentarian; Glen Johnson, critic and representative to the Forensic Council; Hobart Steele, sergeant-at-arms; Bill Jack-

Grayson Picked For SP Class Nomination

By STAN BLACK

George Grayson was nominated for the senior class presidency by the Student Party in its meeting last night. Picked to run with him as vice presidential nominee was David Evans.

Nominees for the offices of treasurer and social chairman of the class will be filled by the SP Advisory Board, as there were no candidates nominated last night.

In commenting on the office prior to his nomination, Grayson outlined the duties of the office and his intentions for making something of the office elected.

Dewey Sheffield, chairman of the Advisory Board, announced the formation of a new committee to organize the student body on a residential area basis. There will be four vice chairmen, one each for men's dorms, women's dorms, fraternities, and sororities, Sheffield said, "The UP is organizing, and we too must reorganize."

Endorsed as the party's choice for head cheerleader was Dick Rhyme, a junior and presently a member of the cheerleading squad.

Catharine Bolton was selected to run for the party for the presidency of the Women's Athletic Association. As no one was nominated for Legislature in Town Women's, candidates for that district's two year seats will be chosen by the Advisory Board.

In Dorm Women's I Linda Biser defeated Mary Ann Weaver for the nomination to the one-year seat open.

After a lengthy discussion of a field of four candidates in Dorm Men's II Bill Norton was nominated to run for the single year seat open in that district.

Dan Brown and Roy Goodman, both incumbents, were nominated to run for year seats in Dorm Men's III. Also nominated was Gary Arzt, who will run for a six-months seat.

A vacancy in the district caused by the resignation of Ray Bagwell from the Legislature was filled by the appointment of Arzt. The nomination for a second six-months seat will be made by the Advisory Board.

Hobart Steele announced his withdrawal from the legislative race in Town Men's III in favor of Bob Ney. His withdrawal and the nomination of Ney for the six-months seat open were accepted by the party.

Chairman John Brooks announced that next week's meeting will also be devoted to nominations for various offices open in the spring elections.
