UP Debates Platform Items; To Present Planks Tuesday

Items to be included in the University Party's platform for the spring elections were discussed at the Party's meeting Tuesday night.

The finished platform was not drawn up last night but, according to UP secretary Cynthia Grant, it will be released today for publication in Thursday's Daily Tar Heel.

Among the items discussed at last night's meeting were: a student union; a more flexible policy of regulations in women's dormitories; the redistricting of Student Legislature.

Men's dorms and the Men's Interdormitory Council; the judicial system on campus; the National Student Association; fraternities and sororities; date tickets for athletic events; and the editor of the Daily Tar Heel.

Ed Levy, campus coordinator of the National Student Association, spoke at the meeting. Levy spoke concerning the University Party's platform plank dealing with NSA.

Levy answered several questions from the floor concerning Carolina's delegation to the National Student Association Congress.

During the discussion of the editorship of the Daily Tar Heel members of the party advocated an investigation of the removal of the election of the editor from "partisan politics."

Also discussed was the possibility of installing more telephones in all women's dormitories. Late permissions and telephone calls after 11 p.m. were brought out in the course of the debate.

Presbyterians Check Reactions To Society

The lives of certain well known men and their reaction to society will be analyzed in a series of three programs being sponsored by the Campus Life Committee of the Presbyterian Church.

The movie, "Citizen Kane," will be used during the first program Sunday at 8 p.m. in Carroll Hall. This movie, portrays the life of newspaper publisher William Randolph Hearst. Stars in the picture are Orson Wells, Joseph Cotten and Ruth Warwick.

Navy's Surprising Midshipmen Blast Carolina's Tar Heels By 76-63; Late Rally Fails

Middies' Early Lead Is Never In Danger

Navy's surprising Midshipmen threw everything but the kitchen sink in New York last night as they derailed the Carolina's NCAA hopeful Tar Heels 76-63 to advance to the Eastern Regionals.

The Middies jumped to an early lead and after the count was tied at 2-2 they were never headed.

APO Sets May 3 As Parent's Day

May 3 has been set by Alpha Phi Omega as "Parent's Day" at Carolina. The annual event sponsored by UNC's service fraternity will feature a University wide open house that will include speakers, exhibits, concerts and conducted tours of the campus.

APO President Harold Johnson has asked students to "make suggestions for Parent's Day activities and participate in the activities."

"This will afford the students an excellent chance to show their parents the University's and its facilities," said Harry Hayer, chairman of the Parent's Day Committee.

Presently the AFROTC and the NROTC plan exhibits of arms and equipment. The YMCA and the IDC have pledged their cooperation to the program. GMAB has scheduled a Petite Musicale Sunday night and the "Sound and Fury" will also be presented. The Planetarium will be showing "Color in the Sky" at 3, 4 and 8:30 p.m.

Jim Scott, APO member working with department exhibits, reports that all departments contacted plan to have exhibits and many will hold open house during Parent's Day.

The featured speaker has not yet been scheduled but Johnson has indicated that several persons are being contacted.

Although the tallest man on the Navy squad is a shade under 6-6, the Midshipmen outshouted the Tar Heels all night. The telling point in the contest was the excellent Navy defense, which limited Carolina's two great sophomores, Doug Moe and York Larese, to 13 points between them.

It was obvious from the outset that the Navy coaching staff had done a supreme job of scouting on the Tar Heels. Their defense was keyed to stop Carolina's high-scoring attack and did just that.

Although the Middies led throughout the first half, the score was fairly close until the Heels hit a basket famine with 7:00 left. From 20-17, Navy, the Middies stormed through for 10 straight points and the score was 30-17 before the Tar Heel could catch their breath.

From that point until the end of the contest Carolina never got closer than 10 points. The Teams exchanged baskets until Navy went into the dressing room at halftime the owner of a 12-point margin at 34-22. Dick Kepley kept the Tar Heels in the contest in the opening half, he dumped in 11 points.

Carolina's famous second-half comeback just wasn't there last night. Although the Heel rallied briefly to 40-31, Navy then went on another spree and pulled ahead 51-33 in a 7-point streak.

Big Lee Shaffer fouled out early in the second half and much of the Tar Heel rebounding strength was gone.

There were only 4 minutes left, and the score was 66-53, before Carolina showed any signs of a rally. The Heels, led by Harvey Salz, came back within ten at 69-59 and 71-61 but Navy kept putting through the foul shots and pulled out of reach.

Young Will Give Faculty Coverage

Plans for regular coverage of faculty research projects in progress were announced Monday by Davis Young, candidate for editor of The Daily Tar Heel.

Young said, "The present editor has defined the university as 'a community of scholars seeking truth.' This definition, while somewhat naive, has considerable validity. There is a great deal of important work being done here by our faculty, and students rarely if ever know what it is."

The candidate listed the following examples, drawn from the history department, as the sort of thing he had in mind: the study of businessmen in the French Revolution by Prof. George Taylor, a study of the welfare concept in western society by James King and a history of the South from 1913 to 1946 by George Tindall.

"These are all important examples of research now being done at UNC," said Young, "and while I realize that the modesty of the professional scholar would shrink at premature disclosure, I do feel that most of the scholars on this campus would gladly discuss certain aspects of their work for the benefit of students."

Young pointed out that the reinstitution of campus life must begin in the classroom. "The Daily Tar Heel," he said, "can play a crucial role in this area by building up the prestige of those members of our faculty who are working on the advanced frontiers of human knowledge."

BRIDGE LESSONS

Bridge lessons will be held today at 7 p.m. in the Rendezvous Room of Graham Memorial. The free lessons are being held every Wednesday night.

WOMEN'S ORIENTATION

A Chance To Serve

By JOAN BROCK

This week Carolina coeds are being extended an opportunity to serve their University in one of its most vital programs — orientation of new women students.

Application blanks for fall orientation counselors will be distributed in women's dorms within the next three days and interviews will begin next Wednesday.

The duties of an orientation counselor afford unique opportunities for training and for development of leadership. They lend themselves to rewarding experiences for coeds who wish to pass on to others the "Carolina Way of Life."

Beginning in April, several study classes are held to plan and discuss the fall program. A spirit of unity and cooperation prevails as counselors, trainers and University officials work together to devise the best possible program for UNC. One goal predominates — to welcome each coed into the UNC family and to make her feel a part of the campus from the moment she first glimpses the Old Well until the day she receives her cap and gown.

When September arrives, each counselor assumes responsibility for seven girls, whom she has met via mail during the summer. There are innumerable meetings and social functions — all designed to introduce the girls to each other and to the University.

Orientation counselors attend these meetings and participate in these functions with incoming coeds. Many new acquaintances are made and numerous facts related to University buildings, extracurricular activities and campus sites unfold themselves to new students and counselors alike during the week's program.

Orientation week permits counselors to learn more about their University and to explore various buildings and activities they have failed to note during previous semesters of study.

Counselors have a chance to meet University officials personally and to discuss problems and share ideas. As a result, each counselor obtains a comprehensive knowledge of the overall functioning of a State University.

Probably the most rewarding experience awaiting the counselor is that of watching each girl develop an appreciation for the University and for her freedom as she assumes with pride her role as a "Carolina Coed."

Only when each girl has been infused with a sense of belonging and with the true Carolina spirit is the role of the counselor completed.

Every woman student should avail herself of this opportunity to give a small part of herself in service to a University which has given so much to her — to a University which has endowed her with the privileged title of "Carolina Coed."

5 State-Supported Negro Colleges

Schools Want Money

RALEIGH — (AP) — Five state-supported Negro colleges asked the Joint Appropriations Committee Tuesday for enough money to either gain or retain membership in the Southern Assn. of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

The Association is the regular accrediting agency for colleges, both white and Negro, in the South. It has established certain standards regarding library and laboratory facilities and faculty development.

Three of the five institutions — A&T College at Greensboro, Fayetteville State Teachers College and Elizabeth City State Teachers College — currently are not on the association's membership rolls.

The other two — North Carolina College at Durham and Winston-Salem Teachers College — are in danger of losing their accreditation.

In many cases, other states will not accept teachers who are graduated from non-accredited colleges. Accreditation is also necessary for colleges to place its graduates in federal government jobs and in graduate programs of other institutions.

Emil Rosenthal, a Goldsboro businessman who is a trustee of the Fayetteville college, told the group that of six state-supported teachers institutions other than the Consolidated University, only three white schools are accredited.

"We give good training to the whites, and not as good training to the Negroes and then tell the Negroes, 'We hope you like it.'"

He told the joint group that so far no Negroes have applied for admission to East Carolina College, an accredited white institution.

"The money spent for law suits if these people begin to apply for admission to the white schools," he continued, "would be more than these few thousand dollars these people are asking."

Dr. Warmath T. Gibbs, President of A & T College, asked the joint committee for increases of $244,466 above the amount recommended by the Advisory Budget Commission for each year of the 1959-61 biennium in his budget requests.

Staff, Ads Hit Again By Jones

Dave Jones, candidate for editor of The Daily Tar Heel, reemphasized the importance of developing a large staff of capable reporters and of improving the business aspect of the newspaper.

"There have been several areas of the campus that have not been covered adequately this year," Jones said in a statement Tuesday.

He added that no area can be covered more adequately, however, unless the paper recruits a staff and trains them adequately.

"The present editor has made a start along this road, but a great deal remains to be done, so that The Daily Tar Heel can adequately cover the UNC campus," Jones explained.

Jones said that business revision undertaken by Editor Curtis Gans, Business Manager Walker Blanton and Advertising Manager Fred Katzin was a good thing, but he added that this too was only in a stage of development.

"As many avid comic readers, who had to suffer through early morning classes without relief from newswords or comic, know, these features were left out many days to put in enough advertising," Jones explained.

He added that this was largely due to the fact that although the advertising revenue brought in this year was greater than in years past, it was not enough to justify the publication of over four pages.

"The idea is to see that the Durham advertising area, along with Raleigh, Greensboro, Burlington and Pittsboro including points in between are adequately covered. If they are, there will be no doubt about having comics nor will there be any doubt about the ability of The Daily Tar Heel to publish six pages, including a large feature section, one or two times a week," Jones pointed out.

In conclusion, Jones asserted that without good advertising and a strong reportorial staff, the newspaper will be unable to perform its function. He pledged himself to the development of these areas.

Spring Plans IDC Subject At Meeting

The radio program, "Our Best To You," might originate from a proposed UNC "blanket party" in the spring.

The Interdormitory Council, which is planning the blanket party, will discuss the possibility of an "Our Best To You" from Carolina at a meeting today at 7 p.m. in Phi Hall. This Raleigh radio program is emceed by disc-jockey Jimmy Capps.

The IDC will also hear from a special committee investigating the purchase of a hi-fi set at reduced rates. The hi-fi would be used at small dormitory parties.

Other business at the meeting will include nomination of IDC executive officers for election March 25.

A resolution concerning the conversion of dormitory drink machines from the bottle to cup type will be discussed.

Contemporary Affairs Authority Coming Here

The world's foremost authority on American, English and French contemporary affairs will be on campus next week as a guest of the Weil Lecture on American Citizenship.

Dr. Brogan, a fellow of Peterhouse College, Cambridge University will speak in Hill Hall at 8 p.m. March 17, 18 and 19. The subject of this series will be "The Responsibilities of Citizenship."

The appearance of Dr. Brogan is another of the annual Weil Lectures on American Citizenship which in the past have such speakers as Eleanor Roosevelt, Robert A. Taft, Carlos Romulo, William Allen White and George Catlin.

The topic of Dr. Brogan's lectures for the days of his appearance here will be: on March 17, "The Responsibilities of Citizenship as seen by a Frenchman;" on March 18, "The Responsibilities of Citizenship as seen by an Englishman;" on March 19, "The Responsibilities of Citizenship as seen by an American."

Campus Chest Short Of $3000 Goal

Through Tuesday, half the Campus Chest goal of $3,000 had been contributed by students and faculty members.

The Campus Chest drive officially ended Saturday, but work will continue until the goal is reached. The Campus Chest Board is raising the rest of the money through five-dollar lists and through the use of "money boxes" on campus.

Student government leaders and Y members have been asked to be responsible for raising $5 each.

The "money boxes" in Y Building, Lenoir Hall and the Scuttlebutt are for any other student donations.

Jazz Singer Will Appear In Raleigh

Dakota Steton, jazz singer of "The Late, Late Show," will make her first appearance in Raleigh Sunday, March 22, in the Big Jazz Concert of '59.

For the concert, she will team with another well known name in the jazz music field, Woody Herman. The program will begin at 2:30 p.m. March 22 in the State Fair Arena in Raleigh.

Other jazz artists who will also appear include: Chris Barber and his jazz band, Ottie Patterson, drummer Graham Burbidge, trumpeter Pat Haleox and Monty Sunshine.

A blues-like misty quality of style has identified Dakota Steton with jazz enthusiasts. Her appearance in Raleigh comes during a career which she began at the age of seven, singing with two sisters. After her two sisters left the trio, Miss Steton began performing alone for special groups and then in night clubs.

Miss Steton and the other jazz stars have been secured for the March 22 concert by the Capital City Jazz Corporation.

Tickets for the jazz concert are on sale in Chapel Hill at Kemp's.

Med Instructor Wins Markle Scholar Award

For the seventh time a member of the faculty of the UNC School of Medicine has been named a Markle Scholar in Medical Science.

This marks the fourth consecutive year UNC has received this honor. Dr. W. Reece Berryhill, dean of the School of Medicine, was notified Saturday that Dr. Robert Zeppa, instructor in thoracic surgery of the Department of Surgery, had been named a Markle Scholar.

The award carries a cash grant of $30,000 payable at the rate of $6,000 a year over a five year period. It is considered one of the highest honors for promising young men in the field of academic medicine.

The purpose of the program is "to strengthen medical education by offering academic security and financial help to teachers and investigators in medical schools early in their careers."

Dr. Zeppa is the first scholar appointed in the UNC Department of Surgery. Three have been appointed in the Department of Medicine, two in the Department of Pathology and one in the Department of Pediatrics.

The awards were established in 1948 by the John and Mary R. Markle Foundation. Since that time over seven million dollars have been awarded to scholars.

Dr. Zeppa is a native of New York, did his undergraduate work at Columbia College and received his M.D. degree from the Yale University School of Medicine.

His internship was served at the University of Pittsburgh Medical Center. He was an assistant resident surgeon here at UNC from 1953 to 1956. He was a resident, also at UNC, in thoracic surgery from 1956 to 1957 and chief resident in general and thoracic surgery from 1957 to 1958.

Dr. Zeppa was in the laboratory of Dr. Oliver H. Lowry at the Washington University School of Medicine during the first part of last year. He became a member of the UNC faculty last year.
