SEMINAR ON NEW COMPUTER

Dr. John W. Carr III, director of the UNC Research Computation Center, will present a seminar Thursday at 3 p.m. in Room 208 Howell Hall.

The seminar will be given at an elementary level to explain the capabilities of the Univac 1105, a 2½ million-dollar electronic computer to be available here soon.

Dr. Carr will also explain the nature of several different short courses which will enable faculty members and graduate students to program individual research programs for processing through the computer.

ASTRONOMY CLUB

The Chapel Hill Astronomy Club will meet Sunday at 8 p.m. in the Faculty Lounge of the Morehead Building.

Weather permitting, a viewing session through the Planetarium's 15 inch telescope will be held after the program which will be conducted by President Bill Baylis.

MOSLEM STUDENTS

Moslem students will meet Thursday at the University Methodist Church at 11 a.m. This will be for the occasion of Id-ul-Fitre, one of the greatest festivals in the Moslem world. The festival is observed after one month's fasting in the month of Ramadan.

ROCKEFELLER WINNER AT UNC — One of 60 Rockefeller Brothers Theological Fellowships given throughout the U. S. and Canada has been awarded to Rinaldo A. L. Walker, a graduate student at the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill. Now working toward an M. A. degree in English, Walker will study during 1959-60 at Union Theological Seminary in New York City. He is shown (center) receiving congratulations from Prof. Arnold S. Nash, UNC professor of the history of religion, while looking on is the Rev. Samuel H. Magill, assistant dean of student affairs at UNC. Walker is the son of Dr. Franklin T. Walker of Clinton, Miss. and is a graduate of Mississippi College.

Walsh Discusses Evolution

The Catholic Church's attitude toward the theory of evolution was explained here last weekend by the Very Rev. Michael P. Walsh, S. J., president of Boston College.

Father Walsh was brought here for the fifth annual Piedmont Province Convention of the National Newman Club Federation.

At the close of the convention, these new Piedmont Province officers were elected: Paul Myatt of Virginia Military Institute, chairman; Jerry Euband of VMI, Pete Marchette of N. C. State College and Diana Dunford of the University of Virginia, vice chairmen.

Other officers are Ellen Dunne of Mary Washington, secretary and Cruz Sigala of Virginia Tech., treasurer.

Father Walsh, a noted teacher and scholar in the fields of biology, cytology and genetics, pointed to the renewed interest and favor received by the theory of evolution in the last decade and agreed that it is now held in one form or another by virtually all scientists.

The confusion and misunderstanding about the church's stand on evolution, said Father Walsh, has its origin in the failing to properly distinguish between the theory of organic evolution and the theory with the added philosophic implication of men like Huxley and Haeckel.

He pointed out that acceptance of a theory of organic evolution does not preclude believing that the soul of man is created by God, and that God directed the evolutionary creation of man's body.

Warner Wells To Speak To Pre-Meds In Hanes

The inhabitants of Hiroshima quaked in fear at the roar of an approaching American B-29 and relaxed when they saw it was alone and apparently in trouble.

The Japanese assumed the plane had been hit by anti-aircraft fire and cheered as two parachutes dropped—and then the bang.

A blast followed that demolished a large city, killed 500,000 people and sent out vibrations that are still shaking the world today.

This information was drawn from the Hiroshima Diary whose editor translator, Dr. Warner Wells, will speak to all interested pre-medical and pre-dental students Thursday night at 7:30 in Room 106 Hanes Hall sponsored by Alpha Epsilon Delta.

A world in which nations are like little boys holding sticks of dynamite in their right hands and pinching at each other with their left hands provides a setting for Dr. Wells' talk entitled "Implications of Nuclear Warfare."

Dr. Wells, assistant professor of surgery at the School of Medicine, will draw for his discussion from his three years of experience in Hiroshima and Nagasaki as surgery consultant on the U. S. Atomic Bomb Casualty Commission.

He will discuss the physiological and sociological effects of a nuclear attack. Colored slides showing scenes from the demolished Japanese cities will illustrate the discussion.

Pre-medical and pre-dental students interested in future AED membership will be invited to an information meeting after the program.

Henderson's Workers: A Resisting Effort

of the plant." Mill head Cooper has said he will start an evening shift "in the near future." The mill is currently operating only one shift. It formerly ran three.

The unionists think the acts of violence, particularly the dynamite attacks, are being perpetrated by non-union members. One striker said he thinks that whoever poured acid on 47 machines (March 9) did so to keep the troopers in the town.

"If someone had climbed that fence," the striker said, "he'd have left tracks where he hit the ground when he jumped from the fence. But the SBI has said nothing about any tracks. So it must've been an inside job."

Strikers also said they feel that an explosion at the South Henderson plant was done by pro-management people. The part of the mill that was dynamited was, according to a union member, constructed of tin. "If it had been a union member, he'd have thrown it through the end that had glass in it," he said.

The strikers also feel very strongly toward the "vigilante" group. This is a group of 200-300 citizens who have pledged to maintain a "night watch" for violence.

One woman striker said she had been walking home from a relative's house the previous night, and she saw a man walking up the street. Later, she was going back up the street and saw the same man.

"That was the first time I'd been out on the street after dark," she said. "But I just figured he was one of them night-watchers. If I'd met him again I was sure gonna find out. And I'd have sure popped him one good. It just made me so mad I didn't know what to do."

VIVE LE POPCORN!

The other day as I was walking down the street picking up tinfoil, (Marlboro, incidentally, has the best tinfoil, which is not surprising when you consider that they have the best cigarettes, which is not surprising when you consider that they take the best filters and put them together with the best tobaccos and rush them to your tobacco counter, fresh and firm and loaded with smoking pleasure). The other day, I say, as I was walking down the street picking up tinfoil, (I have, incidentally, the second largest ball of tinfoil in our family. My brother Eleanor's is bigger—more than four miles in diameter—but, of course, he is taller than I). The other day, as I was saying, while walking down the street picking up tinfoil, I passed a campus and right beside it, a movie theatre which specialized in showing foreign films. Most campuses have foreign movie theatres close by, because foreign movies are full of culture, art, and esoterica, and where is culture more rife, art more rampant, and esoterica more endemic than on a campus?

Nowhere; that's where.

I hope you have all been taking advantage of your local foreign film theatre. Here you will find no simple-minded Hollywood products, marked by treacly sentimentality and machine-made bravura. Here you will find life itself—in all its grimness, its poverty, its naked, raw passion!

Have you, for instance, seen the recent French import, Le Crayon de Mon Oncle ("The Kneecap"), a savage and uncompromising story of a man named Claude, whose consuming ambition is to get a job as a meter reader with the Paris water department? But he is unable, alas, to afford the flashlight one needs for this position. His wife, Bon-Bon, sells her hair to a wigmaker and buys him a flashlight. Then, alas, Claude discovers that one also requires a leatherette bow tie. This time his two young daughters, Caramel and Nougat, sell their hair to a wigmaker. So now Claude has his leatherette bow tie, but now, alas, his flashlight battery is burned out and the whole family, alas, is bald.

Or have you seen the latest Italian masterpiece, La Donna E Mobile (I Ache All Over), a heart-shattering tale of a boy and his dog? Malvolto, a Venetian lad of nine, loves his little dog with every fibre of his being. He has one great dream: to enter the dog in the annual Venetian dog show. But this, alas, requires an entrance fee, and Malvolto, alas, is penniless. However, he saves and scrimps and steals and finally gets enough together to enter the dog in the show. The dog, alas, comes in twenty-third. Malvolto sells him to a vivisectionist.

Or have you seen the new Japanese triumph, Kibutsi-San (The Radish), a pulse-stirring historical romance about Yamoto, a poor farmer, and his daughter Ethel who are accosted by a warlord one morning on their way to market? The warlord cuts Yamoto in half with his samurai sword and runs off with Ethel. When Yamoto recovers, he seeks out Ethel's fiancé, Red Buttons, and together they find the warlord and kill him. But, alas, the warlord was also a sorerer and he himically turned Ethel into a whooping crane. Loyal Red Buttons takes Ethel home where he feeds her fish heads for twenty years and keeps hoping she'll turn back into a woman. She never does. Alas.

If there's smoking in the balcony of your theatre, we hope you'll be smoking Philip Morris—or, if you prefer filters, Marlboro... Marlboro—new improved filter, fine rich flavor—from the makers of Philip Morris.
