Raleigh Newsman Ain't Ugly Enough

Charles Craven of The Raleigh News and Observer has been ruled "not eligible" to run in the Ugliest Man on the Campus contest, according to APO President Randal Etheridge.

Etheridge told Craven by letter, "As president of this chapter, I felt it only fair to tell you that although you are not eligible to run, you have been nominated for the contest by some of your State College admirers."

Craven said that he "would be happy to publish the picture of the Ugliest Man right here along with my own . . . if the contrast is flattering enough." Craven spoke in his column, "Byways of the News," in Wednesday's News and Observer.

The Ugliest Man contest will run through Friday afternoon. Polls are maintained every afternoon in the Scuttlebutt, Y Court and the Pine Room. A student may vote as many times as he wishes on the basis of a penny a vote.

"I understand that some students are actually running a campaign for this 'honor,'" Etheridge said. "All in all the contest are running quite closely today (Wednesday). Carolina is fortunate to have so many unusual forms of humanity."

UMOC will be named early next week and presented with a suitably engraved plaque.

permit legislators to move from their districts and still retain their Legislature seat.

Jones will introduce another bill, on behalf of The Daily Tar Heel, to transfer $125 from the advertising funds of the newspaper to the photography fund.

A bill to permit the Women's Residence Council to have a referendum on whether or not they should collect social fees in the women's dormitories.

University Club Gives By-Laws To Legislature

The University Club will open its membership to any student and will provide a check on expenditures — if Student Legislature passes a bill with new by-laws for the club.

The bill will be introduced by Dave Jones, president of the University Club and SP members of the Legislature, at tonight's session.

The proposed new by-laws for its operation in the future were discussed Tuesday night at a meeting of the University Club.

A revision committee composed of several members of the club who were interested in setting it on a sound basis met several times during the last week and drew up a proposed set of by-laws. Max Coley, UC representative from Lewis Dorm, served as secretary for the committee.

The new governing rules for the club were read to the membership at Tuesday's meeting. They were then gone over a section at a time with minor revisions being proposed and voted from the floor.

The new rules won unanimous approval from the body. They must be approved by the Student Legislature before they can take effect.

"We worked hard and gave a great deal of study to some of the problems that have faced the University Club in the recent past," said club President Dave Jones.

"We now have two classes of membership that allows anyone to take part in club activities to any extent he wants, and still represent the interest of his dorm or house."

Jones also said that the new by-laws define more carefully the duties and responsibilities of club officers and places a three-way check on all expenditures.

The new by-laws will be introduced as a bill at the first session of the 27th assembly of Student Legislature.

Lecturer Praises Spaniard

By WILLIAM G. FRIEDRICH

Prof. John E. Keller of the Department of Romance Languages, featured speaker for the final Humanities Division Faculty Lecture Tuesday night, said that Juan Ruiz, archpriest of Hita, might well be one of the all-time greats of Spanish literature.

Ruiz, known as the "Spanish Chaucer," lived in the 14th century and wrote the "Book of Good Love." Keller said Ruiz has also been called the Spanish Homer and the Spanish Boccaccio, but he does not approximate either of these writers as closely as he does the English poet.

Prof. Keller said Juan Ruiz lacks Chaucer's depth and dignity, but he compensated for this realism and frankness which the great Englishman never managed to capture.

Prof. Keller, who received his Ph.D. here in 1946, stated that Spanish historians claim Chaucer read the "Book of Good Love" and that he traveled in Spain and was a member of the forces that invaded the Peninsula in support of Henry of Trastamara against Peter the Cruel.

According to Spanish critics, Keller enumerated, there are three summits: the "Quixote" in the novel, the "Celestina" in the dramatic and the "Book of Good Love" in the lyric, satiric and dramatic. "Ruiz's book is an universal in its appeal as the 'Canterbury Tales,' but its failure to reach us is due to the fact that there is no readily available translation of all 7,000-odd quatrains," admitted Dr. Keller.

Little is known of Ruiz except for what he reveals in his book. His birth place is uncertain, and it was once believed that he spent 13 years in prison where he wrote the "Book of Good Love."

BULLETIN

RALEIGH, April 15 (AP) — A well-organized group of supporters successfully carried a 75-cent minimum wage bill through the House Wednesday after systematically defeating most of a host of crippling amendments.

After three days of sharp, sometimes angry, debate, the House voted 66 to 39 to send the bill to the Senate. If passed there, North Carolina would become the first state south of Pennsylvania to have a minimum wage law.

Dulles Resigns As Secretary; President Will Fill Post Soon; Herter Is Likely Replacement

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 15—Cancer forced John Foster Dulles to resign today as Secretary of State. A sad, moist-eyed President Eisenhower announced Dulles' decision at a dramatic news conference.

The vacationing President said he had not finally made up his mind regarding a successor to the 71-year-old cabinet member. He promised to fill the post "as quickly as practicable," and reports continued both here and in Washington that Under-Secretary Christian Herter, 64, is the most likely choice.

In a voice betraying his emotion, Eisenhower told a small group of newsmen that Dulles now is "incapacitated for carrying on the administrative load" of his office, "in addition to assisting in the making of policy."

The President actually said "absolutely incapacitated," but he later sent word to reporters that he had not intended to use the word "absolutely." It then was deleted from the official White House transcript.

Eisenhower said at the conference that the latest medical findings on Dulles' condition "are not of the kind that make him helpless." And he announced he is keeping Dulles on as a consultant on foreign policy.

Cancer Spread To Neck

Dulles' doctors concluded in Washington yesterday that his cancer probably had spread to the neck. A February examination disclosed abdominal cancer and Dulles underwent radiation treatments.

For the past several days he had suffered neck pain. That caused him to return to Washington Sunday from Florida, where he had been resting. He re-entered Walter Reed Army Hospital.

Eisenhower conferred with Dulles for 45 minutes there Monday and reportedly urged his good friend not to make any hasty decision.

This morning reporters covering the President's vacation headquarters were alerted by White House press secretary James C. Hagerty to be on hand for a 9:45 a.m. news conference. They were not told Eisenhower would be there but the quick arrival of Secret Service agents foreshadowed his appearance.

"What I have to say concerns Secretary Dulles," Eisenhower announced solemnly a moment after striding into the hotel press room. Facing a hastily set up battery of cameras and floodlights, the President added:

"I had a (telephone) conversation this morning with him, and in view of the findings the doctors have made yesterday, he has definitely made up his mind to submit his resignation."

JOHN FOSTER DULLES

CHRISTIAN A. HERTER

It was at the point Eisenhower said Dulles is incapacitated for the top State Department job but not helpless—and so:

"I have asked him to remain as my consultant, and I will appoint him to some office that makes it possible for him to be useful both to the State Department and to me."

Eisenhower, his emotion showing clearly, went on:

"I personally believe he has filled his office with greater distinction and greater ability than any other man our country has known—a man of tremendous character and courage, intelligence and wisdom.

No Decision On Successor

"With respect to a possible successor, no final decision has been made, and I will let you people know as quickly as it is practicable."

The fact that Eisenhower did not immediately announce a successor caused some surprise. There had been widespread expectation he would promptly name Herter, who has been acting secretary since February.

Herter already has been picked to represent the United States at a western foreign ministers' conference in Paris starting April 29.

In response to a question today, Eisenhower said that Herter—even if he does not become Secretary—will be on hand when the Western ministers meet with Russia's minister at Geneva May 11. The President explained:

Mangum Cops Most Improved, Outstanding Dorm Trophies

Mangum dorm was awarded the trophy for the outstanding dorm of the year last night at the annual Interdormitory Council Awards banquet held at Watts Restaurant. This dorm won over second place, Lewis, by ten points. Accepting the first place trophy for Mangum was President Tommy White.

The trophy for the most improved dorm also went to Mangum. This award was based on last year's points record compared with this year's record.

The third place trophy went to Joyner. Receiving the award for the outstanding dorm president of the year was Joe Herndon of Joyner. Herndon is a junior business administration major from Parkton. "I was very happy and surprised to receive this award," he said.

Another individual trophy went to Mike Childs of Grimes a sophomore history major from Wilson. Childs was chosen as the most outstanding IDC representative of the year. He is also active in the General Committee of the Carolina Symposium and is on the Freshman Camp Committee.

Cobb Dorm received the award for the dorm which has shown the most interest in intramural sports.

Approximately 70 people—both old and new members of the IDC and several faculty and student guests—were present.

Rudy Edwards, outgoing president of the IDC, presided over the banquet and Dave Alexander, chairman of the IDC Contest Committee, presented the trophies.

Phi Majority Defeats Bill

A bill for the sterilization of women having over two illegitimate children was defeated by an overwhelming majority of Phi Kappa Phi members Tuesday night.

The bill debated by the Phi is the same as the controversial Jolly-Davis proposal now before the N. C. General Assembly. The Jolly-Davis bill calls for sterilizing women who have as many as three illegitimate children.

In the Phi debate, Rep. Dave Matthews, who is president pro tem and chairman of the Ways and Means Committee of the Phi, defended the bill.

Matthews supported his stand by citing the cost of supporting illegitimate children by state and county agencies and explained that many of the "unfortunate" children became delinquents and criminals.

He also commented that the threat of sterilization would make women more conscious of their "morals" rather than so many actually being sterilized.

Rep. Bill Jackson, in his attack of the bill, said such action violates inalienable human rights. Instead of the bill, Jackson proposed that correction should be directed at the poverty and insecurity which breeds the people who habitually bear illegitimate children. He also called for rehabilitation for violations of society morals.

Rep. Glenn Johnson, also speaking against the bill, said religious groups are opposed to the Jolly-Davis proposal because "they realize sterilization is not truly a corrective measure, but a punitive one."

Johnson advocated a "stricter moral code through education" as a permanent rectification for the problem. "As long as our society condones illegitimacy, we will have the problem with us. One cannot legislate morals."
