Summer School Enrollment Soars

The Pooch That Almost Broke Up Graduation

This little dog being held by Commencement Marshal Wade Smith lived up to the great tradition of Chapel Hill dogs when he lay in the path of on-coming degree candidates at the University of North Carolina 165th Graduation exercises last Monday night. He barked when Commencement speaker Vermont C. Royster was introduced, and Royster expressed nostalgic appreciation for the dog's presence. Chancellor William B. Aycock declared he might award the dog an honorary degree but couldn't think of a fitting one at the moment.

Final Figures May Top 3,600 Mark

Classes begin tomorrow in the largest summer session at the University of North Carolina in the past decade—enrollment is predicted to be "above 3,600."

Prof. Arnold K. King, Director of the Summer Session, announces a wide range of courses in graduate courses as well as in regular undergraduate work of the University.

The faculty for the first session totals around 300.

Although registration was today, the time for registering will be extended through Monday, June 8, owing to the number of school teachers who may come in late—due to their obligations in their school systems over the state.

Besides the regular enrollment, there will be an extra large number of "short courses," workshops, and conferences, chiefly of the adult education type. Total estimated enrollment: above 5,000.

The Summer Session is an integral part of a great University. The Session here is the oldest in the nation begun in 1877. It is one of the largest in the nation.

Curricula offered during the summer in all colleges and schools are identical with those of the fall and spring semesters.

A full program of courses for freshmen and sophomores is available in the General College.

With a few exceptions, students may make progress towards fulfilling requirements for all degrees offered by the University in each of the following: College of Arts and Sciences, School of Business Administration, School of Education, School of Law, School of Library Science, School of Social Work.

Courses are offered in anthropology, art, botany, business, chemistry, classics, comparative literature, dramatic art, economics, education, English, geography, geology, German, history, law, library science, mathematics, music, philosophy, physical education, physics, political science, psychology, radio-TV motion pictures, religion, romance languages, Russian, social work, sociology, and zoology.
