22 UNC Students Pay Visit To University Of Toronto

By JINNY von SCHILLING

Canadian students played host Jan. 29-31 to 22 Student Government leaders who paid a visit to the University of Toronto.

Returning the Canadians' November visit, the Carolina students spent four days round trip traveling by train. A seven-hour lay-over in New York both ways allowed them time to tour the city from the New York stock exchange to Greenwich Village.

Transportation expenses were covered by President Charlie Gray's discretionary fund and $30 a student, supplemented by an anonymous alumni group.

Upon their arrival, the UNC students were honored at a steak luncheon by Henry G. Harper, 1911 U.S. graduate and vice-president of Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company Friday afternoon they participated in a seminar on Canadian-American relations with William McNaught, member of the history faculty.

Dinner at Hart House, the deluxe student union, was followed by further discussion of the seminar topic. Gill Burton gave a party that night, 10 p.m.-2 a.m. (It is customary to begin parties there at a later hour than usual at American universities.)

Saturday morning was spent on a farm near Toronto sledding, skiing and tobogganing. A free afternoon gave Carolina students an opportunity to visit with their individual hosts. Since the University of Toronto is primarily a commuter college, the guests stayed in private homes.

They dined at a French cafe, La Maison Dore before seeing the National Hockey League game between Toronto and New York. Toronto won 3-2. A party, 10 p.m.-3 a.m., at Derek Hayes' house concluded the evening's activities. Part of the entertainment included a five piece combo which provided intriguing music with old drums of various sizes.

After services at Trinity College Chapel all the students had breakfast at Trinity College. The afternoon was devoted to a concert presented by the Toronto Symphony Orchestra followed by dinner at the different Canadian homes. The last event of the trip was a farewell party given by Dean A. J. Earp.

The students who made the trip, in addition to Ray Jetties, were Sophie Martin, Nancy Awhrey, Sandy Trotman, Judy Albergotti, Nancy Baker, Anne Baker, Anne Towers, Cynthia Grant, Maxine Greenfield, Ann Hassinger, Kathy Fulensider, Anne Terry, Charlie Gray, David Grigg, Davis Young, Jim Crowder, Gordon Street, Bill Crutchfield, Hank Patterson, Erwin Fuller, Jim Scott, Wade Smith and David Parker.

Committee To Meet

The Carolina Symposium program committee will meet this afternoon at 4, Phi Hall, New East.

Holiday Set For Sanford's Expected Bid For Top Post

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. — Fayetteville and Cumberland County make a holiday Thursday for Terry Sanford's announcement that he is running for governor.

The 42-year-old lawyer will make his formal entry in the race while the city and county celebrates "Terry Sanford Day."

The announcement will make official what has been obvious for many months—that Sanford is campaigning for the Democratic nomination for governor in the May primary. It also will climax a statewide tour which Sanford has conducted since January.

Last Lecture Series Speech Slated Monday

Dr. George V. Taylor, associate professor of history, will deliver the second talk in the Last Lecture Series, Monday, 8 p.m. in Memorial Hall.

"Reflections on Uncertainty" will be the subject of Dr. Taylor's lecture, which will contain the thoughts the speaker would like to leave with American college students if he knew this were to be his last lecture.

Dr. Taylor, who is the coordinator of the Freshman Honors Program, joined the UNC faculty in 1952. He received his B.A. from Rutgers University in 1941, and his M.A. and Ph.D. from the University of Wisconsin in 1949 and 1950.

This unique lecture series was originated at Ohio State University, and Carolina is currently the only school in the nation conducting the series, which is sponsored by student government.

John D. Larkins Jr. of Trenton, lawyer and state Democratic national committee member, already is in the running. He was the first candidate to announce.

Others mentioned as possibilities, but as yet uncommitted, are State Treasurer Edwin Gill, Raleigh lawyer I. Beverly Lake, and state Sen. O. Arthur Kirkman of High Point.

Sanford served as a state senator in 1953. He moved into political prominence when he managed the successful U. S. Senate campaign for the late W. Kerr Scott in 1954.

The Fayetteville High School band will provide a musical background for the Sanford program Thursday around noon. Streets will be decorated with bunting and loudspeakers will be set up to carry the proceedings.

Sanford served as a state senator at the historic Market House in downtown Fayetteville. I. H. O'Hanlon, who served with Sanford in the 1953 legislature, will be master of ceremonies for the program.

Among the visitors expected from over the state will be Mrs. W. Kee (Miss Mary) Scott of Haw River, widow of the former governor and U. S. Senator.

YMCA CABINET TO MEET

The first cabinet meeting of the YMCA for this semester will be Thursday, 4:30 p.m. in the Y building. Bob Noble, who spent last year in Germany on Campus chest funds, will present a 20 minute program on "The New Threat of Germany." Cabinet members are urged to be present.

Cuban Student Leaders To Visit UNC Campus

By MASA NISHIHARA
Fifteen Cuban student leaders are coming here Thursday from the University of Havana to attend the Cuban Student Leader Seminar. It will be held for four weeks on campus.

The seminar is sponsored by the UNC Institute of Latin American Studies and by the School of Philosophy, University of Havana, in cooperation with the State Department.

The president and the vice-president of the university student body are included. Nine participants are women students, including a TV actress and a kindergarten teacher.

The seminar is designed to give the Cuban students special academic opportunities that may prove valuable to them on their return home and to give them a realistic picture of life in the United States. They will study sociology and anthropology especially. Special lectures will be given on several aspects of American life in cooperation with the Institute for Research in Social Science here.

During their four-week stay here at Chapel Hill, they also will have opportunities to attend extra-curricular activities, such as talks with the student government, to participate in a mock United Nations Assembly, to attend basketball games, and to attend the Duke Ellington dance performance and a Count Basie concert. They are also scheduled to stay overnight at homes in Mount Airy.

The Cuban visitors will stay at the Joseph Palmer Knapp Building, and most of the classes will have English-Spanish translation.

Book Trading Post To Begin Feb. 3 In Y

The Alpha Phi Omega Book Trading Post will be operated again this year in Y Building, 9 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Feb. 3 through 8. It will be closed Saturday afternoon and Sunday.

Students who wish to sell their used texts should bring them by, price them and the APO brothers will try to sell them. After the trading post closes, students will pick up the cash for their books, or the unsold books, according to APO trading post chairman Clarence Cordle.

"The aim of the trading post is to offer students a chance to buy and sell used texts at a reasonable price, eliminating the middle man profit and the inconvenience of individual transactions," Cordle said.

"In the past few years, more and more students have patronized the trading post, an annual service project of APO. We hope this is a sign of its effectiveness and usefulness to the students."

The seminar will continue through March 4, when the Cubans leave Chapel Hill to spend another two weeks touring the United States including a stopover at Puerto Rico on their way home.

The Cuban visitors will stay at the Joseph Palmer Knapp Building, and most of the classes will have English-Spanish translation.

Activities scheduled today in Graham Memorial are the following: Club Hel, 5-6 p.m.; Grill; Chess Club, 7-11 p.m.; Roland Parker I & III; and International Student Board, 4-6 p.m. Woodhouse.

Will Oppose Jordon In May 28 Primary

BULLETIN
RALEIGH (AP) — Melvin Cording has withdrawn from the Senate race, saying that in view of recent developments (Hewlett's candidacy), he "believes that in the interest of the party, his withdrawal would best serve the party."

He adds that to continue in the campaign, a second primary might result "at great expense to the state."

By HARVE HARRIS and BERNIE GHESELIN
Before a handful of assistants and reporters Addison Hewlett quietly announced his candidacy for the U. S. Senate yesterday at the Sir Walter Raleigh hotel, subject to the May 28 primary.

In the 10 minute session Hewlett parried with questions pertaining to financial backing, his platform, and the choosing of a campaign manager. Hewlett remained non-committal on all questions with promises to outline his platform and to name a manager later in the campaign.

Indicating that he would campaign extensively throughout the state, Hewlett said, "I'm gonna scrap it for everything I'm worth."

In a statement read to newsmen yesterday, Hewlett stated "We shall move on the simple precept upon which we were raised, that the people of North Carolina elect their Senator, and no others are vested with this power."

Physician Expects Flu Bug To Hit Chapel Hill

University physician E. McG. Hedgpeth will "be surprised" if Chapel Hill is not hit by the current flu epidemic.

Presently 10 to 15 students are in the infirmary with flu. Normally, the doctor said, "there is a sharp increase in respiratory illnesses after vacation periods."

In a statement read to newsmen yesterday, Hewlett stated "We shall move on the simple precept upon which we were raised, that the people of North Carolina elect their Senator, and no others are vested with this power."

The legislator told newsmen yesterday that he understood that "it takes less than half as much money to wage a senatorial campaign as it does a gubernatorial race."

"My support, both voting and financial, will have to come from the people," Hewlett stated. He has said before that his will be a "poor man's campaign." He added that he will not accept contributions from sources who "will want to call the shots."

In response to questions, Hewlett said that he had made up his mind to run on Saturday, after talking to friends and supporters.

About a dozen members of a Volunteers for Hewlett organization were present at the news conference. The group was part of a state wide organization formed last week with Dewey Sheffield and Robert Pace as co-chairmen.

Headquarters of the Volunteers is located in Chapel Hill. Their purpose is to promote the candidacy subsequent election of Hewlett to the senate, the chairman said.

Sheffield is currently a senior at UNC. He is active in campus politics and is president of the Wilson County Young Democratic Club.

Pace, a resident of Morrisville, is a graduate of the University and is also a member of the state YDC.

ADDISON HEWLETT

present junior senator, B. Everett Jordan from Saxapahaw. Jordan was appointed two years ago by Gov. Luther Hodges to fill the seat made vacant by the death of W. Kerr Scott.

Melvin Cording, mayor of Wallace, has also announced his candidacy for the senate seat.

Hewlett, a Wilmington attorney, has been speaker of the State House of Representatives for the past year. His name was mentioned earlier in connection with the gubernatorial campaign, but on Jan. 31, Hewlett formally withdrew all intentions of taking part in the governors' race because of lack of funds.

Mental Illness Can Strike Anyone, Students Discover

"I have certainly realized that anyone can become mentally disturbed."

This statement was made by a UNC coed who was one of several students who made weekly trips to Dix Hill last semester.

Last night a seminar in mental health got underway here, in connection with the "Y" Dix Hill service project. Both the project and the seminar are open to all students. A seminar will be held each Tuesday evening at 7 in the upstairs dining room of Lenoir Hall.

The organizational meeting last night consisted in part of a discussion of trips made to Dix Hill last semester and consideration of the book "Light Beyond Shadows," by the Rev. Fred West.

The combination project-seminar has at least two goals in mind: "some contribution to the therapeutic atmosphere of the mental hospital in Raleigh, and some opportunity for those involved to gain a deeper insight into their own self-image." The two programs are under the direction of Deene D. Clark, Danforth Seminary Intern.

The following are some of the statements made by students who went to Dix Hill to do volunteer work in the wards last semester:

"... at times a sense of revulsion against these 'insane, crazy' people came to me. I found at times I avoided contact with them. I wondered if these men understood anything we were trying to do. I was a little angry when they didn't thank me profusely when I did something for them."

But, as Clark points out, "the reaction gradually changes, for this same student later said, "The first time we went to Dix Hill, I was a little uneasy about how I should act, how the patients would act, and how they would react to me. On our first visit, an elderly woman came up and grabbed my arm. I really was surprised and unsure about what to do. If the same thing had happened a few weeks later, I would have hardly given it a second thought."

"As each week passed I became more and more at ease and more sure of just what my reactions should be. I think that the fact that the woman was in a mental institution gave me a different attitude than I would have had if I had met her in a friend's home or in a general hospital."

On the trips to Dix Hill students get to know individual patients, go to dances with them, play cards and just chat. A coed said her "whole attitude toward the mentally disturbed has changed. I now think of them as being just the same type people I know outside. They no longer seem a separate branch of the human race or a select group of people. I have certainly realized that anyone can become mentally disturbed."

Another coed said "... it was so difficult to realize that one who is not the most vivacious talker, the outstanding social worker, not an expert in psychology or the practice of Christianity but a raw, inhibited college student could be of real help — how extremely discouraging is the fact that I, you, all of us, have not done enough. We could have done so much more."

Following is the schedule of seminar subjects and speakers:

Feb. 9 The Reverend Fred West of Raleigh, former patient at Dix Hill Mental Hospital. An evening's consideration of mental illness from the patient's point of view.

Feb. 16 Dr. Walter A. Sikes, Psychiatrist and Superintendent, Dorothea Dix Hospital. The nature and objectives of mental hospitals with a consideration of the ways in which laymen can be of assistance to the mentally disturbed in and out of hospitals.

Feb. 23 Chaplain William Steinger, Chaplain at Dix Hospital. The relation of religious life to mental health.

March 1 Study group in the area of Approach: why is silence threatening? Why do I have difficulty relating to some people? Why do I reject the way some people approach me? How may I overcome some of these difficulties?

March 8 Dr. J. Earl Summers, psychiatrist at North Carolina Memorial Hospital. Approach.

March 15 Study group considering anxiety: what is the nature of anxiety? What is the difference between anxiety and fear? What is the difference between natural and pathological anxiety? How may anxiety be relieved?

March 22 Dr. Harley Shands, psychiatrist at North Carolina Memorial Hospital. Anxiety.

March 29 Study group considering acceptance: why is self-acceptance difficult? What relation does self-acceptance have with the ability to accept others? What is the difference between self-love and selfishness? What is the religious attitude toward acceptance?

April 5 The Reverend Carr, Durham pastor active in counseling. Acceptance.

April 12 Dr. Bernard Glueck, psychiatrist at North Carolina Memorial Hospital. The healthy and therapeutic manner in which people can relate to one another.

April 26 Panel discussion of "The Authentic Life" with The Reverend Vance Barron, Presbyterian Church, Chapel Hill; Dr. Eugene Hargrove, Psychiatrist and Commissioner of Mental Health for North Carolina; the Reverend Charles Jones, Community Church, Chapel Hill; Professor Maurice Natanson, Philosophy Dept., U.N.C.
