By JONATHAN YARDLEY

After more than a year of extensive preparation officials of the 1960 Carolina Symposium today announced the names of fifteen eminent men who will be speakers and panelists during the week-long Spring event.

The Symposium, which will be held from March 27 to April 1, is centered around the theme of "The Image of Man: The Individual in an Accelerated Society." The main speeches will be delivered in Memorial Hall, but guest speakers will visit classes and special discussion sessions throughout the week.

Serving as moderator for the Symposium will be John Cogley, one of the leading Catholic intellectuals in America. Recognized internationally as one of the major spokesmen on current problems, Cogley is a columnist for Commonweal Magazine, of which he was formerly executive editor. He has also been a contributor to such leading publications as Look and The New Republic.

Cogley has directed a number of committees for the Fund of the Republic, and is presently director of the Fund's Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions. He is the editor of Catholicism in America and Religion in America.

Speaking on the topic "Concepts of Man" will be John Wild, noted Harvard professor of philosophy. Wild is noted for the wide range of philosophical knowledge and mastery which he embraces; his published works are on such varied subjects as Plato's Theory of Man and The Challenge of Existentialism.

Wild has twice been awarded Guggenheim Fellowships, has been president of the Metaphysical Society of America and is currently president of the eastern division of the American Philosophical Association. His published works have appeared in many leading journals.

One of the speakers who is certain to attract much attention is William H. Whyte, whose lecture will be centered around the problems of "Socio-Economic Factors in Our Society." This former Fortune editor became a national figure in 1956 with the publication of The Organization Man, one of the most stimulating and controversial studies of the past decade.

A visitor whose fame equals that of Whyte will be Gen. James M. Gavin, one of the most outspoken critics of the missile program. Gen. Gavin will explore the difficulties brought about by "Technological and Scientific Society."

Gavin, whose rise through the Army ranks was meteoric, was Commander of the 82nd Airborne Division at Normandy and Bastogne, as well as other crucial encounters of World War II. He later was Chief of Staff of the Allied Forces in Southern Europe and Army Chief of Research and Development. He has written War and Peace in the Space Age and Airborne Warfare.

Speaking on "The State" will be Thurman Arnold, one of America's leading Liberal Progressives. Arnold became a national figure during the late 1930's when his efforts to destroy monopolies received wide acclaim for their effectiveness. He has been Assistant Attorney General of the U.S. and Justice of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

Arnold, who is now senior partner in the law firm of Arnold, Fortas, and Porter, has published The Symbols of Government, The Folklore of Capitalism and Democracy and Free Enterprise.

The problems of "The Modern Arts" will be fully explored by two leading figures in twentieth century art, Dwight Macdonald and Kenneth Rexroth. Macdonald, who has edited such magazines as The Partisan Review and Encounter, has long been one of the outstanding commentators on every phase of American life. Since 1951 he has been a staff writer and art critic for The New Yorker Magazine.

Rexroth will be of great interest to Symposium audiences as one of the leading exponents of the "jazz and poetry" cult. A powerful force in the new literature of the 1950's, Rexroth's poetry and criticism have won him national acclaim. Among his works are The Phoenix and the Tortoise, The Dragon and the Unicorn and 100 Poems From the Japanese.

Macdonald and Rexroth will be on the Memorial Hall stage on the same evening, and Symposium administrators expect a fiery and fascinating discussion to arise between these two noted individuals.

Also to be featured during Symposium Week is Gerald Holton, Austrian-born scientist, teacher and editor. In a recent article in the Saturday Evening Post Holton suggested that science must be made an integral part of our culture rather than a separate entity, and he has advanced this idea in his book Science and the Modern Mind.

Holton has been a member of the Harvard faculty for 17 years, and is editor-in-chief of Dedalus, journal of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. He has also published Science and the Modern Mind.

Symposium Week, besides featuring these distinguished main speakers, has drawn from the nation and the U.N.C. campus to present a group of panelists who will discuss pertinent topics following each evening's lecture. "We feel that this innovation will add greatly to the scope of the event," said Edwin Levy, Symposium Chairman.

Seven panelists have been announced to date:

Discussing the subject "Concepts of Man" with John Wild will be Dr. Bernard C. Glueck, Freudian scholar and professor of psychiatry at the U.N.C. Medical School; Dr. Maurice Natanson, professor of philosophy U.N.C.; and Dr. William H. Poteat, professor of Christianity and Culture, Duke University Divinity School.

William H. Whyte will be joined the following evening by Dr. Karl Sax, Harvard professor of botany and former president of the American Genetics Society; Dr. Paul M. Swezey, Harvard professor of Botany; Dr. Robert C. Wood, professor of economics and social science at M.L.T.; and Dr. Milton Heath, chairman of the U.N.C. department of economics.

Larkins Supporters In Chapel Hill Form Campaign Center

John G. Alley, senior from Goldsboro, announced today the formation of the "Students For Good Government Committee," advocating John D. Larkins, Jr. for Governor of North Carolina.

Committee Member Alley said that every student should be interested in the outcome of the upcoming Democratic Primary on May 28, and should signify his interest by becoming familiar with the needs of our state, and the positions taken by each candidate as well as his qualifications.

Alley said further that organization plans are to encourage all eligible students to register for and vote in the primary; to acquaint students with the pertinent issues of the campaign; and to attempt to influence as many people as possible to vote for the candidate of their choice.

The organization feels that as future citizens of the state, students should accept their responsibilities.

Committee member Jim Caldwell, Jr. of Charlotte said that the group's significant reason for supporting Larkins was his long record of service to the Democratic Party and to the state.

Candidate Larkins holds a record covering 24 years. During 9 terms (10 years) in the North Carolina State Senate, Larkins served as a member of 39 separate committees and has held 6 committee chairmanships: Public Utilities, 1937; Public Roads, 1939; Rules Committee, 1941; Unemployment Compensation, 1943; Banks and Currency, 1949; and Appropriations, 1951 and 1953.

The initial group of students composing this organization are: Dick Robinson, David B. Cannon, Sophie Martin, John B. Whitley, J. C. Byrd, Bill Sharpe, Jimmy Caldwell, W. I. Berryhill Jr., Carol Lynn Garris and John G. Alley.

All students who are interested in joining "Students For Good Government Committee" can contact Sophie Martin at 89189, John Alley at 87941 or any of the above mentioned people.

Lunch Counters Remain Closed Across State

RALEIGH, (AP) — A number of lunch counters in several North Carolina cities remained closed Monday in the wake of recent student strikes by Negro college students protesting segregated eating facilities.

No demonstrations were reported. The lunch counter at Woolworth's store in Raleigh's Cameron Village shopping center was open for business. Negro college students announced Sunday they would halt demonstrations against segregated eating facilities at Cameron Village pending trial of 43 students charged with trespassing.

The 43 students from Shaw University and St. Augustine College here face trial in City Court Feb. 25.

A committee from the two schools said the movement would continue against four downtown Raleigh stores.

Lunch counters at three downtown Raleigh stores remained closed—Woolworth's, McClellan's and Walgreens. One section of Kress' lunch counter was open to employes "and guests." The Hudson-Belk Store's lunch counter, also the scene of a recent sit-down strike by Negro students, also was open to employes and guests.

Mystery Still Surrounds Argentine Sub Controversy

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, (AP) — Accounts of a weird battle against a submarine in the Gulf of Nuevo created a feeling here today that the hunted boat has escaped from a sizable portion of the Argentine fleet.

Some skepticism has been expressed that a submarine was there in the first place.

Deputy Minister Justo Villar conferred with President Arturo Frondizi but declined to disclose details of the talk.

The Minister said he did not know whether or not the submarine had gotten away. The 17-day search is salvaged perhaps a score of oil's plus planes, in a body of water only a bit larger than San Francisco Bay. Argentina claims the Gulf as her territorial waters.

There was no word tonight on the Navy's "Operation Sinking," a electronic equipment flown from the United States.

Argentine depth charges have been effective only down to 262 feet, while U. S. depth charges can reach 656 feet below the surface. The floor of the gulf dips below 900 feet in spots, so a submarine presumably could dive below the range of the Argentine depth charges.

Even though the 10-mile-wide entrance to the 20-by-40 mile Gulf has been reported blockaded, an Argentine Navy captain just back from the nautical game of hide-and-seek said the underwater intruder had sufficient speed to avoid capture by Argentina's warships.

"I do not know whether the sub has escaped or not. But if it has not, but is only because it does not want to. It can escape whenever it wants," said the officer, who declined to be identified.

CORRECTION

Bob Nobles did not resign from the Student Legislature. He resigned from the Ways and Means Committee.
