CAROLINA'S 1959-1960 basketball season officially came to an end a little after 9 o'clock Friday night when a surprised band of Tar Heels found they had been ousted from the Atlantic Coast Conference Tournament by the Duke Blue Devils. It is rather ironical that the kiss of death should be inflicted by Duke, but that was exactly what happened. The old saying goes, "he who laughs last laughs best," and there can be no doubt about the fact that the Devils had the last one this time.

There were a number of incidents that contributed to the Carolina downfall, but none of them matched the Blue Devils' desire to seek revenge on the Tar Heels for the three previous pastings the Carolina five had inflicted. Lee Shaffer's foul problem was certainly one of the prime factors which worked in Duke's favor. After he picked up his third foul with over seven minutes left to play in the first half Coach Frank McGuire pulled him out of the lineup. While Shaffer was riding the bench the Tar Heels lost their scoring touch and failed to scratch for a period of over five minutes.

GOING HAND-IN-HAND with Shaffer's problem was the scoring by Duke center Carroll Youngkin. Although Youngkin scored 14 points in the first half, he really mopped up in the final period when Shaffer had to play him man-to-man with four fouls. Doing the obvious thing, Blue Devil coach Vic Bubas signaled continually in the latter stages of the contest for his players to work the ball to Youngkin who promptly laid it in. There was nothing Shaffer could do to stop him once he got the ball.

Despite the fact that Duke was in the process of pulling off a great upset, the crowd at the coliseum seemed to be pulling for the Tar Heels. The surprising second-half rally turned in by Carolina had all the fans wondering if the Tar Heels were really going to be able to get the upper hand in the contest. Once the game was tied up, however, the Blue Devils tightened up their defense and boosted their offensive production to keep on even terms with the Tar Heels before eventually gaining command again.

AFTER THE TAR HEELS had been done in, N. C. State came out on the floor and got the treatment from Wake Forest. Although not as close a contest in the final stages as the one which preceded it, this battle was equally as exciting. Of course, the clincher in the second game was the fight that occurred in the last minute of play. Rather than the fact that it was a close and strongly contested affair throughout, the spectators will remember this one for its literally "battling finish."

After the game was over Clemson coach Press Maravich, one of the five members of the ACC basketball committee, said that if anything were to come of the fight in disciplinary action he would stick up for Wake Forest forward Dave Budd. Along with State's Anton Muehlbauer, Budd was in the center of the action under the backboard which led to the scuffle. Although Budd may be dismissed as completely innocent of starting the fracas, it's almost uncanny how he seems to turn up in the middle of so many cage brawls.

Even though State put up a great showing against Wake Forest and had the support of those who wanted to see a second straight upset, it is indeed fortunate for the finals of the tournament that it did not win the game. Not only would this have put the fourth and sixth seeded teams in the championship tilt, but it would have also meant that Duke was assured of a free ride to the NCAA playoffs. If an NCAA bid was awarded the winner, the final game should be played between two teams that are eligible to advance so that no squad can back in like Carolina did last year.

NO REPORT ON MARAVICH
RALEIGH, (AP) — Atlantic Coast Conference Commissioner Jim Weaver said Saturday he had not yet received a report concerning a referee's charge to "conduct unbecoming a coach" levelled at Clemson's Press Maravich.

Referee Lou Eisenstein brought the charge against Maravich when the Tiger coach threw a towel on the court during his team's first round loss to Wake Forest in the ACC basketball tourney.

Weaver was not at the game, having been delayed en route at Nashville, Tenn., by a snow storm.

Weaver said he expected to receive a report from Eisenstein and M. P. Foolsie Knight, supervisor of conference basketball officials, within the next few days.

Four Champions To Return For ACC Indoor Track Meet

Four champions will return to the Atlantic Coast Conference Indoor Games to defend their titles against some terrific competition in the Millrose Games of the South" here Saturday, March 14.

Among the headliners are David Coates, a hefty senior from the University of South Carolina. This young man from Culpeper, Va. broke the conference indoor record in 1958 with a magnificent heave of 54' 2 1/2". Last year he defended his title with a toss of 52' 6 1/4", which was two feet farther than his nearest rival's.

Coates' main competition this year should come from Nick Kovalak, a junior from the University of Maryland. Kovalakides placed second last winter with a toss of 49' 1 3/4", but later in the year he threw the heavy lead ball over 50 feet.

Bjorn Andersen, Maryland's fine broom jumper, will be back to protect his crown. His jump of 21' 11 3/4" was enough to nip Carolina's versatile Ray Stanley.

Stanley May Jump Stanley's appearance in this year's games hinges on the outcome of the Tar Heels on the basketball court. If they do not win the ACC tournament, he probably will participate. Andersen, besides excelling in the broom jump, is perhaps the top pole vaulter in the conference. In several indoor meets this year he has jumped 14' 7".

A sensational race could develop in the 60 yard dash. The defending champ, Don Whitaker from where else but Maryland will have a very difficult time holding off his teammate, Jonas (Butch) Speigel.

Speigel Beats Teammate Speigel, a junior from Richmond, Va., was injured last year and did not participate. Several times this season the Virginian has beaten Whitaker. His best time has been 6.2, which is one-tenth of a second off the conference record held by Duke's fabulous Dave Sime.

During the outdoor season last year Whitaker won the conference 220 yard dash championship, while Speigel walked off with the 100 yard dash. These two may encounter a stiff race from Virginia's Tony Sepp, a young sophomore who has beaten Speigel once in the 50 yard dash. If these three have a good night, look for the record to fall or be tied.

Dunkleberg Back The fourth champ back to defend his title is Clemson's John Dunkleberg, who won last year's 600 yard dash in record-tying time of 1:12.7 minutes. His efforts equalled those of Carolina's Dave Seurlock in 1958. Tom Basemore, Duke's fine runner, was second by a small margin in the 1959 event and will return in hopes of bettering his performance this year. This should be a thriller down to the wire.

UNC track coaches Dale Ranson and Joe Hilton, who are making arrangements say there are fewer defending champs this year than they can remember. However, they quickly add that this year's event should be "bigger and better than ever before." Maryland will bring a team that is loaded with talent and it is predicted that its stars will break many of the present marks.

The non-conference division, which is limited to Southern and Southeastern Conference athletes, promises to be much stronger and more interesting than in past years.

Schaus Named Top Coach

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — West Virginia's Fred Schaus, who guided his Mountaineers to a sixth straight Southern Conference championship, Saturday was named conference basketball coach of the year.

It marked the third consecutive season—and the fourth time in his six years at West Virginia—that Schaus had been chosen coach of the year by the Southern Conference Sportswriters Assn.

He will receive the Anthon Foy Trophy, given by the association in honor of the late Anthon Foy, former sports editor of the Greenville, S. C., Piedmont.

ONE IN AND ONE OUT — Carolina sophomores Barrie Tiedemann (left) and Dave Peltz were both expected to be star performers for the Tar Heel track team in the upcoming ACC indoor meet, but now only Tiedemann will compete since Peltz has been forced out for the season with a spleen infection.

Tar Heel Wrestlers Begin Tourney Action

By RIP SLUSSER
"We are going to try to recapture second place" said Coach Sam Barnes as his team prepared for the Atlantic Coast Conference Wrestling Championships to be held today and Monday in Charlottesville, Va. Barnes stated that Maryland, which has won the championship for the past five years, should sweep the tournament. "They have not come close to losing a dual match this year and, therefore, they should have very little trouble in retaining their title" he said. The real fight will be for second place. "The Tar Heels grabbed it last year, just edging third place Virginia, 63-52. The matches originally scheduled for Friday and Saturday, March 4-5, were postponed until Sunday and Monday, March 6-7, due to the snow storm. The preliminaries and the semi-finals will be run off Sunday afternoon and night with the finals coming Monday night.

UNC Complete Team Carolina will be the only team in the conference to send a complete Barnes will take eleven boys with him Sunday morning for the long ride to the school of Jefferson. The chief Tar Heel hopes ride with Frank London in the 115 pound class and Cary McSwain in the 147 division.

London, who has won four matches this year, placed third last year in his event. Since neither the first or second place winners are back, and due to his steady improvement, he will be the number one seed. McSwain, who Barnes calls his "phenom", has shown such rapid progress this year that he will gather more than passing attention.

No High School Experienced Having never wrestled in high school, Cary came to Carolina with absolutely no experience or knowledge of the sport. As a freshman he engaged in four matches in actual competition. This year the courageous sophomore has participated in eight matches, winning most of them. "The way this kid has improved, and with his determination, I think he has an excellent chance of taking his weight division championship," Coach Barnes said.

Shuford Given Chance Another Carolina hopeful is Pope Shuford, the young man who tied the school scoring record with thirty points. Shuford, with eight victories, won more dual matches than any other member of the squad. Ray Russell, captain of this year's contingent, placed third in the 167 pound division last winter and will be one of the favorites in the present Charlottesville tournament.

Eligibility Restored To Budd By ACC Executive Committee

RALEIGH, March 5 (AP) — The Atlantic Coast Conference Executive Committee overruled Commissioner Jim Weaver Saturday and restored Wake Forest basketball star Dave Budd's eligibility for the loop's championship game.

Wake Forest played Duke Saturday night in the ACC Tourney for the league title and a berth in the NCAA playoffs which open next week.

Weaver had declared Budd ineligible to play in the finals because of his part in a fracas Friday night in the closing seconds of the semi-final contest with North Carolina State.

Committee Reviews Case After a 2 1/2 hour meeting, the Executive Committee, which reviewed the case at Wake Forest's request, decided "in the light of mitigating circumstances" Budd would be eligible.

Dr. H. Brooks James of North Carolina State, ACC President, declined to reveal what the "mitigating circumstances" were. The Committee's action was unanimous. James, Dr. O. K. Cornwell, of North Carolina and Dr. Mortimer Caplin of Virginia are the voting members.

Officials Report Weaver reported his ruling to the committee after receiving reports of the incident from M. E. Knight, conference basketball officials supervisor and the referees who worked the game, Red Mihalik and Lou Eisenstein. Weaver attended the contest but left before the flurry.

The trouble erupted with 18 seconds to go in a game won by Wake Forest over N. C. State 71-66.

Budd, a 6-6 senior from Woodbury, N. J., and State's Anton Muehlbauer tangled in a scramble for a rebound and fell to the floor. In an instant players from both teams rushed to the scene but quick action by the coaches, police and officials restored order.

Both Players Ejected Weaver quoted Mihalik as saying that both Budd and Muehlbauer were ejected from the game.

THREE WHO PASSED IN THE NIGHT
Last year, as everyone knows, 1,210,614 undergraduates dropped out of college. 256,080 flunked; 309,656 got married; 375,621 ran out of money; and 309,254 found jobs, as you have, of course, observed, this accounts for only 1,210,611 out of 1,210,614. What happened to the other three?
Well sir, to find the answer, I recently completed a tour of American campuses where I interviewed 40 million students and sold several subscriptions to The Open Road for Boys, and it pleases me to report that I can now account for those three elusive undergraduates.
The first was an LSU junior named Fred Gaugin. He was extremely popular, always ready with a smile, fond of folk dancing and pralines, and last semester his Chi Psi brothers unanimously elected him treasurer of the fraternity. This proved an error. Gaugin, alas, promptly absconded with the money and went to Tahiti to paint. The fraternity is bending every effort to extradite Gaugin, but Tahiti, alas, is currently observing the feast of Diphthong, the Sun-God, a five-year ceremony during which all the islanders wear masks, so nobody, alas, can say for certain which one is Gaugin.

The second missing undergraduate is William Cullen Sigafoos, Oregon State freshman, who went one day last fall to a disreputable vendor named A. M. Sashweight to buy a pack of Marlboros. Mr. Sashweight did not have any Marlboros because Marlboros are only sold by reputable vendors. However, he told Sigafoos that he had another brand which was just as good, and Sigafoos, being but an innocent freshman, believed him.

Well sir, you and I know there is no other brand as good as Marlboros. That fine filter, that flavorful flavor, that pleasure, that joy, that fulfillment—are Marlboros' and Marlboros' alone. All of this was quickly apparent to young Sigafoos and he flew into a terrible rage. "As good as Marlboros indeed!" he shrieked, kicking his roommate furiously. "I am going right back to that mendacious Mr. Sashweight and give him a thrashing he won't soon forget!" With that he seized his lacrosse bat and rushed out.

Mr. Sashweight heard him coming and started running. Now Mr. Sashweight, before he became a disreputable vendor, had taken numerous prizes as a cross-country runner, and he thought he would soon outdistance young Sigafoos. But he reckoned without Sigafoos' stick-to-itiveness. At last report the two of them had passed Cleveland. When they reach the Atlantic Seaboard, had Mr. Sashweight will get his lumps from Sigafoos, you may be sure, and I, for one, am glad.

The third missing undergraduate, also named Sigafoos, is a Bennington sophomore named Celeste Sigafoos and, ironically, she never intended to leave college at all. She was merely going home for Christmas on the Natchez, Mobile, and Boise Railroad, and during the night, alas, her upper berth slammed shut on her. Being a Bennington girl, she naturally did not wish to make an unseemly outcry, so she just kept silent. The next morning, alas, the railroad went bankrupt, and Miss Sigafoos today is living forgotten on a siding near Valparaiso, Indiana. Fortunately she has plenty of Marlboros with her.

And how about the rest of you? Do you have plenty of Marlboros? Or if you like mildness but you don't like filters, plenty of Philip Morris? Hmm? Do you?
