ed by Dr. Harris would be a 10 to 20 per cent improvement in the effectiveness and quality of education by 1970.

If the South is to attract the best talent to its universities to implement such programs, more money must be spent in the region for faculty salaries.

Five years ago a Southern Regional Education Board survey showed that salaries in leading Southern universities were from $1,000 to $1,500 lower than those at similar institutions outside the region.

Edwards

(continued from page 1) dormitory should have a quiz file. Among other reasons for this, the most important is simply that old quizzes are available in other areas of the campus, and these areas are going to maintain their files.

Edwards added that "These facilities may be obtained when two conditions are met. When the people of North Carolina are willing to pay for the University they want, then and only then can we have enough dormitory space to allow such. But this is in the future if at all and somethings can be done now.

If the Administration would make so small a policy change as to allow the profits from vending machines to be given directly to the dormitories, the library could, in a very few years, become a reality. In addition, some of this money could be used to maintain a social program the year round, the dormitories could develop from an aggregate of people living under the same roof into a group of friends through increasing the number of shared activities.

If there was such a group feeling in dormitories, then the job of the advisors and counselors would be more facile and more effective. These advisors and counselors are especially important for freshmen and sophomores since the drop-out rate is greatest among these two classes and since the University has seen fit to only provide one faculty advisor for approximately every 180 students.

The role of the advisors and counselors in the dormitories should be expanded to include a more thorough knowledge and understanding of every individual. With increased understanding of their individual, more competent advice can be given.

Players Incorporated To Bring 'Comedy' Here

"The Players Incorporated," New York debut with a limited four week engagement in Carnegie Hall, at which time The New York Telegraph commented thusly: "The best of any small company performing the classics is 'The Players Inc.' These players give it all that can be asked."

Sponsored by the GM Concert Series, the performance will be free to all students upon presentation of ID cards. Student spouses will be admitted for fifty cents; townspeople will be charged $1.

Now in its 11th season, "The Players Inc." is made up of fifteen actors from the Speech and Drama Department of the Catholic University of America, Washington, D.C. In addition to its nationwide tours, the company has made six trips abroad on behalf of the Department of Defense.

Last year the troupe made its

Appeal For Open Trials Denied By Student Council

By BLAKE GREEN

Denying the appeal raised by Gary Greer and Troy Blanton challenging the legality and constitutionality of the current student judicial practices of not making all student trials at the university open to the public and of allowing the conviction of a student defendant by less than a unanimous vote of a student jury, Erwin Fuller, chairman of the Student Council released the following statement:

"This appeal was based upon sections of the Student Constitution of the University of North Carolina, sections of the Constitution of the State of North Carolina and Amendment VI to the Constitution of the United States.

"These constitutional provisions raised by the appellants relate to criminal prosecutions in legally constituted courts of law. As the student tribunals are not courts in a legal sense and do not concern themselves with criminal prosecutions, the ruling of the Student Council is that the aforementioned constitutional provisions are not applicable to the procedures of the student tribunals at the university.

"Dealing with no body of law in a legal system, the purpose of the student tribunals is to try alleged violators of a moral and ethical code of honor regulating the academic and social conduct of the student body, each member having pledged to accept the obligations and responsibilities incumbent upon him living under such a system, based not upon law, but upon honor.

"In the confusion of student discussion and controversy," the statement continued, "the derivation of the powers and jurisdictions of the student tribunals are often overlooked or forgotten. The fact of the matter is that our student judicial bodies are in reality committees of action established and existing at the pleasure of the faculty and the administration for the effecting of student discipline with regard to academic and conduct obligations.

"Therefore, the actions of the student tribunals do not involve criminal action, nor are persons appearing before them charged with any crime."

"Furthermore, the student judicial bodies can inflict no punishment, legally speaking, upon any student, for punishment constitutes some removal of the convicted person's life, liberty, and property in accord with due process of law.

"The most severe punitive action which can be taken by the student tribunals is the denial to a student of the privilege of membership in the University's student body; this in itself not constituting legal punishment, for no individual has vested right or freedom to be a member of the student body of the University of North Carolina.

"The Student Legislature has enacted legislation providing for restrictions upon the presence of students at tribunal sessions and providing further than less than an unanimous vote of the student presented in a case shall be sufficient considering the evidence sufficient to sustain a verdict of guilty.

"The Student Council recognizes these legislative enactments." Fuller concluded, "as a proper exercise of the Student Legislature's powers and prerogatives; and until they are amended or revoked, these enactments are to be considered by all concerned as supreme and binding."

Spring Synod Conference Set For New Hope

The Westminster Fellowship North Carolina Spring Synod Conference will be held this year, March 11-13, at Camp New Hope.

The theme for the conference is "Our Growing Campus in A Shrinking World" and the purpose is "to seek more effective ways of expressing obedience to Christ as Lord by becoming more deeply involved in His world-wide spiritual revolution."

The guest speaker for the conference will be Rev. W. Hank Crane, a missionary of the Presbyterian Church U. S. in the Belgian Congo, who is now home on furlough, spending the year visiting campus groups throughout the South.

His talks are entitled "God's World and Ours," "The Church as the Instrument of God's Purpose in His World," and "Our Response to the Fact of God's Church in the Midst of God's World."

In addition to these talks there will be small group discussions, recreation and varied other activities.

Registration for the conference begins at 4 p.m. and the conference closes with lunch at 1 p.m. Sunday. The entire cost including meals and room, is $6 per student. All Presbyterian students who are planning to attend are to give their names to Mark Wilson or Fete Austin, Presbyterian Church, Chapel Hill.

Scholarships Available In Health Field

Fifteen National Foundation Health Scholarships valued at $2,000 each or $500 per year for a four year college course are available to Tar Heel students.

Awarded on the basis of academic records, professional promise, personal qualifications and financial need, these scholarships are given to both men and women in the field of nursing, physical therapy, occupational therapy, medical social work and medicine.

College sophomores may apply for scholarships in medical social work. All college undergraduates who have been accepted for admission to an approved school of medicine in 1960 are eligible for scholarships in medicine.

"The purpose of this scholarship program," said William A. Creech, state chairman of the March of Dimes, "is to help train some of the thousands of health professionals desperately needed in hospitals, clinics and research laboratories in every city and community throughout the nation."

Interested students may obtain application blanks from the local Chapter Chairman of the National Foundation. The deadline for filing applications is April 1. Winners of these awards will be selected early this summer by a state committee of leading professionals in the health fields.
