25 UNC Delegates To Attend State Student Legislature

By SUSAN LEWIS
Twenty-five UNC students will journey to Raleigh Thursday for the annual State Student Legislature assembly.
There they will be joined by students from all colleges and universities in the state for the three-day session.
Gov. Luther Hodges and North Carolina State College Chancellor John T. Caldwell will address the group Thursday afternoon.
Charles R. Johnson of High Point College, president of the Interim Council of the Assembly, will welcome the delegates.
Harry Golden of Charlotte, noted author and editor of the Carolina Israelite, will address the group at the closing session Saturday morning.

Jim Crowover, chairman of the UNC delegation, said the Carolina group will introduce a bill entitled "Omnibus International Relations Resolution."
The first four articles of this bill state UNC's stand in support of more student exchanges, a more realistic immigration policy, a more liberal farm surplus policy and a more imaginative overall foreign policy.
Most important is the fifth article which deals with various hot-spots in the world. This calls for more diplomatic relations with Cuba, a free election in Berlin to determine reunification, free election in Algeria in due time to determine the status with France, recognition for Red China with certain qualifications and a UN mandate over southeast Africa with Belgium as the suggested holder of the mandate.

Davis Young will present the second resolution calling for more top level exchanges between the United States and the USSR.
Dave Mathews will be nominated by the UNC delegation for Speaker of the House.
Carolina delegates include the following:
Senate — Norman B. Smith (delegation floor leader), Swag Grimsley and Jim Scott (alternate);
Alternatives in the house include Mike Childs, Ron Britt, Judy Albergotti, Gary Greer, Louis May, Dave Dansby and Bill Whichard.
The State Student Legislative Assembly has been held annually since 1947, except for 1953 when the event was called off because of snow.

Campus Chest Drive Nears Final Hour

"There's still time, brother." Today marks the official end of the 1960 Campus Chest Drive, but there is still time to contribute to the annual charity drive.
Thus far, $1950 has been collected, according to Nancy Awbrey, co-chairman of the drive.
Solicitors are urged to turn in all money they have collected to Frank Bullock on the second floor of the Y building tonight between 5 and 11 o'clock.
"We want to reach our $3,000 goal by Wednesday night, so please turn in the money as quickly as possible," Miss Awbrey urged yesterday.
Jim Crawford, co-chairman, added, "Let's get Campus Chest over the hump!"

Orientation Applications Now Available
Applications for women's orientation counselors may be made this week, Mary Stewart Baker, head of the selecting and training of counselors, announced yesterday.
An explanation of the counselor's duties and contributions will be presented to women students in dorm meetings this week, she said. At the same time application blanks will be handed out to all interested students and schedules for interviews will be posted on dormitory bulletin boards.
Interviews, each lasting five minutes, will be held next week in Roland Parker II and II in Graham Memorial. Girls will be interviewed by Miss Isabell MacLeod, assistant to the Dean of Women, Barbara Faulkner, Women's coordinator of Orientation, Mary Stewart Baker and an alternating member of the orientation committee.
In addition to columns and letters submitted, a weekly inquiring photographer feature to be called "Tar Heel Town Hall" will be used on the editorial page. This would be brief student opinion on some pertinent topic, campus or otherwise, as taken at random by a reporter and a photographer.

Your Symposium

Miss Clopper, Yardley Leaders Of Symposium Publicity Committee

By MARY STEWART BAKER
Becky Clopper, recently appointed Symposium leader, now is co-chairman of the Symposium publicity committee with Jonathan Yardley. Yardley, a candidate for Daily Tar Heel editor, said he is unable to devote the amount of time he feels the work needs.
Miss Clopper, after completing this year's duties with the Yackety-Yack as managing editor, has taken up the work which Yardley has been organizing all fall, and she has introduced new projects of her own. Yardley now serves in an advisory capacity, but will become active soon in preparation for a special issue of the Daily Tar Heel to be published within the Symposium week in commemoration of the program.

A senior English major in the School of Education, Miss Clopper is from Hagerstown, Md. She transferred from Maryville College, Maryville, Tenn., last year.
Besides her work with the Yackety-Yack, Miss Clopper is president of the Splash Club, a member of the GM House Committee and secretariat of the Student Government. Last year she took part in the Sound and Fury production, "Oh Hellas."
Yardley is a junior majoring in English literature. He is from Chatham, Va. Yardley is president of German Club, former co-managing editor of the Daily Tar Heel, author of the 1958 Sound and Fury production, member of Saint Anthony Hall, and also a member of the Daily Tar Heel editorial staff.
In addition to the special edition of the Daily Tar Heel, the publicity staff has been covering all campus lectures, seminars and displays on campus which deal with the Symposium theme, "The Image of Man." (The committee is the channel through which this series of articles is being presented.

Miss Clopper is presently seeking regional and national coverage of the Symposium through such channels as The New York Times, Life, Fortune, Newsweek and Look.
The writer of these articles has been labeled "secretary," and the committee members include Rosemary Roberts, Jerry Stokes and Mariel O'Dell.

Editorial Page, Use Of World News Get Attention Of Aspiring Editors

Riner Asks Balanced Edit Page

"The Daily Tar Heel's editorial page should reflect the character of the University," Ed Riner, candidate for DTH editor, said Tuesday.
"To do this," he explained, "the editorial page must balance the light with the serious. It must inform, influence and entertain in its columns as well as in editorials."
Riner, editor of the 1959 summer school newspaper, said his editorials would deal with campus subjects first and then state, national and international subjects. This would be in keeping with his policy of making the Daily Tar Heel more campus minded.
"The honor system, the new University budget which will come up next spring and academic affairs are just a few of the important issues which I would handle as editor. Of course there are many more campus issues as well as non-issues on which the editor of the paper is obligated to comment," Riner said.
He continued by saying he would present the facts objectively in order that each student may make his own decision on matters. However, he would not neglect stating the paper's opinion on issues.
"The important thing is to present the facts along with opinion. The editor should never be dictatorial on a subject," he stated.
The editorial page should be an open forum for all students, Riner said he would encourage letters to the editor and print them whether in agreement with editorials or not. The same would be true for columnists.
"To be thought provoking, the editorial page must have editorials, columns and letters on a variety of subjects offering various opinions. In addition the page must not be used for the sole purpose of glorifying or supporting any one element on campus. The Daily Tar Heel belongs to every student, not one faction. This is why I think both serious and humorous columns should be part of the editorial page," the North Carolinian candidate said.
In addition to columns and letters submitted, a weekly inquiring photographer feature to be called "Tar Heel Town Hall" will be used on the editorial page. This would be brief student opinion on some pertinent topic, campus or otherwise, as taken at random by a reporter and a photographer.

Lyndon Johnson Boosters Organize Campus Committee

"All the way with LBJ" is the rallying call of the "Johnson for President" Committee, Paula Quick, of Pi Beta Phi and the Texas delegation to the Mock Democratic National Convention, has been named chairman of the Lyndon Johnson organization on campus.
According to Miss Quick, the students of Carolina are among the first in the nation to form a campus movement in support of the candidacy of the Senate majority leader.
Miss Quick continued, "We have been extremely gratified by the widespread support shown by Carolina students for Lyndon Johnson, evidencing their knowledge that Johnson is a man of national stature who will be able to gather votes from all sections of the country."
The campus Johnson committee has been in contact with the Senator's national headquarters in Austin, Texas. The committee yesterday received a letter of endorsement from Larry Blackmon, the executive director of the Austin Committee, which stated, "The Lyndon Johnson for President Committee is delighted to hear of your support of his candidacy. We shall give you our wholehearted support in your efforts to secure him the nomination at the Mock Democratic Convention on your campus in every way possible."

Other members of the committee are John Killian, Swag Grimsley, Jeff Lawrence and Earl Baker. The office is located in the basement of Smith Building. Anyone interested in aiding the Johnson cause, or simply finding out about it, should call Earl Baker at 8-9130.

Joachim Probst's Work To Be Exhibited Here

A painter, who has been called "possibly the greatest American painter of our time" by French art critic Andre Malraux, will have an exhibit at the Morehead Planetarium during March.
The show is being sponsored by the UNC Wesley Foundation, under the direction of the Rev. Robert Johnson.
The painter, Joachim Probst, has just completed a two-week showing in Duke University's student union. It was his first Southern showing.
A Duke University official said the Probst show was the most popular in the university's history.

The show, in the North Gallery of the Planetarium, includes paintings of Melville's "Ahab" and "Queen Quee;" "Flowers of Evil," a landscape and still life, as well as several crucifixion scenes and portraits of David.
The largest canvas (more than eight feet long) in the exhibit is the "Camaeco Christ." The painting takes on greater meaning when one learns that Probst, and this canvas after a young neighbor on his in Greenwich village was struck down and killed by an automobile. The youth's name was Camaeco.
The 47-year-old Probst was discovered some three years ago by the Collector's Gallery of New York, and is now represented in the private collections of Gov. Nesora Rockefeller, actress Fay Blegen and Sterling Holoway.
Many of his works reflect his devotion to Rembrandt — particularly his ink-washes. The New York Post has said that "Probst is his painting. He is a man facing his soul every time he approaches a canvas. When he says he is risking his life when he paints a picture you know instantly what he means . . . he is concerned with man in conflict with himself. Painting for Probst is Moby Dick."

Total Moon Eclipse To Occur Saturday Night; Visible Here

A total eclipse of the moon will occur on the night of March 12-13 and, weather permitting, will be visible to North Carolinians and people in most of North America who stay up to witness it.
The mechanics of the lunar eclipse are now being described in the current Morehead Planetarium presentation, "New Heavens," through the program closing date, Monday, March 14.
The moon will be "full," or in the opposite direction from the sun on the night of the eclipse. Only at this phase can it pass through the earth's shadow and cause a lunar eclipse, according to Planetarium Manager Anthony Jenzano.
The moon will enter the umbra, or the earth's shadow proper, at 1:38 a.m. Eastern standard time. As it approaches the edge of the umbra a darkening of its eastern side will become noticeable. The darkening will be so slight that, by comparison, the adjacent umbra will appear black.

At 2:41 a.m., Jenzano said, totality will begin and continue to 4:16. "Through a telescope, even the deepest part of the shadow will be seen to contain some light. During totality, when the moon is completely immersed, it will normally remain easily visible to the naked eye, and appear as a dull-reddish orb.
"This visibility and coloration of the moon are due to sunlight which is being refracted into the earth's shadow by the earth's atmosphere and tinged with the colors which reach the moon after the earth's selective atmospheric absorption," the Planetarium manager explained.
"By 5:18 a.m. the moon will leave the umbra and, for all practical purposes the eclipse will be ended," he concluded.
This will be the first total eclipse of the moon visible generally in the United States and Canada in over three years.

Yardley Plugs For News Ratio

"The inclusion of world news in the Daily Tar Heel is the most difficult question facing the paper right now," says Jonathan Yardley, candidate for the editorship of the student newspaper.
In a statement made yesterday, Yardley emphasized the need for a careful investigation of the problem so that a solution can be found which will be to the best interest of all students.
Yardley said that the problem of obtaining enough campus news cannot be overcome without the addition of many more writers to the current staff. "At present we have a small staff which puts in more time than any group of students should be expected to devote to any campus organization," he said.
"To ask these students to do more writing would be unfair," the candidate stated. "We must find other sources of news in order to keep the paper readable and interesting."

The two primary sources of news, other than the Daily Tar Heel newsroom, which are in use at the present are dispatches from the University News Bureau and the Associated Press wires. Of these two sources, the News Bureau gets much more attention.
Because the volume of campus stories varies from day to day, the amount of non-campus news in the paper varies also. Yardley suggested establishing a ratio, either three or four to one, between campus and world news.
"By establishing this ratio and using it daily," Yardley said, "we can avoid those days when the paper is almost entirely world news and at the same time satisfy the desires of the many students who want, a little world news."

Yardley added that this ratio could be kept constant by filling the paper with the prescribed amount of campus stories and saving any extra ones which do not have to be released immediately for the next day's paper.
"By doing this," the candidate said, "we could build up a backlog of features to be used when campus stories are scarce. This is the only way to avoid excessive concentration on world news except having the fortune to get a larger staff so that we can take some of the load off the present one."
