Political Dilemma

The dilemma of American politics and political... was graphically illustrated in the Wednesday night appearance of gubernatorial candidate Terry Sanford in Chapel Hill.

The established image of the Hon. T. Sanford — a liberal oasis in a conservative desert — was not extended during his speech. Granted we didn't attend the Carroll Hall meeting in which his remarks were given; but, we have the complete text of his speech in front of us as we write this editorial.

On education, Sanford said, "There is today no more urgent need in North Carolina than the improvement of public education, from kindergarten to graduate school. Education is the dominant issue in this campaign and will be the dominant purpose of the next administration. Our nine-point platform for education is based on quality education achieved in a long range program with the State's having the primary responsibility. It includes attracting qualified teachers, smaller classes, emphasis on basic disciplines, and improvement in education methods, techniques, and teacher training. It includes the realistic admission that more money will be needed, and it includes the promise that I have the courage to go to the General Assembly and ask for it."

Although Sanford has apparently been giving a great deal of attention to education, the statement above is a summation, not a clear program. The Raleigh Times said in its lead editorial of March 18, "North Carolina's school problems are hardly going to be solved by hazy statements and exercises in oratory, which so far, are about all the gubernatorial candidates have offered in their speech making. Education is the State's No. 1 issue. It takes a fat slice of the budget. It is high time for candidates to recognize this fact and let the people know what they intend to do about it."

On the race issue, Sanford said, "I think and I prayfully hope that we in North Carolina will use our brains instead of our mouths, and that we can handle this matter with intelligence and calmness. The more we stir it up the harder it is going to be to handle. I stand with 90% of the people of our state who approve the present North Carolina approach which is being copied by other southern states. I haven't seen any other workable plan proposed. We must not put for purely political reasons allow our State to be consumed in racial bitterness."

Perhaps the Chapel Hill Weekly summed it up in its March 17 headline which said: Sanford is Mum On Racial Issues.

It is our understanding that 90% of the Tar Heel citizens are in favor of keeping segregated schools, suppressing the Negro and in general holding a club over the head of our minorities.

And why not say something about the race issue in a campaign? Certainly the entrance of I Beverly Lake into the gubernatorial sweepstakes will make this an issue. We cannot ignore it in the hope that it will go away. We cannot treat it as if it doesn't exist. We cannot say we will not discuss sit-down strikes. The longer we refuse to face up to our responsibilities in this area, the longer the situation will remain as it is. The statements in Sanford's speech and his answers to questions don't indicate that he is any more liberal than other candidates.

And this is too bad. It is too bad for North Carolina that there is not genuine liberal in the race. It is too bad for Terry Sanford that he can't be as liberal as we believe he wants to be.

He is no more guilty of platitudinous statements than his opponents. He is no more guilty of hedging on issues. But neither is he a crusading liberal. Neither does he appear to represent a "new day" for North Carolina, but more likely, if his speech is an indication, a continuation of what we have so often had.

Should he win on May 28, as we expect he will, we hope his actions as Governor will be based on firm convictions.

It is unfortunate that North Carolina won't permit Terry Sanford to speak out as he might be inclined to do.

This is the dilemma of politics and politicians.

What About This?

- 1. The nation is at war.
2. The nation is losing the war, badly.
3. The nation must exert a vastly greater effort.
4. There is still time . . . brother.

Dear Nancy and Jim:

A recent note from Mr. Shot's indicates you are expecting to go over your goal of $300. This achievement and success is directly attributable to the administrative ability, the enthusiasm and the dedication both of you expressed during the preparation plans and actual campaign.

You will be interested to know that only once before, according to my records, was over $3000.00 able to be raised through an endeavor such as the Chest campaign. This was during the year 1947-48 when the Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C. sponsored a campaign in which World University Service was the only recipient, with the result that $4216.00 was raised. Therefore, both of you are to be highly commended for accomplishing something that has not been accomplished on your campus for the last twelve years.

It has been a pleasure to work with both of you during the past few months. I only wish as much cooperation and enthusiasm could be expressed from the other 349 campuses in the top states of the South. Many many thanks to you and Jim for a job well done. As always, if I can be of any service to you and your campus, I trust you will not hesitate to let me know.

Gentlemen:

Being a resident of Joyner Dorm, I was an eye-witness to the action that took place here, today, March 10.

National Society for Crippled Children and Adults
2023 W. Ogden Ave.
Chicago 12, Ill.

As the University officials may wonder what caused the U.N.C. students to protest to the action of the University policemen, I would like to state the following three incidents as a possible explanation of our actions:

- 1. One of the university policemen, while riding by Joyner Dormitory became infuriated when his car was hit by a snowball. He stopped his car and immediately blamed the offense on a bystander who knew nothing about it. The student, of course, protested and accompanied by several friends, was transported to the police station. After the policeman decided that nothing could be proved the boys were released. Later another police car came up and officer Beaumont got out. He was struck by a snowball after which he unholstered his revolver and entered Aycock dormitory. Prior to this, officer Beaumont had threatened to fire the dorm janitor by saying, "If you don't put down that window you may as well look for another job, because I will have you fired. The officer had said this while some dorm residents were hurling snowballs out of the third story window. Later officer Beaumont was hit and, this was when he unholstered his revolver. This incident caused much disturbance. Whether or not alterations should be made in the present setup of the university police force, remains to be seen.

These are our gripes . . .

Dear Editor,

We, the undersigned members of The Daily Tar Heel staff, wish to take this opportunity to make public our support for Ed Riner as editor of the DTH. We feel that he is by far the most capable and best qualified candidate for the editorship.

Our conclusion is based, to a large extent, upon Ed's long experience with the intricacies of newspaper work. In addition to his reporting experience, he has been actively affiliated with every phase of newspaper publication. Coupled with his demonstrated journalistic abilities, we know that he has the sincere desire to make The Daily Tar Heel a campus newspaper second to none.

I believe that the male students at CAROLINA and even some of the female students remember the attempted party raid just before Thanksgiving. This writer believes that a demonstration of this type is necessary once in a while to break the more or less boring routine of simple academic pursuit.

Well, it has been brought to my attention by certain female sources that the female students are ready and would enjoy a good, old-fashioned party raid. They want to have a good time once in a while, too.

To the CAROLINA male, let me direct this question. Who are we, mere males, to deny the females a party raid? The time is right. Let us strike now while the iron is red hot. Let nothing stand in our way. Strike now while victory is in sight. Our motto is, "WE WANT PARTIES." Live up to it men.

With hope,

The townspeople won again.

For the third time recently, fraternities have lost the tug-of-war to the townspeople. This is the tug-of-war concerning rezoning a residential area for a fraternity court.

Monday night the Chapel Hill Board of Aldermen tabled the recommendation to rezone the Cameron Avenue and Pittsboro, Rains and McAuley Streets block for fraternities and one sorority.

Several of the fraternities in frame structures are willing to move into a new court. The court was, most the last chance for some of them which have ruin looking them in the eye for one reason or another: possibility of losing lease, present house about to fall in, or present house too small and not designed for a fraternity.

But little hope is left for these fraternities which already have the money to built anew, have sketches of a new house being drawn or have painted "temporary home of" on their nameplate.

However, in tabling the Planning Board's recommendation, the aldermen remembered an old ordinance which permits three or more Greek-letter houses to build a court in an area without the area having to be rezoned. The catch here is the area is limited to three acres.

Three or more fraternities on three acres—absurd. Big and Little Fraternity courts have proven that more than just land for a house and a bit of yard is needed. A court needs three things: space for houses, space for parking and space for recreation. The University has already recognized these needs. The new dorm area has a large parking lot and several tennis courts in addition to the buildings, Fraternities and dorms have at least two things in common: they are residential units and they house energetic college students.

The energetic college students are the reason the rezoning was tabled. The townspeople in the proposed area are fighting the rezoning plan because of the noise and rowdiness of the Greeks. We admit that the president day Greeks are not the quiet ones of ancient Athens, but they do go to the market place to buy things.

The townspeople have the right to fight in that they were in the area first. They have settled in their houses and planted their gardens. They enjoy hi-fi sets in their living rooms, but they do not appreciate the Kingston Trio bursting through their bedrooms late at night.

Only one area is involved in the now dead, proposed rezoning. However, the fraternities that would like to move in that area would move from various parts of Chapel Hill. The board made its decision in considering only one part of the town. Since the board is supposed to represent all of Chapel Hill, it should consider other residential areas amovved with fraternities.

True, these other areas do not want a fraternity court, but they are not pleased with the fraternities already in their area.

Although it would bother one back in the town, the whole town probably would be happier if the aldermen rezoned the area in question in order to move or less consolidate Greek houses in one place.

Dear Editor:

We reside in Aycock Dorm. For the past several months it has been a rare occasion indeed when we have received our copy of The Daily Tar Heel. In fact, the failure of delivery has occurred so frequently that until last week we were under the impression that The Daily Tar Heel was only published four times a week as that is the number of editions that we have been receiving. We have discussed this failure of delivery among ourselves, and since we have been unable to ascertain any logical reasons for it, we have supposed that your delivery staff from time to time is unable to find Aycock Dorm.

Since you and your staff are probably so busy writing editorials on liberal lights, sit-down strikes, and "the dear ole democratic party," we don't feel that you will be able to devote the proper amount of time in seeking the solution to this problem, thus, we have taken the liberty of enclosing a 9 by 12 inch map of the campus of the University of North Carolina which shows in detail and in scale the locations of the various buildings here at the University. We have also taken the liberty of drawing one very bright red line extending from Graham Memorial which houses your offices to Aycock Dorm. You will find that a study of this map will show you that Aycock Dorm is located in the lower quad on the corner of Cameron Avenue and Raleigh Street. We sincerely hope that this map will be of great assistance to you when you undertake the problem of finding Aycock. We would also like to submit this map for your future reference in finding other campus buildings which, from time-to-time, you may have the desire to frequent. We suggest that you either post this map on a conspicuous spot on your office wall, or place it in your office file so that you will not lose it as you lost Aycock Dorm.

In conclusion, we offer this brief summary of our problem:

WHAT ABOUT THIS???

- 1. The DTH is published 6 times a week.
2. Aycock receives DTH approximately 4 times a week.
3. The DTH staff must exert a vastly greater effort.
4. There's still time . . . brother.

Mr. Davis Young, Editor
The Daily Tar Heel
University of North Carolina
Chapel Hill, North Carolina
Dear Mr. Editor,

In the last two months newspapers, throughout the south have been carrying headlines, pictures, editorials and news stories concerning the Negro sit-down strikes and protests. In our own state, Charlotte, Greensboro, Durham, and Raleigh papers - to mention the larger ones - have been flooded with the same news events. To get a bit closer home, last week the News of Orange County - a freely distributed paper-carried a rather extensive account of the sitdown strike presently occurring in Carrboro. The Daily Tar Heel also has carried several series of pictures and news articles regarding the sit-down strikes in our own locale. Undoubtedly Mr. Editor, something important is happening in the south; however the students at U.N.C. either have not been reading the papers enough to know what has been going on, or else they have read the papers and have developed the attitude of "I couldn't care less."

If this is the general attitude at Carolina, then the University has ceased to be a "market place of ideas" participated in by free thinking responsible human beings, and has become a MASS-PRODUCTION MACHINE producing super-typical anonymous molybdys. I have heard for years that Chapel Hill is the "intellectual center of the south," and that things were supposed to "happen" at the University in Chapel Hill, Carolina, it has been said, is in constant ferment with new movements being created and new and old causes being avidly fought for. However the greatest issues that I have seen in my four years here have been deferred cash, fraternity parking problems, the fortune of the '57 basketball team, a few sickly party raids, and whether or not the comics will be located on the second or third pages of the Tar Heel. Weighty issues, I don't deny, but hardly anything that would give Chapel Hill an "intellectual" reputation. In fact I do not believe that this reputation is fitting at all for the present University. Instead it would be more fitting to refer to Carolina now as "that place in the South noted for its student apathy". I feel that this is a true summary of what goes on among the students at Carolina. Nothing.

The current Negro sit-down protests is another instance where a series of events have provoked national and international interest and comments, but here at Carolina among the students of this University, geographically located right smack in the middle of the events, that great god Apathy reigns as never before. I wonder: what will it take to shake the throne of this spectre? What will it take to make this place a University again, where ideas and movements are in rich ferment? In my opinion the University of North Carolina is vitally at stake now.

For students to remain silent now in full face view of a crisis which threatens their own existence as a University community, and which questions as well their humanity, would mean that this University is but an empty shell of state owned buildings and these students have failed to be responsible persons in a world which demands responsibility if it is to continue to exist. The era of student apathy on many southern Negro campuses is over. When will it be over at Carolina?

It is my wish that Carolina students examine these rights that they claim for themselves on the basis of the fact that they are human beings—rights such as freedom, equality, pursuit of happiness and obvious others. Then I beg you to ask these simple questions: If I claim these rights due to my humanity, why can't a Negro claim the same rights because of his humanity? And then: If the Negro is doing exactly this and yet these human rights are denied him, shouldn't I take a stand in favor of the Negro being granted equal human rights?

I urge you to take such a stand. I urge you to join with other students on this campus and throughout the South in demanding that the Supreme Court decisions be enforced, in public school education, that retain a and thgator owners grant equal privileges to Negroes, and that these owners be reassured that they will not lose your patronage if they allow their establishments to become integrated.

Sincerely Yours,
Wayne Reece Smith
