The Ford Foundation's Fund for Adult Education has announced award of a grant to Dwight C. Rhyne, associate director of the Extension Division of the University of North Carolina, to study one year at the University of Chicago.

His grant is one of 40 fellowships announced for 1960-61 for adult educators, newspapermen and broadcasters.

Rhyne will "examine and analyze theories of education in recent and contemporary political thought within the context of modern theories of adult education."

His work at Chapel Hill for the past nine years has been in the field of adult education. He is in charge of certain adult training and education conferences sponsored by the University through the Extension Division.

He has aided with world politics discussion groups in various North Carolina cities, with the "World Affairs Conference" held annually at Chapel Hill. He organizes classes such as the Charlotte Center for public school teachers and the Fort Bragg Center where soldiers enroll in credit courses through the University Extension services. Rhyne also has promoted credit courses through the medium of television.

A native of Greensboro, Rhyne was graduated from UNC in 1949 and received the master's degree in political science in 1950. He has completed much work toward his Ph. D. degree and will continue his advanced studies during the year at the University of Chicago.

His work in Chicago will be for a calendar year, September 1960 through August 1961.

During World War II he was in the U. S. Army in France and North Africa.

'Classroom Must Present Threat, Vision, Dialogue' Says UNC Student In Article

By STAN FISHER

To develop "minds open, active and deep," the classroom must present "a dialogue, a threat and a vision," according to an article on education written by a Winston-Salem sophomore honors student at the University of North Carolina.

Norton F. Tennille's views on the UNC superior student program appeared as lead article in the January issue of "The Superior Student," national newsletter for the inter-university committee on the superior student.

According to Prof. George V. Taylor of the History Department, who heads the University's program, Tennille's remarks were first given in an address before UNC alumni.

His speech, said Dr. Taylor, made such an impression on the group that he was later asked to transcribe it.

"The dialogue," stated Tennille, has its beginnings in the classroom, but must permeate throughout the student's life. "It must represent an idea meeting an idea, but, more significantly, personality meeting personality. For there must begin in the classroom a relationship between members of a community, an academic community that understands itself in terms of its academic life."

"The classroom must 'threaten,' continued the Latin major. The student must be made to question not only his own values, but those of others with whom he lives. "The classroom should not breed insecurity; but the student should be thrown into a state of creative tension in which the foundations for the only valid security can be laid, that security which rests on individual thought."

Also in the classroom, said Tennille, the student must be shown a vision in which he can see each way and above all "challenging de-way of viewing man and the world around him."

The difficulty lies in transmitting these three requirements into classroom procedure. This can only be achieved through small classes, homogenous groupings, and far less the class requirements.

Without small classes, said Tennille, the chance for the dialogue is almost destroyed. Neither can classroom elaboration and interpretation of the subject be carried far unless the class represents a homogenous grouping of students in relation to their academic talent and scholastic preparation.

Small classes and homogenous groupings make possible the third requirement of effective teaching — challenging demands. With a small class, the professor can demand clarity of thought and expression in written and oral assignments. And he can set standards fair to all, that require each to work near his capacity, concluded Tennille.

He based his remarks on demands for minds "open, active and deep" made here recently by Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer of the Institute for Advanced Study, Princeton, N. J., who gave the annual Weil Lecture.

In Winston-Salem Tennille attended R. J. Reynolds High School where he was in the National Honor Society, vice-president of the student council, a member of the debate team, in the forensic league and Key Club. In addition, he also was on the football and tennis squads. He won a state Latin scholarship and was North Carolina's "Governor" during Boys' State.

History Head Gets Highest Frat Award

Dr. Fletcher W. Green, Kenan professor and chairman of the History Department at the University of North Carolina, has been awarded the Honor Key of Pi Gamma Mu, national honorary social science fraternity.

The key is the highest honor given by the organization. The award was made on the Elon College campus, where Dr. Green delivered the annual Pi Gamma Mu lecture before Eloa's Alpha chapter of the fraternity.

In presenting the award, Dr. H. H. Cunningham, dean of the college and chairman of the Eloa history department characterized Green "as exemplifying the highest ideals of Pi Gamma Mu."

Sewell Is Against Income Tax Hikes

ASHEVILLE. (AP) — "I am against increasing income tax on individuals and businesses," Democratic Gubernatorial Candidate Malcolm B. Sewell declared in an interview here Saturday.

"Our present sales tax rate is as high as it should be," he said, commenting on taxes in general. "I believe the withholding system and our expanding economy will be adequate for our needs."

The former state attorney general provided answers to nine other questions put to him by a citizen reporter.

Asked for his views on public education in North Carolina, Sewell stated:

"Some of my views are well known and have not stemmed from any campaign for governor. When as attorney general, I was fighting for the very existence of public schools in North Carolina under state laws which were being assaulted in the federal courts, I don't recall that any other candidate was standing up to be counted."

"At a time when calm voices were needed," he continued, "their silence was deafening. Our victories in the federal courts came about, I believe, because the people of this state had the proper attitude toward law. That attitude must be maintained in the years ahead."

Other questions upon which Sewell commented related to the state board of conservation and development, small loan businesses, highway fund right to work laws, legislative reapportionment, the pupil placement and assignment law, budgetary government and community colleges.

Sewell was asked to comment on the suggestion that the job of industry hunting be taken away from the state board of conservation and development and placed in the hands of a new, separate agency to operate under the governor's direct supervision.

"I do not think a thing of this suggestion," Sewell declared. "Conservation and development, by its name, has two functions: conservation of our resources and development of North Carolina through our resources."

"This dual program," he said, must be carried out by one authority. Membership on the C&D board and its committees is scattered throughout the state. People from all sections of the state have contributed their time and efforts in improving all of North Carolina. "It is my feeling that we have

Spain's Rain In Mountains

It is not true that "the rain in Spain stays mainly in the plain."

Prof. Nicholson B. Adams in his book, "The Heritage of Spain" points out that Bernard Shaw was mistaken when he inferred in "Pygmalion" that meteorological conditions on the Iberian Peninsula are reflected in greater precipitation at lower altitudes.

"In Spain the rain falls mainly on the mountains," writes Prof. Adams, "where cultivation is difficult, and far less on the plains, where cultivation is easier."

Dr. Adams in his textbook which is heralded as authoritative by historians as well as by linguists points out the influence of climate on Spain's history. It is published by Henry Holt and Co. of New York.

"The hot sun of La Mancha would have been sufficient to melt Don Quixote's brains if he had had any," Prof. Adams quotes from an old Spanish saying.

The attention to intimate and incidental details in Spanish folklore and cultural and literary history, as well as to climatic and geologic status, is characteristic of the completeness of Dr. Adams' exhaustive study, and why the book has received such plaudits over the nation from specialists in Romance languages.

The book is deemed "an introduction to Spanish civilization," and is well illustrated with scenic views of Spain of ancient and modern times.

Dr. Adams' book begins with pre-Roman Spain, the coming of the Romans, later the Visigoths, the Moors, and then Christian Spain to 1252. It is written in English.

One of the main additions to the revised edition is modern Spain of today under the influence of dictatorship.

Planetarium Easter Story

With reservations for "Easter, the Awakening" totaling 7,887 as of March 31, Morehead Planetarium Manager Anthony F. Jenzano today announced that additional programs would be opened from time to time between now and Easter so that everyone who wishes to see the traditional tribute may do so.

The large number of existing reservations for the Easter story evidently is the result of inclement weather during the last month. A great number of school and church groups, which were forced to cancel during the bad weather, have rescheduled their attendance. And other are coming in.

Jenzano said the reservations "hearten us in our efforts. They likewise attest to man's religious intents—to prepare himself during this Lenten season for the celebration of the Resurrection and the event it connotes . . ."

"It has always been the Morehead Planetarium policy," said Jenzano, "to open extra programs when scheduled ones are filled. That we are determined to continue, especially for school and church groups."

Jenzano explained that it is immediately impossible to announce the exact times of the extra performances. He advised school officials, however, to ask reservations for one of the scheduled shows, and "we'll do all we can to fill your request or seat you at the next following program."

For groups of 75 or more persons, special shows will be given at any time between now and April 25.

At the present time no reservations are needed for the night programs and the Saturday and Sunday matinees. "However, if they become filled at any time," Jenzano said, "we'll certainly offer extra shows."

Columbus discovers the Winston Hemisphere

IT'S WHAT'S UP FRONT THAT COUNTS!

"Flavor, Ho!" The Admiral Shouted As He Sighted FILTER-BLEND

From the Captain's Log . . .

One Day Out. Weighed anchor and set sail in search of a filter cigarette that really tastes like a cigarette. Crew thinks this is wild goose chase.

One Week Out. Have sighted many filter cigarettes and smoked same. Crew still thinks the world is flat.

One Month Out. Discovered New World of smoking pleasure:

Winston! It is the only cigarette with a modern filter plus Filter-Blend—rich, golden tobaccos not only specially selected, but also specially processed for filter smoking. Crew now thinks this is a pleasure cruise.

One Year Out. Crew has mutinied. Refuses to go back to the Old World (non-Winston Hemisphere). I agree. Therefore I am founding a colony called Filter-Blend. Colony's motto will be:

Winston tastes good . . . like a cigarette should!
